WE acknowledge the receipt of a basket splendid pears from Mr. WILLIAM Ford, whose orchard and varieties are well known to the most of our readers.

THE REV. JOHN BACCHUS, assistant pastor of the Church of the Reformation, Gates Avenue, Brooklyn, conducted the services and preached in St. Paul's Church, Chester ... on Sunday morning last. Mr. Bac... a native of our county, the son of Mr. ... Bacchus of this town. He was only ...ted to Deacon's orders in June last, but already gives promise of eminence. He has received an invitation as assistant at Christ Church, Brooklyn, which position—a very flattering one for a young minister—he will probably accept.

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY.—We learn that the farmers of Kennedyville and vicinity, will hold a meeting on Saturday evening for the purpose of organizing a "Grange" if the majority of those attending the meeting think best so to do. They have written for and expect, one of the Deputy's of the National Grange to be present and address the persons assembled on that occasion. The general public are invited to attend and lend their presence and influence to the movement.

KENT COUNTY AGRICULTURAL FAIR.—Tuesday next the Kent County Fair will commence at Worton Station on the Kent county railroad. The fair promises to be very attractive in all its departments.

The trials of "Roan Chief" Colts will take place at the fair grounds on Oct. 1st. Premium—a silver pitcher, valued at $100. Entrance ten per cent. Five or more to enter, two to start; to be governed by the society rules.

The Sweepstakes, Oct. 2, for horses that trot nearest three minutes. Three trials, $30 to the first, $15 to the second, and $5 to the third.

☞ Something over a week since a stranger, a man evidently about sixty years of age, very erect, with beard almost white, appeared in our midst for a few days, accompanied by a lady apparently his wife. The gentleman was evidently examining with some interest various portions of our town, and we have since learned that he was Titien R. Peale, a son of Charles Wilson Peale and brother of Rembrandt Peale. It may not be known to all of our readers that Charles Wilson Peale was born in Chestertown, in the large frame dwelling house near the foundry on Princess street. We find the following in the American Cyclopædia:

Charles Wilson Peale, an American painter, born in Chestertown, Md., April 16, 1741, died in Philadelphia in 1827. He was originally by trade a saddler, but at various times of his life followed the occupations of harness maker, watch and clock maker, silver smith, painter in oils, crayon, and miniature, modeller, preserver of animals, dentist, public lecturer, &c. Painting however was his chief employment, the others being incidental to it, or assumed for temporary purposes. He received instructions in art, from a German painter named Hesselius, who had been a pupil of Sir Godfrey Kneller, and subsequently from Copley, then living in Boston. In 1770 he visited England, and for several years was a pupil of West. Returning to America he established himself first in Annapolis and afterward in Philadelphia, and for many years was almost the only portrait painter deserving the name in North America, his reputation being such that people came to him from Canada and the West Indies to be painted. During the revolutionary war he commanded a company of volunteers, with whom he participated in the battles of Trenton and Germantown; and he also painted the portraits of many officers and distinguished men, which formed the nucleus of a national portrait gallery subsequently collected by him. He also served in the Pennsylvania legislature. About 1785 he commenced the formation of a museum of natural curiosities, the idea of which had been suggested to him by the sight of some fossil bones, brought to him to be copied. In a few years his collection of pictures and other objects was removed to a large building specially prepared for their reception, which, under the name of Peale's museum, was long one of the principal attractions of Philadelphia. Subsequently, the entire skeleton of a mammoth was added to the collection, and in connection with his museum Mr. Peale lectured on natural history. He aided in founding the Pennsylvania academy of fine arts, to 17 annual exhibitions of which he was a contributor. Rembrandt, second son of the preceding, born in Bucks county, Penn., Feb. 22, 1778, died in Philadelphia, Oct. 3, 1860. At the age of 8 he was a tolerable draughtsman. In 1796 he established himself in Charleston, S. C., as a portrait painter, and between 1801 and 1804 he studied in London under West. Subsequently he passed several years in Paris, and executed portraits of eminent men for his father's museum. 1809 he returned to Philadelphia, where during the next few years he painted many portraits, and also two pictures celebrated in their time the "Roman Daughter" and the "Court of Death," the latter founded on a passage in Bishop Porteus's poem on death. This work, which was 24 feet in length by 13 in breadth, and contained 23 figures, was exhibited in the chief cities of the United States, and brought the author a large sum of money. Thenceforth until near the close of his long life, he devoted himself chiefly to portrait painting, numbering some of the most eminent men in the country among his sitters. The work in this department by which he was chiefly known was his portrait of Washington made from life studies. He published a book of European travels, and a small treatise on elementary drawing entitled "Graphics."

SCRIBNER'S FOR OCTOBER.—Dr. Blauvelt's articles on "Modern Skepticism," in Scribner's Monthly, have excited more discussion than any similar articles which have appeared for a long time. The third and concluding paper, entitled "Modern Skepticism—What our Laymen must do About It," appears in the October number. The same number has the concluding pages of Dr. Holland's "Arthur Bonnicastle," and of Bret Harte's "Episode of Fiddletown."

Dr. Holland, in "Topics of the Time," discusses "Gentlemen in Politics," "Moderate Prices," and "A New Woman's College." In the Old Cabinet are "The Stagey Person," "A Friend with a Single Fault," and "Morning, Noon and Night," and the other regular departments are interesting.

With the November number a new volume will commence. With it will begin two American serials, 'Katharine Earle,' by Miss Adeline Tafton (author of "The American Girl Abroad") and "Earthen Pitchers," by Mrs. Rebecca Harding Davis. Miss Tafton's novel is the "grand serial" of the year, and it is said to be a most striking and beautiful story. Mr. Froude's papers will also begin in November.

Dr. H. H. Mitchell had a valuable horse stolen from his farm, near Elkton, on Sunday night. The thief helped himself to the saddle and bridle and left for parts unknown.

The Democrat says:

Within the last few days there has been an unusual influx of strangers into our town. They are all young, and come from the old country where America derives the larger portion of her population. They come in vessels, yet they don't come by sea, and more remarkable still, they never saw land until they got to our shores. They all belong to that class of immigrants of whom it is written, "Blessed is he who hath his quiver full of them they shall not be ashamed of their enemies in the gates." The gates are at the east end of town.

QUEEN ANNE'S COUNTY.

John T. Hand, Esq., the editor of the Citizen, received twelve out of twenty-one delegates present at the county convention of the Radical party of Queen Anne's county, and the assurance of one absent delegate, that, had he been present, he would have voted for him, and therefore claims, with much force, to be the regular nominee of the party. Mr. Hand claims and shows by letters from the absent delegates that Mr. Tolson the delegate from Kent Island was not authorized to cast the vote of the district. Mr. Hand says he was not anxious for the nomination as he believed it to be an empty honor, but the manner of his defeat was a personal indignity. He determines to contest the matter until further action of his party.

CAROLINE COUNTY.

The Journal says:

We are creditably informed that Mrs. Mary Jones, of the 4th election district, has a cat of such strong maternal feelings having no offspring of her own, that it has robbed a hen of two different broods of chickens, and watched and cared for the little chicks with the utmost devotion The affection given by the feline mother, we learn, was duly appreciated by the little chicks, and the authority of this unnatural parent recognized and obeyed.—The success of the undertaking was very flattering to this motherly cat, as she succeeded in raising both broods, losing only four chickens. The broods were both taken from the same hen, one being a forward and the other a latter brood.

We take the following also from the Denton Journal,

The following epitaph, it is said, will some day be erected in one of the Queen Anne's cemeteries:

"Here lies old thirty-five per cent.
The more he made the more he lent;
The more he got the more he craved;
The more he made the more he shaved
Great God! can such a soul be saved?"

CARLETON'S DEFALCATION.

The only story of actual crime that has been developed by the breaking up in Wall street is the defalcation of Charles T. Carleton, Secretary of the Union Trust Company. At the examination of the affairs of the institution on Friday night, rapid and general as it was, it was discovered that at least $356,000 worth of Government securities and railroad bonds, which had been kept in a new underground safe, had disappeared, and probably as much more. Mr. Carleton had left the office late in the afternoon, and, though when he went out it was supposed he had gone to lunch, he has not yet returned. As evening approached, and the Secretary was still missing, rumors of distrust began to spread themselves among the officers and clerks. Late at night the surprising discovery was made known. Mr. Carleton has been connected with the bank for five years, and has not once until now been under suspicion. He is a son of the Rev. Dr. Carleton, formerly of the Methodist Book Concern, and it is stated that one loan of $20,000 was made to his father. Mr. Carleton lived in elegant style at No. 52 South Oxford street, Brooklyn, where a reporter found three servants who were greatly alarmed at the absence of their master and the rumors they had heard of his doings. It was learned that Mr. Carleton was last seen at home on Friday morning when he left at the usual hour for the office. As he was traced by the detectives to the New Jersey Central depot, it is believed that the defaulter first went to his father's home, in Elizabeth, N. J., but nothing further concerning his whereabouts is yet known.

Augustus Schell was asked by a reporter about Carleton's frauds.

"Regarding Mr. Carleton's defalcation, can you state the exact or estimated amount that he has taken?"

"No; but the clerks have been examining the books all day, and will undoubtedly soon find out. I do not, however, think—at least trust not—that the amount of his defalcation will exceed $500,000. The matter was a complete surprise to us, for although we were aware that Mr. Carleton did some business on his own account, and also lived handsomely, he did not, apparently, do more than could have been done with his salary; and he came to us so highly recommended five years ago, and has since served so faithfully, that we did not for an instant distrust him."

Mr. Schell further stated that he did not know where the defaulter had gone, though he believed he went to Jersey.

THE BROKEN CANAL.

THE VESSELS FLOATED OUT—THE CANAL OPEN AT BOTH ENDS.

During the closing days of last week, the water was raised to a sufficient height on the meadow at St. Georges to float all the boats lying there, and they have all been removed. With the exception of two or three vessels which were lying farthest up the ravine, all the boats in the upper meadow have been let out into the canal, and these, yesterday, were being towed down to the breach in order to get through. The canal boats which were so jammed in one of the breaches of the banks have also been removed, and even that vessel which was lying up in Mr. Newton't cornfield has been pulled down into the canal and left for other parts. The entire fleet of boats have departed, and their repairs will cause a temporary activity in the wooden shipyards.

Dredging machines have been admitted into the canal from both ends, and are vigorously working away at the removal of the sand from the bed of the canal. A very large force of laborers is at work—as large as can be worked to advantage, but the progress is not very rapid, owing to the immense amount of work to be done. Opinion is divided as to the time the canal will be reopened, some saying by October 1st and others by October 15th. From present indications the latter prediction seems to be more nearly the correct one.

The scenes of the disaster along the canal are yet places of interest for the people down the State, and yesterday many persons were to be seen along the line.

At the Railroad crossing shanties have been erected for the laborers, and the number of them is so great that it reminds one very much of a settlement on the frontier.

LOOK AT THIS.

If there is a solitary man who is indifferent as to which party is in the ascendant in Maryland, let him cast his eyes over the following figures and determine for himself whether he would prefer the State to remain in the hands of the Democrats, as it is at present, or whether he would prefer to transfer it to the keeping of the Republicans. In a number of the Southern States, where Republicanism has had control ever since the war, through the preponderance of the negro vote, taxation almost amounts to confiscation. In Alabama the taxes are $5.00 on the $100; in Mississippi $7.50; in South Carolina $8.00; in Florida $11.50; in Louisiana, in a number of instances, the property will not pay the taxes. These are grave facts, not "Copperhead lies," which demand the serious consideration of all men who would exercise the elective franchise intelligently.—Westminster Advocate.

The shoemakers belonging to the St. Crispin order, in New York City, are on a strike, to the number of 200, against a reduction of wages. They are chiefly workmen on children's and misses' shoes.

GENERAL BUTLER AND GENERAL GRANT.—According to a Worcester correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, General Butler said to a delegate just before the opening of the Convention: "I ought not to have run this year. It was bad judgment, but the zeal of mine enemy hath eaten me up." After the convention he said: "Grant dare not fight me any way. My seat is secure in Congress, and I can go back there and make a motion to cancel the back-pay measure and carry it. I never needed the back-pay, if the President did."

MRS. SURRATT.—Frederick A. Aiken, of Washington, who was one of the counsel for Mrs. Surratt in her trial by court martial, has written a letter in which he says:

"I have to say that at no time during her unlawful trial was Mrs. Surratt manacled, either on her wrists or her ankles, while in presence of the court. I not only speak from my own absolute knowledge, but from a recollection of Mrs. Surratt's oft-repeated statements to me that she was not manacled."

Whether there were any actual chains in the case or not, Mrs. Surratt's liberty and life were taken from her in the most dastardly manner.—Balt. Sun.

A CARD.

AUGUST 1st, 1873.

All indebted to Thomas H. Whaland will be good enough to settle. It would give him much pleasure to indulge for any length of time if it were possible, but he owes some money which must be paid either by collections, borrowing at a premium, or assigning paper at a discount, which he ought not to be compelled to do with the amount of money he has due, and which ought to have been collected a long time ago. His professional engagements will not allow him to make individual calls. Hoping this notice will relieve him from any more unpleasant proceedings, he remains,
