LOCAL NEWS.

Orphans' Court.

Present Judges Nicholson, Shallcross and Willson.

John N. Usilton, guardian to Frank M. Howard, returned his first and final guardian account, which was passed and ordered to be recorded.

A. M. Griffith, admr. of Caroline Frazier, returned a list of sales of the personal estate of said deceased.

H. T. Jump and James S. Harris were appointed to appraise the annual rental value of the real estate of George H. and Joseph S. Clark, minors.

B. F. H. Caulk, executor of R. A. Frazier, was authorized to rent the real estate of the deceased, on the usual share rent.

Sabbath School Picnics.

The Sabbath Schools connected with the three religious denominations in this place, held their annual picnics at the favorite resort in Baker's Woods, as follows:—The Episcopal school on Tuesday, the Methodist Protestant on Wednesday, and the Methodist Episcopal on Thursday. They were all favored with fair weather and, we learn, each of them passed off very pleasantly.

Federal Appointment.

We learn, just before going to press, that a telegraphic dispatch had been received here conveying information of the appointment of Col. Edward Wilkins, of this county, to the position of Collector of the port of Baltimore.—The office is the most prominent, lucrative, and responsible and also has more official patronage connected with it than any in the State. The Colonel will bring to the discharge of his duties not only thorough competency, but the affability which has always characterized him in the private walks of like. The salary is $7,000 per annum.

A Tribute of Respect.

Kent Lodge of Odd Fellows of Chestertown, attended in a body the funeral of Mr. John K. Willis, last Wednesday afternoon, and at the grave performed their beautiful burial ceremony. Mr. Willis was a member of Oriental Lodge, of Baltimore city

CENTENNIAL EXPOSITION.

From our Special Correspondent.

PHILADA., Aug. 7, 1876.

Mr. Editor:—The Moorish Villa, a description of which in my letter of the 29th ultimo I promised to give, is a one story yellow frame building, located on the Avenue back of the Judge's Hall, and is a counterpart of the low-crowned houses in the decaying but once flourishing city of Morocco. It is nearly if not quite square and has on each side small windows, the lattice work of which is painted in almost as many colors as there are slats or laths. This variation of tints or Motleyism, if I may be allowed to coin a word, is a marked characteristic of the taste of the Moors and indicative of their Arabic origan. Upon entering the vestibule we notice on one side a bench fastened to, or rather built in the wall, which in the opinion of these indolent people is a very necessary article of furniture to be placed in every nook and corner. It is useless to say that they are generally well cushioned and usually occupied, for the Moors carry laziness to an oriental extreme. I have seen, somewhere in my reading, that in Morocco when too men meet in the street or road they simultaneously spread their mats, light their pipes and sitting cross-legged will converse in the middle of the highway upon a matter that ought not to take them as long to consider as does the spreading of the mats; their only object in life seems to be, to exist without labor and to be able to indulge in laziness without alloy. On the other side of the vestibule is a trough for their Mahommedan ablutions. They are forever washing, but never clean; their feet, hands, heads and faces receive frequent water plunges, but their clothes are extremely dirty and always used in the place of towels. These hasty and partial baths are merely a religious custom commanded by the Koran, and the stench that comes from the filthy gowns and bodies of the faithful, testifies that they do not tarry much longer over their ablutions or perform them with more relish than many Christians do their prayers. It is said that less washing is done in Spain than in any other country in Europe, and one has only to attend a bull-fight, when all classes assemble, to be fully convinced of this assertion. It finds its cause in the fact that the Spaniards during their wars with the Moors and subsequent to the Conquest of Granada, because of the intense hatred they bore their enemies, like many other foolish people allowed their prejudice and enmity to swamp their modicum of judgment, and in order to be as far removed as possible from anything that resembled a Moorish custom, abstained from washing any more than was absolutely necessary. It strikes me that an excessive indulgence in the luxury and a thorough performance of the custom would have removed them much farther from the observance of this particular religious rite than the adoption of any other method or plan.

Leaving the vestibule we are ushered at once into reception or dining room, the ceiling of which is adorned with small square and circular tiles of many colors: the room is rather dark but not gloomy; the sun finds its way in only through the small slices called windows, but as the latter have panes of colored glass the general effect is very pleasing and the light is subdued, which latter feature is a great advantage in the dwellings of those hot, dry and dusty countries. On the left hand side is the bed chamber, concealed from view by heavy curtains and drapery; in front is the partor; and on the right is a counter where are sold all kinds of Moorish jewelry, embroidery, cologne, hats, native baskets, pipes and fancy goods. There are several attendants, and if you ask the price of an article or show any inclination to bury, there is one whose creed will make itself known by his qualifications for trade and his persistency in hanging on until he succeeds in inducing you to part with your money in exchange for his valueless trinket; he is a descendant of Abraham. The Jews are a despised and down-trodden race in all Moslem, and I am sorry to say in many Christian lands, but in Morocco they are especially disliked and in many instances suffer the grossest outrages: at night they are enclosed in a quarter of the town called "Mellah," which, interpreted, means a place of damnation, and are not allowed to come into the city proper until sunrise. They, however, completely monopolize the trade and are the only thrifty class in the country, and should they be driven out or emigrate by reason of the oppression, their loss would be irreparable. Another attendant, has nothing to say because he is unable to speak in English, is a sallow complexion individual with an immense turban, and a large, loose, yellow dirty suit. Whenever he leaves the house he throws over his dirty suit a much larger and dirtier gown, which resembles a salt bag and looks as if it had been used for carrying dusty potatoes; it has a hole in the top for his head to pop through and a hole in each side through which his hands reach the light of day. I cannot say whether he is a Christian, Jew or Moslem; but one thing is certain, if he be the latter he has forgotten his home custom of ablution, as his hands and neck on Monday last were evidently total strangers to water, and had been, to judge from appearances, for several days.

Now I am going to leave these people and take my readers through the Main Building, and tell them what I have seen worthy of observation, and which consequently has found its way into my note book.

In the United States department, which of course is larger than the department of any other nation, as it occupies 189,231 square feet of space, I saw some of the biggest things of their kind in the world, made especially for the Centennial, in order to show our foreign brethern what we can do when we try. A ream of loft dried writing paper made by the Whiting Paper Co., of Holyoke, Mass., is 18 feet in length by 6 feet in width, weighs 2000 lbs. and will make 500,000 sheets of note paper. This is the largest ream ever manufactured.

Among the exhibits of the Edgar Thompson Rail Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., is the longest steel rail in the world; it extends 120 feet and weighs 2480 lbs.: it is as straight as an arrow and apparently without a flaw or blemish.

A piece of coal from the Draper Colliery, Schuylkill county, Pa., is 14 tons, 13 cwt.; it required much skill to mine, and remove such a bulky mass without breaking.

In the annex of the Main Building, among the contributions of Ohio, are relics of the stone age, consisting of axes, pipes, hoes, pestles, hammers, spear, lance and arrow heads. Great ingenuity and skill are shown in these articles, when we take into consideration that they were made with instruments of the same material.

There is on exhibition the oldest piano in America, made in 1745 at Amsterdam by Johannes Christian Schreiber it has only 4½ octaves, and at one time belonged to the Composer Balfe. The Mexican department is the first that joins the United States on the West to the North of the Central Avenue. The exhibits consist of different kinds of wood, corn, wheat, barley, coffee, vanilla beans, segars, tobacco, silk and minerals. A very large block of Mexican Onyx, weighing 15,000 lbs., stands near the entrance. It has been purchased by a New York firm, who will use it for table tops, mantles, &c. A meteoric stone 4000 lbs. is in the middle of the floor; a visitor from another planet. A few such would make short work of a hamlet. Fortunately they do not come often; their visits are like angels few and far between. Here is on exhibition a cake of solid silver, produced from 272 tons of ore; its weight is 4002 lbs. and its value $72,000; quite a fortune.—The root of a Mahogany tree, 7 feet 3 inches in diameter, should not be forgotten. Archeologists will find several models of Aztec vases in one of the side cases to the left as they enter; very graceful in shape and original in design, giving a decided proof of the advance in civilization and art made by those historic pagan people who were so treacherously deceived by the Christian cortez and his followers, who fought and conquered under the banner of the Cross. The "Court" of the Netherlands joins Mexico. The exhibits are very prettily arranged, and consists of natural products, manufacturers, and works of skill and art; but the most important and interesting are the maps and models showing the manner of constructing bridges, dikes and canal locks in the only country that "draws twenty feet of water." Of course it is known that Holland is below the level of the sea and that the entire country would be inundated if it were not for the immense dikes that keep the ocean back. A few years ago it was said and feared that the water was gaining slowly, and that it was only a question of time as to the entire disappearance of the low-lands, but the improvement have been so many and the constructions so vast, that nature will have to struggle long before she will be able to defeat the ingenuity and skill of man. At the start it was a sort of a handicap race between the water and the dikes, with the advantage in favor of the former; but the latter were supported by the labor and mind of man, and the result could easily have been predicted. The thrifty, cleanly cities of the Dutch, Amsterdam, "The Venice of the North;" Rotterdam, the Hague, and Delft, are all well represented, and their spaces are crowded with exhibits. Joining the Netherlands is Brazil, but as I want to give a fuller account of that country than this letter will allow, I shall close here with the promise of a description in my next of Bazil's Feat hers, Flowers and Flies. F. W. C.

THE EFFECT OF THE IMPEACHMENT VOTE.

The New York Times, the leading republican organ in the country, in discussing the probable consequences of the vote acquitting General Belknap, says:

"As all the Senators voting for acquittal were republicans except one, and as all but one of these republicans voted on professed grounds purely technical, it may be as well to point out that, whether they meant it or not, they have put a formidable weapon in the hands of their opponents. The democrats will assert that Belknap was proved guilty, and no one can deny it; that he escaped punishment by a technicality through republican votes, and this is true; that a republican President added to if he did not furnish this opportunity of escape by accepting his resignation, and no one can contradict it. Against all of which we can only offer the imposing spectacle of twenty-four republican Senators standing by their consciences, in despite of what might happen to their party or their country. If any one has the audacity to object that in the case of some of the Senators their conscience is not of so conspicuously just and highly trained a sort that the country can rely on it as implicitly as the Senators themselves claim to have done, we shall be sorry, but we cannot much blame the objector."

BELKNAP AND BABCOCK.

Some of the republican journals evince uneasiness concerning the fact that, while the acquitted Belknap retires permanently into the friendly obscurity of private life, the acquitted Babcock remains in office, being still superintendent of public buildings at the national capital, and retaining his commission and pay as an officer of the national army. The Boston Traveler ironically remarks that the President is "not in the habit of casting off his friends on slight pretexts." The Cincinnati Gazette is outspoken, and says that "of all the villainy revealed by these prosecutions that of Babcock is incomparably the deepest." "Not to mince matters," says the Indianapolis Journal, "Gen'l. Babcock now appears clearly to have been the head and front of an organized ring, several of whom have been trusted friends of the President, and who made use of their position to deceive, confuse and mislead him. Babcock was the Mephistopheles of this ring." But the republican press may take it out in wondering and expostulating. Babcock still lives.

COLOSSAL STATUE OF WASHINGTON.—The most important event occurring during the past week in the art department of the centennial exhibition was the arrival of the colossal statue of Washington. After a passage of 110 days from Leghorn the vessel containing it succeeded in landing it uninjured at Philadelphia. The site selected for the statue is between the Main Building and Machinery Hall. The pedestal is being placed in position, and when the figure is upon it the height will be thirty feet, as the statue is cut from a single block of marble and is twelve feet in height.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Among the great discoveries of modern science, few are of more real value to mankind than this effectual remedy for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs. A vast trial of its virtues, throughout this and other countries, has shown that it does surely and effectually control them. The testimony of our best citizens, of all classes, establishes the fact, that CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organs yield to its power; and cases of Consumption, cured by this preparation, are publicly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy it is adequate, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence; and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of Childhood, CHERRY PECTORAL is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centred on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No one will suffer troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured.

Originally the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, no cost or toil is spared in making every bottle in the utmost possible perfection. It may be confidently relied upon as possessing all the virtues it has ever exhibited, and capable of producing cures as memorable as the greatest it has ever effected.
