Read it to him & ad his Deponent read it, he ordered him to put out severall things & gave his reasond why; & this deponent finding it would be full of blots, asked him if he should draw another Will, which he desired, then this deponent drew the within written will & read the same distinctly to him the Jonathan liked it well, & this deponent asked him if he had any thing more to put in the within written Will, he answered nothing but some all legacies, this deponent asked him what they were, & he said he could doe no more untill he had slept, & this deponent ad the said Jonathan awaked severall times, being urgent upon him to finish the Within written Will his answer ad still he must sleepe, & soe continued with that Answer untill he died. And this deponent further saith that he verily believed, at the time of the drawing & reading of the within written Will the said Jonathan wad of a sound disposing minde, because he gave this deponent good Reasond why he would leave out some legacies in his former Will.
