Where animals are allowed to feed in grass lots until the whole is gnawed closely, no hay can be depended on the succeeding season, unless a liberal top dressing of some sort of fertilizer is applied.

The pulse of a healthy horse beats from thirty-seven to forty times per minute; that of a sheep, seventy to eighty; that of a cow, from thirty to forty, but during rumination it may count over seventy and be consistent with health.

Pear blight has in several instances been arrested in affected trees by syringing them with a solution of potash, and it has proved a preventive when applied to the healthly trees.

Guinea fowls will keep all bugs and insects of every description off garden vines. They will not scratch like other fowls or harm the most delicate plants.

To cure galls on the shoulders of horses: At morning, noon and night wash the shoulders well with water and apply thoroughly with a feather six drachms of iodine dissolved in a half pint of alcohol.

A good way to keep hens free from lice while setting is to put two or three tobacco leaves in their nests, which will drive out the vermin if infested with them. Another is to sprinkle sulphur through their feathers or in their nests.

A slow milker makes a cow impatient, which causes her to hold up her milk. The strippings are the richest part, and if the cow is milked quietly as well as quickly there will be more as well as better milk.

Plant tanzy at the roots of your plum trees, or hang branches of the plant on the limbs of trees, and you will not be annoyed with curculio. An old and successful fruit-grower furnishes the above, and says it is the most successful curculio preventive he has ever tried.

A good way to get rid of rats is to put pounded potash in their holes. The potash gets into their coats and irritates their skin, and the rats desert the place. To prevent their dying in their holes and becoming offensive, poison them by mixing half a pound of barytes with a quarter of a pound of lard. It produces great thirst, the rats leave their holes to drink and are unable to return.

Roup in poultry is only a fatal disease when, like many others, it is neglected till past all remedy. If, when first attacked, a mixture of cayenne pepper and lard, about the size of a bean, be given to the fowl about twice a day, a cure will be effected in a few days. We keep from fifty to a hundred fowls and have never lost any by this disease, but have effected a cure in large numbers by the mixture described.

A correspondent suggests the following simple cure, which he has tried and found effective in kicking cows: "Take a common surcingle and tie plenty of knots in it until it is of the right length; buckle it around the cow, very tight, just forward of the hip joints and bag. Now milk, and she won't lift a foot. In two or three days ease up a hold or so, treat her gently, and in a short time simply laying the strap across her back will do as well."

Granular Butter.—To those who have inquired in reference to the production of butter in the granular form, described in an article in April last, we would say that the peculiar condition is not due to the kind of churn that may be used.—Just as good granular butter may be produced in the "Blanchard," or any other churn with a revolving dasher, as in any form of oscillating churn, it all depends upon stopping at just the right time, and that is, when the granules have formed, and before they have compacted into a uniform mass, as they will, if the motion of the churn be continued. —American Agriculturist.

Liquid Manure.—The amount of fertilizing material in the urine of animals equals that contained in the solid excrement, but is in a form that may be very readily lost. The Urea is the ingredient of chief value—a quite complex nitrogenous substance which is easily decomposed into Carbonate of Ammonia, and then escapes into the atmosphere. Whenever there is a pungent odor of ammonia from a manure heap, or tank in which liquid manure is stored, there is a loss of valuable manure taking place, and it should be arrested by using some absorbent as plaster, muck, or any litter. —American Agriculturist.

Wash-leather gloves should be washed in clean suds, scarcely warm.

Tortoise shell and horn combs last much longer for having oil rubbed into them once in a while.

Silk pocket handkerchiefs and deep-blue factory cotton will not fade if dipped in salt and water while new.

When ivory-handled knives turn yellow, rub them with nice sand paper or emery; it will take off all the spots and restore their whiteness.

Do not sweep carpets any oftener than is absolutely necessary. After dinner sweep the crumbs into a dust pan with your hearth brush; and, if you have been sewing pick up the shreds by hand. A carpet can be kept very neat in this way; and a broom wears it very much.

Chew Your Food.—All food should be chewed finely before being swallowed. Nearly all diseases may be traced to a disordered stomach. The food is but partially masticated when sent to the stomach, hence the digestive organs are burdened with more work than they can possibly do. The result is dyspepsia, indigestion and all the evils which follow in their wake. A leading physician in treating his patients urges upon them, one and all, the necessity of reducing food to the consistency of milk before swallowing. He has always enforced the rule in his own family, and the result is that sickness is unknown in his household. It is a simple rule, and one which all can follow.

THE COMMENCEMENT ORATION AT MACASSAR FEMALE COLLEGE, AND THE VALEDICTORIAN.

[From the New York Sunday World.]

I.

It was an institution for
  Disseminating knowledge
And to the world without known as Macassar Female College.
It was the time of year at which
  The earth begins to grin—
"Smile" would not rhyme—when, in old phrase,
  "Somer is y-comen in;"
When sweet girl-graduates with their gold
  And other shades of hair
Thinking of near Commencement Day
  Perpetually were;
How they should the Class-Song sing,
  How plant the lithe Class-Tree,
How the Class Sibyl should unfold
  Her weird Class-Prophecy;
The dresses they should wear—the tulle,
  Muslin or white "pekay,"
The parents—et al.,—who'd be there
  Upon Commencement Day;
So wrapt were they in thinking of
  That festival in June,
From 'tween their lips of coral oft
  Would fall the gum unchewn!

II.

But of the graduating class
  Was ne'er a sweet g. g.
But somewhat nervous felt about
  Her valedictory.
"Others," quoth each, "are cleverer
  Than I" (she said "than me").
There was a bright young journalist
  In an adjacent city
Who was not nearly so well off
  In this world's goods as witty,
"The time has come," thought he, "when schools
  And colleges adjourn;
Therewith an opportunity
  An honest dime to turn.
In many colleges must be
  A graduate or so
Who fain would valedictorize
  Better than he doth know.
I will write an advertisement
  Offering therein to pen
Essays and valedictories
  From five dollars up to ten,
On any subject that may be,
  For young women and young men."

III.

The sweet girl-graduate who should
  The valedictory say,
More nervous grew as nearer drew
  The dread Commencement Day;
Not but she had her blue silk sash,
  Thereto her white "pekay;"
Not but her golden hair'd be dressed
  In a becoming way;
Not but the florist would contrive
  An exquisite "bokay"—
For never a cause like this it was
  She curdled her milky brow,
And bit and chewed her gum as doth
  Her cud the patient cow.
(When I make this comparison
  Naught to the lady's hurt is meant.)
But at last she in the paper spied
  The journalist's advertisement,
And straightway from her heart she felt
  Removed all care and pain,
As if a stay-lace, drawn too tight,
  Had parted swift in twain;
And she despatched, long ere the sun
  The western hills had kissed,
A note and a ten dollar bill
  To that young journalist.
And the man in the village "which was P. M.,"
  He marvelled much to see
Letters mailed each day to that address
  By one, and two, and three,
And said unto himself, "I vum
  That youth doth mash en masse,
He hath fascinated to a girl
  The whole graduating class."

IV.

At last Commencement Day hath come,
  And now the sweet g. g.
Sweeps to the platform's front to read
  Her valedictory.
In sixty-seven buttoned kids,
  The sweetest white "pekay,"—
She 'gins to read her touching screed
  "The Dark Before The Day,"
While the other sweet g. g.'s, arranged
  In semi-circle due,
Sit with neat rolls of manuscript
  Fastened with pink or blue,
Essays upon "The Sweets of Hope,"
  Upon "My Childhood's Home,"
Upon "The Beauty of Repose,"
  "Thoughts by the Sad Sea Foam,"
"An Hour of Twilight Musings," or
  "The Woof of Memory,"
And kindred subjects that befit
  The valedictory.
And all the other sweet g. g.'s
  Smile cheerfully and hope
That she may swallow her front teeth
  Or a key-stone hair-pin drop.

V.

She had not read a line, a line,
  A line, but barely three,
When at her glared like a basilisk
  Each other sweet g. g.
And when she had read three more lines
  Their breaths they all drew in,
And each did gaze at each in amaze
  As if they'd sleeping bin.
And when she had read three more lines
  Up a sweet g. g. did spring
And cried, "Oh, Mamie Wintergreen,
  You real mean, hateful thing,
How dared you pilfer word for word
  My valedictory?
Letter and syllable are alike
  As my 'Woof of Memory.'"
"Oh, Mollie Maybanks, when you die
  Where do you expect to go?"
Shrieked out another sweet g. g.,
  Her dusky cheek aglow;
"The lines that Mamie just has read
  Are word and letter those
Which I wrote in my essay on
  'The Beauty of Repose.'"
"Oh, my!" exclaimed another maid,
  "I like all your accusings;
The passage is stolen bodily
  From my 'Hour of Twilight Musings.'"

VI.

He that was neither kith nor kin
  Had seen a full fair fray
As the twenty-seven sweet g. g.'s
  Did close in the melee;
There was a patter of hair-pins and
  A ripping of white "pekay,"
Till one of the sweet g. g.'s exclaimed
  In about natural B:
"Oh girls, the man has sold us all
  The same valedictory!!"
And twenty-seven g. g.'s sank down
  With twenty-seven squeals,
In strong hysterics, drumming with
  Twenty-seven pairs of h eels. * * *

VII.

The practices I don't defend
  Of that young journalist,
But one great truth it cannot be
  Denied the scoundrel wist:
There's a class of valedictories
  Where, whatever is the name,
The matter will be found to be
  Invariably the same!

"Don't you dare to kiss me once,"
  She cried with blazing eyes
At John who felt himself collapsed
  To half his usual size,
"I won't," he says, "please pardon me,
  And I will be so nice"—
She smiled, and said, "Dear John, I didn't Say you shouldn't kiss me twice."

Manufactured by B. C. BIBB & SON, inventors and Patentees, Baltimore, Md.
Special features and recommendations of Bibb's New Baltimore Fire-Place Heater:
1st. Manufactured in Baltimore, where invented and perfected.
2d. All the inside parts can be inserted without removing heater from fire-place.
3d. The room in which it is placed will always be comfortable, as it sets well out of the fire-place, and has entire front radiation, thus giving more heat in lower room than any other.
4th. It has the celebrated Solid Side Centre Grate, by which the clinker can be removed without disturbing the fire, besides this peculiar style of grate lasts longer than any other.
5th. It is arranged to drop ashes into cellar when so desired.
6th. It makes no dust when shaking grate, thus saving furniture and carpets.
7th. It is the latest and newest style, and the only Heater that meets the wants of the public in all particulars.
Before you buy a Cook Stove, come and see the "New Regulator," a cook stove with revolving top, thus saving the lifting of pots and kettles when you wish to change their position on the stove.
Other styles of First-Class Cook Stoves and Ranges, constantly on hand.
Those in want of a first-class Parlor or Dining room stove, should not buy until they have seen the HEXIGON, a new stove, of new style, with all the improvements of grate and draught.
