National Democratic Ticket.

FOR PRESIDENT:
WINFIELD S. HANCOCK
OF PENNSYLVANIA.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT:
WILLIAM H. ENGLISH
OF INDIANA.

For Congress—First District:
GEORGE W. COVINGTON,
of Worcester County.

ELECTORS:
FOR THE STATE AT LARGE:
I. NEAVITT STEELE,
J. THOMAS C. HOPKINS.

DISTRICTS:
First District—LEVIN L. WATERS.
Second " —PATRICK WALKER.
Third " —JOHN R. McNULTY.
Fourth " —WILLIAM H. WELSH.
Fifth " —R. W. W. BOWIE.
Sixth " —WILLIAM R. PRICE.

FROM all indications, we should judge that C. T. Westcott, Esq., of this town, stands as good chance as any other man, of receiving the nomination to Congress at the hands of the First District Republican convention, which meets at Ocean City to-day. Mr. Westcott is a young, energetic, and wide-awake lawyer, and will do his party credit as a nominee,—much more credit than his party will do him in bestowing upon him so empty an honor as a First District Congressional nomination.

THE following are the Democratic nominees for Congress in the various districts of Maryland, so far as they have been made: In the first district, Geo. W. Covington, of Worcester; in the second district, Dr. F. T. Shaw, of Carroll; in the third and fourth respectively, Messrs. Hoblitzell and McLane; in the fifth, Andrew G. Chapman.—The convention to make the Democratic nominee for the 6th district met in Hagerstown yesterday. This is the only district in Maryland that is in anywise doubtful for the Democracy, and there is not much doubt but that with a good candidate and undivided action, they will carry it also. The Republican nominee in that district it will be remembered is the present incumbent, Milton G. Urner.

NOW that the agricultural fair season is on, our country exchanges are beginning to blow about wonderful vegetable productions. Some of the yarns they tell are pretty tough. For instance,—the Centreville papers state that Mr. S. T. Davis of that town has a tomato vine twelve feet high from which he has already sold $2.30 worth of tomatoes, and there is yet a bushel left on the vine. This will do pretty well. Now for the next: The Denton Journal states that Mr. Luther Gadd of Denton, has a vine in his garden that grows a bean four feet long with an average of three inches in diameter, which it will be observed is equivalent to about nine inches in circumference. These yarns to be sure look a little skinny but here's another: The Greensboro Free Press says that a Greensboro man saw a sweet potato seven feet three inches in circumference. This we presume was considerably larger than a molasses barrel and must have been pretty considerably much of a potato. The Middletown Transcript comes in last, but comes in strong. It says that Jacob Foster of Middletown claims to have a sunflower as big as a cartwheel, which he proposes to exhibit at the coming fair.

HURRAH FOR MAINE!

An Unexpected but Glorious VICTORY!

The Governor and two Congressmen certain, and may be more.

Tuesday's returns from Maine, which are further confirmed by yesterday's reports, concede the Democrats an overwhelming victory, or rather, the Republicans an overwhelming defeat. Not a dozen sane Democrats in the country expected to elect anybody on the Democratic ticket in Maine. The most the Democrats hoped and expected to do was to reduce the Republican majority. If all the Republican aspirants had have succeeded in being elected by only small majorities, the Democrats would still have hurrahed, for they would have accomplished their most sanguine expectations. As it is, Plaisted, the Democratic candidate for Governor, is elected by from 1,000 to 3,000 majority, and the Democrats get two Congressmen out of five, for certain, and there are hopes for more. The only soothing consideration that the Republican party in Maine has left, is that it will probably retain a majority in the legislature, and thus be enabled to keep Hannibal Hamlin in the U. S. Senate. The smallest Republican majority Maine has ever before given in a presidential year since 1856 is 11,000. In counting over the doubtful States, neither Republicans nor Democrats have counted Maine. For Maine to go Democratic is a good deal as though Maryland or Delaware should go Republican. It is a stunning defeat, and fills the Republicans with doubt and fear. There are other States that they have counted certain, that have all along been considered more doubtful than Maine,—among which may be named Pennsylvania, Ohio and California. Doubtless redoubled energies will be put forth in Maine to carry the November election, but it is pretty clear that they will not be able to regain lost ground, as the Democrats will not be asleep.

THE NEXT CONGRESS.

The shrewdest Republican managers are now giving more earnest attention to the Congress districts and to the Legislatures in the States that are to choose Senators, than they are giving to the Presidential contest. Some of the more candid admit that Hancock's election is a foregone conclusion, and others would be quite willing to see Garfield defeated, and even to bargain for that result by a trade of votes if either the Senate or the House of Representatives could thus be gained.

A President without a Congress to support his general policy is incapable of effecting any important results in administration. Harmony between the executive and the legislative branches is of the utmost consequence when measures of reform are intended. The Democrats are pledged to retrenchment of the public expenditures, and to purge the existing abuses in the departments. The Executive, if properly equipped for the service, and desirous of reforming evils that have become chronic, can do much by a thorough investigation. But after this part of the work shall have been done, he will need the cooperation of an efficient Congress to legislate the old and corrupt system out of existence.

So far as the Senate is concerned, if the Republicans were lucky enough to secure all the coming vacancies in California, Connecticut, Indiana, New Jersey, New York, and Pennsylvania, they would still be in a minority after the 4th of March, 1881. But there is no such probability. If Indiana should fulfill the present expectation on the 12th of October, four of these States, and perhaps five will be apt to reture Democratic Senators.

In the last ten days the current in Indiana has set strongly for the Democrats, and it is gaining force and volume at the latest accounts. A very careful canvass has been made, extending to every precinct in the State, the result of which is to strengthen confidence and to give assurance of success. That confidence in itself is a tower of strength since it is not founded on speculative figures, nor on hopeful estimates.

The majority in the next House of Representatives will be determined in numbers by the action of the Nationals. Independently, they will be able to elect but very few members, but they held at the last Congressional elections the balance of power in one-fourth of the districts. The attempt of Mr. Weaver, their peripatetic candidate for President, to maintain a separate organination, must result in utter failure. Practical people are not inclined to throw away their votes at the Presidential election.

Any impulse given by Indiana favorable to Hancock would be felt in a like degree by the Congressional tickets, nearly all of which are voted on the same day with the electors. The uncertain voters who float from side to side have a keen instinct for the majority. They aggregate many tens of thousands, and will materially swell the popular vote for Hancock, and help to elect many members of Congress.

The present outlook justifies the belief that the Democrats will maintain their ascendancy in the House of Representatives, and that Gen. Hancock will be inaugurated with a Democratic Congress to carry out his great measures of retrenchment and reform.—N. Y. Sun.

PRESIDENT HAYES.

The validity of Mr. Hayes' title may always be questioned, and his administration criticised, but the payment of one dollar gives a valid title to one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and its administration can never be criticised in cases of coughs, colds, incipient consumption, and general debility, for leading physicians of all schools endorse the Discovery and prescribe it in their practice. Sold by druggists.

THE St. Michaels Comet has clipped the opinion of the Peninsula press with regard to the nomination of Covington. The Comet does not reproduce its own opinion, and we have lost its back issue, so that we are compelled also to leave it out; we give below the comments as condensed by the Comet:

W. W. Busteed, in the Centreville Observer.—"While we are disappointed and our people are disappointed at the failure to secure at the hands of our friends the nomination of John B. Brown, Esq., for congress, yet it is a consolation to know that the convention has given us a man very much like him. Mr. Covington's style of life and his general character are very much like Mr. Brown's. He is a quiet, polished, domestic man. Our delegation pledged us for 700 majority, and we must carry out the promise."

The Greensborough Free Press publishes the proceedings of the convention, but does not comment. It is a Christian duty to comment, and the Comet insists that the Free Press shall comment.

Federalsburg Courier.—"He was a member of the constitutional convention of 1867 and since then he has not been a candidate for any office.

Col. L. Malone in the Salisbury Advertiser.—"Covington is a fair speaker, a man of fine personal appearance, of excellent manners and commanding presence. He has always maintained a life of spotless integrity of character, is unassailable and incorruptible. A man of ample fortune, he will not be subject to temptation to do evil."

Kent News.—"Mr. Covington was married in 1865 and has three children."

Caroline Democrat.—"Caroline has a warm spot in her heart for Wicomico."

Thos. K. Robson, in the Easton Star.—"It strengthens our editorial arm to know that we have in Mr. Covington a candidate worthy of our best exertions; that nothing we may say in eulogy of him will be undeserved. He stands the peer of any man in the district, and with him in congress the interests of the commonwealth will be safe. We are satisfied that the first district has never given a larger majority since negro suffrage has been established than it will roll up in November for Hancock, English and Covington. Talbot must give the ticket at least three hundred majority."

H. W. Straughn in the Cambridge Era.—"A victory for the Ring."

Newtown Record.—"It was meet that Worcester, the banner Democrat county of the district, should have been honored, and we are very sure that Mr. Covington will worthily represent the whole people, and that Worcester will roll up a glorious majority for Hancock, English and Covington."

The Crisfield Leader, of Saturday last, had not heard of the nomination of Covington, and still thought Col. Henry Page would get nominated.

Cecil Democrat.—"Popular in the lower portion of the State."

Littleton Dennis, in the Snow Hill Messenger.—"Throughout the convention the best feeling prevailed, and though some of the counties, principally Caroline and Wicomico, were badly disappointed, there is not the least doubt but that the First Congressional District will present a solid front in support of Hancock, English and Covington on the day of election."

Julius A. Johnson, in the Easton Ledger.—"The sentiment drifted towards Mr. Covington and he was finally elected. Worcester gives a large democratic majority, and is entitled to recognition, and Mr. Covington is a very popular man being highly spoken of by all who know him. His nomination will give strength to the ticket in his district."

Salisbury Times.—"The democratic convention met, named a candidate, got drunk, and adjourned."

Smyrna Times.—"Mr. Covington is an energetic business lawyer, is thoroughly identified with Eastern Shore interests, and has always been active in the cause of public education."

"Chestertown Transcript.—"A man of good ability and of unimpeachable character."

Clement Sulivane, in the Cambridge Chronicle.—"The nomination appears to give general satisfaction on the Shore, and will undoubtedly be supported throughout the district. Let us democrats of Dorchester get to work and roll up 300 majority for Hancock and Covington."

W. Scott Roberts, in the Centreville Record.—"It has been the lot of the editor of this journal to be associated with many citizens of Mr. Covington's home, and native county for the past three years, and we have yet to hear the first unkind word spoken of him. He is loved and trusted by his fellow citizens as our own county man (John B. Brown, Esq.,) is by the people of his home and native county. Like Mr. Brown, also, he has shunned rather than sought political honors, as a sketch of his life, elsewhere published, will bear testimony. The effort on the part of the opposition to detract from his strength in localities where he is not known, except by name, upon the unfair and false assertion that he is the nominee and standard bearer of a faction of the Democratic party, headed by Jesse K. Hines, Esq., is mere moonshine and scarcely worth the trouble of denying. Mr. Hines would, we are free and frank to say, have given the support of Kent to Mr. Brown at any moment he saw the shadow of a chance of nominating him. Would this fact have made Mr. Brown a factional nominee; Mr. Hines is an important factor in the Democratic party and but few of his political friends in this and Kent counties were ever known to bolt their nominations—and Mr. Hines himself never. This is not the stuff that goes to make up factions. So much for that objection."

ANDREW G. CURTIN, the "War Governor" of Pennsylvania, says that "no man who knows General Hancock doubts his abilities for civil management. If elected he will make one of the best Presidents the country has ever had. His administration will be characterized by the same strength of Jackson's, without the objectionable violence; besides, he will give us a clean administration of the Government."

The Republican delegates from Dorchester county to the Ocean City convention are Col. Wallace, A. Higgins, William E. Harper, and Eli Alphus. The delegation is understood to be solid for C. T. Westcott, Esq.

After many years, Shell Town, a little village situated on the Pocomoke near its mouth, has a first-class sensation. A well-to-do farmer, a family man, well along in years, a class-leader, and hitherto much respected, has gone off with a young girl residing in that neighborhood.

Messrs. William P. Wright, John Woodall and James W. Shaw are the delegates from Talbot county to the Ocean City convention, which meets on the 16th inst. The delegation is understood to favor the nomination of Col. James Wallace though it has no special instructions.

General Forbert, of Milford, Del., was on the steamer Vera Cruz that went to pieces off the Florida coast recently. His body was burried in a barrel along the beach, but has since been dug up, and is now on its way to his home in Milford.

A FARMER'S CREED.—According to the Canada Farmer, the agriculturists of Canada met in convention not long since and adopted a creed which seems to embody the essence of good farming, the substance of that noblest of all economies, which makes two blades of corn or grass grow where only one was formerly produced. This creed professes absolute, unconditional faith in small farms and thorough cultivation. It holds that the soil lives to eat as well as its owner, and that the value of holding may be increased as much by going deep into the ground as by extending its superficial area. It believes in those sorts of large crops which leave the land better than they found it, thus enriching the farmer and the soil at once.—"We believe," says this terse and epigrammatic creed, every word of which is at once a text and a lesson, "we believe that every farm should own a good farmer: we believe that the fertilizer of any soil is a spirit of industry, enterprise and intelligence; we believe in good fences, good farm-houses, good orchards, and good children enough to gather the fruit; we believe in a clean kitchen and a neat wife in it, a clean cupboard, a clean dairy and a clear conscience; we believe that to ask a man's advice is not stooping, but of much benefit," and so this excellent creed flows on, impact with proverbial wisdom. "Every farm should own a good farmer"—that sentence should be engraved in gold over the entrance gate of all agricultural fair grounds, it should be the motto for every farmer's paper. For the farmer to own a good farm, or a farm having good land, is nothing in comparison to the land owning a good farmer. For the land produces nothing except under the farmer's hand, and if that hand be deft, skillful and untiring, it is able to transmute the wilderness into a rose garden of Shiraz; to convert the alkali deserts of Utah into the fertile flax fields of Salt Lake City. This maxim is the assertion and the proof of man's supremacy over nature. It is the evidence that the farm is as the farmer's hand makes it, and that skill and industry combined control the resources of the land and fountains of wealth, irrespective of the accidents of soil. We will hear no more of worn-out lands and exhausted "old fields" in Maryland when every farm owns a good farmer.

WE cannot understand how it is Republicans who will not countenence Smiler Colfax, can support and throw up their caps for De Golyer Garfield, against whom there have really been far more damning charges made than have ever been made against poor Colfax. A few weeks since Calfax happened to sit on a platform with Garfield at a Young Men's Christian Association meeting, but the reporter for the Associated Press was careful to say that Colfax did not belong to Garfield's party. This, too, after Colfax has endorsed Garfield by declaring that he was an honest man!—The People.

THE Republican party is unquestionably a decided minority of the people held together by the cohesive power of public plunder and ruling a majority, whose union will end its reign and greatly enlarge the country's chances of a better future. It will also end those appeals to the passions which have incalculably injured the interests of both colored and white people of the South, and been the means of whipping into and keeping in its ranks timid and careful souls of the North and West by bugbear cries to the great danger of the interests of the whole country.—Gen. W. S. Rosecrans.

Among the many Heidelberg traditions of duelling is the following: Two students fought, and each sliced off the other's nose. The noses fell to the ground, and, being picked up by the seconds, were plastered again on the faces of the duellists. The operation succeeded, but in the hurry the noses had been changed. The aquiline man henceforward had a snub, and the snub man had an aquiline.

Among the fish of the United States, the cod comes first in money value, the salmon second, the mackerel third, and then the menhaden. In weight the last stands highest.

DR. TANNER'S LATEST ORDEAL—"That is what enabled him to do it."

The speaker was Mr. J. Wilson McDonald, the sculptor, and he held in one hand a plaster cast of the head of Dr. Tanner, the faster, while with the other he indicated a prominent bump which phrenologists have treated as indicative of the will power. Mr. McDonald made the cast on Saturday. Before taking an impression of the Doctor's head he told him what the operation was, and asked him if he thought he could endure it.

"Has any one ever submitted to the operation?" asked the Doctor in reply.

"Oh, yes, said the sculptor.

"All right," said the faster; "if any one else has done it I can."

Mr. McDonald and his assistant then covered the Doctor's hair and whiskers with a paste made of rice flour, which made them lie close to the skin. A collar of clay was built closely about his neck, and then the plaster was pressed all over his head, except his face. Quills were stuck into his nostrils for breathing through. Then they threw plaster in his face until it was covered an inch thick. The Doctor was obliged to wear this hamlet for an hour, awaiting the hardening of the plaster. By placing the mouth close to one of his ears and shouting it was possible to make him hear, and he responded by a motion of the hand. Once he groaned. When the cast was removed it was discovered that the assistant had used too much vigor in inserting one of the quills, and had thereby ruptured a vein.—The bleeding was not perceptible to the Doctor until after the face had been covered, and then it stopped the passage, reducing his breathing capacity one-half. Hence the groan.

At the expiration of an hour the plaster was cut from his head in sections.

Fashionable Fancies.

English ladies of fashion all follow the fashion set by the Princess of Wales. They encircle their throats with lace, which they fasten at the side with a slender brooch (sometimes a lizard in diamonds) and a flower. Black blonde is always worn by them with white dresses.

Some of the new colors are: Ophelia, dark heliotrope; tete de faisan, pleasant red; lapis, false blue; rouge de Venise, tawny red, and a great number of shades of green, blue and olive; while for evening wear are shades of glanceus, a bright marsh-grass green and heliotrope shades.

Dresses for the evening have often the habit jacket or princesse cuirasse bodice of foulard or satin merveilleux of a different color. One of the newest is the habit incroyable, open-square at the neck, with collar of batiste with frilled edging of satin, square basques at the waist and two rows of buttons, with fichu of pleated crepe lisse or muslin.

Among fall dresses recently imported is a very handsome costume of bronz green, covered with the most elaborate hand embroidery in cashmere and gilt beads. The underskirt is made with three narrow kilt pleatings. The tunic and sleeves and neck of the jersey bodice is finished with a deep border of dark green marabout feathers tipped with gold.

A very stylish street costume is made of plain black satin, with the skirt formed entirely of kilts. The close-fitting bodice is trimmed with jet and is fastened to the skirt just below the hips. Over the seam which joins the waist to the skirt is a wide sash of the satin, which is knotted loosely at the left side. The cuffs to the coat-sleeve are very deep, and the collar is of the "Roi de Rome" shape.

Across the Atlantic hoods are on everything. They made their debut on round capes, then they invaded jackets, and now they are invariably added to the costumes called after them, "costumes capucines," and without one of which no French elegante considers her wardrobe complete. English women have not taken to them. The capucines meanwhile are made in vicuna and Surah combined, in cashmere and Pekin and in white serge trimmed with braid.

Fine Cook and Heating Stoves

Is as full and complete as was ever offered in this county. Having bought from first hands, we are enabled to sell as low as any one. Our Victor Cook cannot be beaten, nor can our Parlor and Sitting-room Heaters. Fire-place Heaters, to heat two stories or more, a specialty. Bibb's New Baltimore is acknowledged to be the best Fire-place Heater ever put on the market. Having sold a few here last Fall we respectfully refer parties to them.

Our stock of Farmers' Hardware

Is full, viz: Plow Traces, (Chain and Rope) Rope Halters, Plow Bolts, Plow Castings, Plow Lines, Assorted Bolts, Forks, Shovels, Spades, Axes, Helves, Cart and Wagon Harness, Bill Hooks, Hooks for clearing Drills, Fodder Yarn, &c., &c.

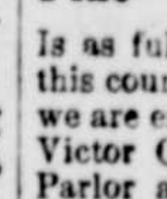

Call and examine our stock.

RAMBO LIME.

LAST year I purchased from Nathan Rambo the Blue Quarry upon the lands devised to him by his father, the elder Nathan Rambo. It was out of this Quarry that the Limestone came which gave this Lime its high reputation.

This, and this only, is the GENUINE RAMBO LIME.

I own ALL of the land on which this stone lies. This Quarry was discontinued only because a vein of earth cut off the face. I have cut through this and re-opened these Quarries upon the original stone which old Nathan Rambo quarried as long as he could find it.
WE CHALLENGE ALL TESTS.
R. McCOY & CO.

Robert McCoy bought of me my Blue Quarry—I have seen it since he re-opened it, and am satisfied that he works on the blue stone worked by my father in his lifetime.
NATHAN RAMBO.

This Lime will be shipped by railroad or water to all stations and landings in Maryland and Delaware. For Prices and Terms apply to
B. F. FLEMING, Chestertown.
