Farm and Household.

Best Time and Manner of Using Barn Yard Manure.—Mr. Webster opened the discussion of the question, as above stated. He said that coarse manure should be applied on sod, but with fine it made little difference whether applied to corn or wheat. Some years ago he top-dressed corn with good results. It pays equally as well as to put it on fields that are to be put in corn next year. Twenty years ago manure was put on oat stubble and fallow and plowed in for wheat. That practice has been abandoned, because of the tendency of the manure to sink and be lost. If applied to corn and the ground turned up the manure is made available for wheat. As for straw,—which may be regarded as manure,—when at all damaged it should be spread from the machine. Enough should be saved for bedding, but it pays better to spread the surplus.

Johns H. Jenney said his plan was to haul out manure on grass the year before it is put in corn. Then you have both sod and manure for the corn. When commercial fertilizers are used they should be put on wheat. In applying manure on grass he commences the first thing in the spring, leaving the long manure until the last. It must be a waste to put manure on frozen ground, but old farmers say differently.

James H. Ball said he had been brought up to think that manure must be plowed under as soon as spread, in order to prevent the evaporation of the ammonia. His views had changed. The right place for it is on the grass, at the time the grass is active and ready to take it up. Prefers putting it on for corn two years ahead. By producing better sod, you prepare better for corn and for the wheat which follows it. Straw can be spread to advantage from the thresher, but he was of the opinion that if the straw were used in the barn-yard as an absorbent it would make better manure. Manure loses in bulk, but not in value. It must be a loss to put it on frozen ground.

Thos. A. Hays spreads the bulk of his manure on grass land during the growing season of spring, summer and fall. Would not hesitate to spread it also in winter if the field was level and would not cut up by hauling. If the ground was frozen, would prefer it in the barn-yard. In spreading in advance for corn, he never saw any difference between one and two years. The best season to spread it is August. It is a good thing to spread straw. He would not spread coarse manure on a mowing field, but rather on a field he intended to break next spring. He would not advise holding manure to spread at any particular season, except during the winter.

A. M. Fulford prefers to spread manure on permanent pasture or to touch up the poorest spots in wheat fields. That insures in being near the surface and where there is less doubt of it soaking down below the reach of the roots. He had seen it applied in the summer time, hauled directly from the stables, with good results. He likes to treat manure in the barn-yard with plaster and by turning it over until it becomes fine. Then it will not be in the way on mowing fields. Straw produces good effects if not spread too thickly. It acts more as a mulch than from any virtue in itself. It pays better, however, to use it as bedding.

Hosea Barnes believes in putting out manure as fast as made, except when the ground is frozen. He hauls it out during winter and spring on grass, and plows it down for corn. In the fall he plows the same field deeper and thereby brings the manure near the surface for wheat. He could see no difference in the corn between the manure hauled out in winter and in spring.

Keep all tools sharp and in good order.

Allow no one to abuse your domestic animals.

Don't allow a Canada thistle to go to seed on your premises.

What is the best remedy for glanders? Killing the diseased horse.

Keep your tomatoes up from the ground, which can be done by various simple contrivances.

The flower garden now requires a little attention. The ground must be kept mellow, clean and moist.

Astor House Corn Bread.—One quart of buttermilk, two eggs, one tablespoonful of baking soda, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter; stir in meal until the mixture is about as thick as buckwheat batter. Bake in square tin pans, about an inch thick, half an hour in a hot oven.

Stuffed Beefsteak.—Cut a thick slice from the round, in shape as near an oblong square as possible; rub over salt and pepper to taste; make a filling of stale bread and fat salt pork, pepper, sage, etc.; roll it up in the steak, sew the edges of the slice together, bake in quick oven, basting often. Make a dressing of the drippings thicken with flour and season.

Spring Bean Succotash.—Take two quarts of beans, string, cut fine; boil two hours with water enough to cover without boiling dry; cut the corn from six ears and boil with beans twenty minutes; season with butter, pepper and salt; just before dishing up add a tablespoonful of flour, moistened, also half a cup of sweet milk, and let it boil ten minutes. Those who have cream can use it instead of milk.

Apple Fruit Cake.—Soak two cups dried apples over night; in the morning drain and chop fine in chopping bowl; add one cup molasses and let it boil slowly on back of stove three or four hours, until the molasses has thickened; let it cool; add one and one half cups of brown sugar, one cup butter, half cup sour milk, one tablespoonful each of cloves, allspice and cinnamon, one teaspoonful soda, three eggs, three and one half cups of flour; bake in two square tins or one large five-quart basin; if baked in the latter bake slowly two and a half hours. This cake will keep six months.

It is said that if a groove is made in a hen roost, and filled with a mixture of lard and sulphur, the fowls will not be troubled with lice.

ONLY GOING TO THE GATE.

BY ETHEL LYNN.

Like a bell of blossom ringing,
Clear and childish, shrill and sweet,
Floating to the porch's shadow,
With the fainter fall of feet,
Comes the answer softly backward,
Bidding tender watcher wait,
While the Baby Queen outruns her,
"Only going to the gate."

Thro' the moonlight, warm and scented,
Love to Beauty breathes his sigh,
Lingering, to leave reluctant,
Loth to speak the low good-by;
Then the same low echo answers,
Waiting love of older date,
And the maiden whispers backward,
"Only going to the gate."

O, these gates along our pathway,
What they bar, outside and in!
With the vague outlook beyond them,
Over ways we have not been.
How they stand before, behind us;
Toll-gates some, with price to pay;
Spring-gates some, that shut forever;
Cloud-gates some, that melt away!

Just across their slender weavings
Troth-plight happy hands have crossed;
Yet its locks have rusted ruddy,
Or its keys in night-shade lost.
Over latches softly falling,
Good-by prayers have dropped like dew;
Little gateways, softly shutting,
Yet have cut a love in two.

So we pass them going upward
On our journey, one by one,
To the distant shining wicket
Where each traveler goes alone;
Where the friends who journey with us
Strangely falter, stop and wait;
Father, mother, child or lover,
"Only going to the gate."

ABOUT LOVE.

Facts and Fancies in Regard to Cupid and His Tricks.

[Boston Transcript.]

Mr. Factandfancy has noticed:

That the boy who is most afraid of the girls is the first to be corralled in matrimony.

That the little boys prefer boys to girls.

That they soon change, never to go back to their early love.

That the little girls love the girls best.

That they don't get over their preference so soon as the boys do—some of them never.

That women love the men because they love everything that they have to take care of.

That men love women because they can't help it.

That the wife loves her husband so well that she has no thoughts for other men.

That the husband so loves his wife that he loves all women for her sake.

That the girls who have given over all hope of matrimony, or who never had any, love to flirt with married men.

That the married man is apt to think himself all killing among the fair sex simply because he has found one woman fool enough to marry him.

That homely husbands are the best. They never forget the compliment paid them by their wives in accepting them.

That homely wives are the truest. They know how to make the most of what they have. Lightning seldom strikes twice in the same place, and a homely woman feels that a similar law governs question popping.

That the man who marries late in life does well.

That the man who marries young does better.

That the man who never marries is to be pitied.

That the woman who marries does well.

That the woman who does not marry does better nine times out of ten.

That the young man who prattles about the "daisies" would turn red as a beet and tremble like an aspen if one of them should but look at him out of the corner of her eye.

That the fellow who makes the most conquests has the least time to brag.

That the man who thinks the girls are all in love with him is happy after his way.

That the man who loves all the girls is happy after the true way.

That the man who loves his wife may still love other women.

That the least he says about his love for other women the smoother will be his matrimonial career.

That old people think young lovers act like fools.

That these same old people would like to be young lovers again, even if they had to act like fools, too.

That it is a mistake to say a person "falls" in love. Love is a long step upward towards heaven. It is heaven.

That as we are commanded to love our neighbor as ourselves, we should see to it that our neighbor is a charming young woman.

That it is time to stop for fear our readers might become lovesick.

Jerusalem as a Place of Residence.

Jerusalem seems to be growing in favor as a place of residence for foreigners who find their native countries uncomfortable. The foreign Jewish population has, according to Consul Moore, increased considerably of late years. That community is now estimated at 15,000, including native Jews, against 10,000 in 1873. The right of holding real property in Turkey, conceded to foreign subjects by the protocol in 1868, probably accounts for the increased emigration. The German colony at Jerusalem now numbers nearly 400 persons; that at Jaffa about 300. There is a third German settlement at Caiffa of about equal number with the last mentioned. The settlers are mechanics, artificers, carriers and agriculturists, and are fairly prosperous.

No public works have been executed; yet a harbor at Jaffa, a good carriage road or tramway from that town to Jerusalem, and good roads all over the district are urgently needed. A railway would not, in Consul Moore's opinion, be under present conditions remunerative unless as part of a system of railways for Syria and Palestine.—St. James' Gazette.

THE highest mountain on earth, so far as known, is no longer Mount Everest in the Himalaya, measuring 29,002 feet, but Mount Hercules, in the center of New Guinea, which measures 32,768 feet. It was discovered by Captain J. A. Lawson, who mounted it to a height of 25,314 feet, when he had to return, the air being too rare.

Literary Revolution and Universal Knowledge.

An Encyclopædia in 20 Volumes, over 16,000 Pages; 10 per cent more matter than any Encyclopædia ever before published in this country, and sold, handsomely and well bound, in cloth for 10, in half morocco for $15, and printed on fine heavy paper, wide margins, bound in half Russia, gilt top, for $20—an enterprise so extraordinary that its success, beyond all precedent in book publishing, may be fairly claimed to inaugurate a Literary Revolution.

THE LIBRARY OF UNIVERSAL KNOWLEDGE is a reprint of the last (1879) Edinburgh edition of "Chamber's Encyclopædia," with about 40 per cent. of new matter added, upon topics of special interest to American readars, thus making it equal in character to any similar work, better than any other suited to the wants of the great majority of those who consult works of reference, and altogether the latest Encyclopædia in the field.

Specimen Volumes in either style will be sent for examination with privilege of return on receipt of proportionate price per volume.

Special Discounts to all early subscribers, and extra discounts to clubs. Full particulars with descriptive catalogue of many other standard works equally low in price, sent free.

Leading principles of the AMERICAN BOOK EXCHANGE:
I.—Publish only books of real value.
II.—Work upon the basis of present cost of making books, about one half what it was a few years ago.
III.—Sell to buyers direct, and save them the 50 to 60 per cent. commission commonly allowed to dealers.
IV.—The cost of books when made 10,000 at a time is but a fraction of the cost when made 500 at a time—adopt the low price and sell the large quantity.
V.—Use good type, paper, etc., do careful printing, and strong, neat binding, but avoid all "padding," fat and heavily-leaded type, spongy paper and gaudy binding, which are so commonly resorted to to make books appear large and fine, and which greatly add to their cost, but do not add to their value.
VI.—To make $1 and a friend is better than to make $5 and an enemy.

VOHELL HOUSE.

THE UNDERSIGNED takes this method of terdering his heartfelt thanks to his old friends and the public generally for the liberal support and sympathy so generously extend to him under the recent adverse circumstances by which he has been surrounded, and takes great pleasure in informing them that the house, in a few days, will be in first-class condition, the repairs and improvements thereto being made under his own supervision.

THE STABLING,

which is commodious and in excellent condition, is now under his control, and those entrusting their horses and carriages to his care may rest assured that they will be faithfully attended to by trusty and experienced hostlers.

THE TABLE,

as heretofore, will always be found supplied with substantials and delicacies of the season, and will be under the experienced management of his wife, who will see that no pains are spared to make it, in every respect, first-class.

With the xed purpose of leaving nothing undone on my part which will conduce to the comfort of my guests, I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public.

B. F. FLEMING,
DEALER IN
GRAIN, LIME, COAL, WOOD, PEACH CRATES AND BASKETS.
Schuylkill Lime a Specialty.

Mr. B. F. Fleming: I used Mogee's Schuylkill Lime on corn last spring. It slacked more to the bushel, acted quicker, and gave me the best satisfaction of any Lime I have ever used.
GEORGE H. SNITCHER.

Mr. B. F. Fleming: We have used Mogee's Lime for three successive seasons. It slacks more, contains less core, acts quicker, and we believe it is the best Lime in the market.
