Farm and Household.

FEEDING FOR EGGS.

Hens are the most valuable stock on the farm. They require little care, and yield large dividends.—The writer has kept three horses, one cow, a brood of turkeys, and about 125 hens during the present winter, and he thinks the hens have paid the whole bill, without attempting to obtain the best retail prices. The eggs were sold at wholesale—the buyer making a profit of ten cents per dozen. Perhaps I may add a word which other writers omit. First, kill in the fall nearly everything but early spring pullets; these can be made to lay all winter, The older the hen the fewer the eggs. Second, warm the food, for the first meal especially. Let there be a variety of food—buckwheat and wheat screenings are the best grains; corn and oats come next. The best animal food in my experience is a beef's head. They will consume everything except the eyes. It costs twenty-five cents and will last a week. When they have eaten the outside meat crack it open for the brains: next spilt in two and with an axe pound up a portion of the bone daily. Next stop and listen—hear them sing, and see them run for the nest. A beef's head is more profitable than lard scraps, as the latter has been pressed until the substance is near gone. Keep an iron pot near the kitchen into which order all the scraps from dining-room. This usually goes to the pig; hereafter let it go to the Brahmas toward evening. Buy your pork if you think it is fit to eat.

GARDEN WORK FOR APRIL.

CARROTS, PARSNIPS AND SALSIFY.—Sow seeds of these for the chief crop.

RHUBARB OR PIE PLANT.—It is not too late to plant out roots of this delicacy for dessert.

BEANS.—Plant a few rows of snap or dwarf beans every week during the month. The Valentine and the Black Wax are the best.

CAULIFLOWER AND BROCCOLI.—Sow in a rich, open border seeds of these delicious vegetables for autumn use.

HOT BEDS.—Attend closely to the hot beds, and give all the air possible with all the moisture needed.

CABBAGE PLANTS AND SEED.—If you have plants large enough set them out. Sow seeds of early sorts, and Winningstadt cabbage seed for early fall use.

BEETS.—Sow seeds for succession. Of course, some have been sown last month. The Egyptian and the Blood Turnip Beet are the best for early supplies. Have plenty of beets, they are wholesome and always relished by vegetable eaters.

CORN.—Plant some early sweet corn for roasting ears. There may be some earlier sorts, but the pure, shrivelled looking sweet corn is best for table use early. The best of all is Hyde's Improved Egyptian, but it is rather a late sort.

CELERY.—Sow celery seed in an open border somewhat protected from the mid-day sun, and as the plants grow to four inches high, transplant to another spot so as to make them stocky and have good bunches or roots, before they are set out for cultivation for winter supply.

PEAS.—Sow a few rows every ten days. Or sow early and late peas at the same time, and they will follow in succession. Alpha and Champion of England, or some marrow pea can now be sown and will follow successively, and are among the best for family use.

ASPARAGUS BEDS.—If you have none, plant a bed at once. If you have one, rake it over and take off all litter, spread a coat of well rotted manure and fork it in, then rake smooth and top dress the bed with a heavy coating of salt.

LETTUCE.—Set out plants and sow more seed. There are many new sorts. Try some of them, but rely upon the old sorts like the black seeded Dutch, and India curled, for early summer, and Roman Coss for late summer.

STRAWBERRIES.—If not done before, clean off the beds, work and manure the plants, and mulch with leaves or corn-stalks, cut straw or any substance which will keep the dirt from the fruit and retain the moisture. If a dry time comes use water freely and the increased size and value of the fruit will well repay all your trouble. In watering when the plants are in flower, do not pour on the water so as to wash out their fertilizing properties, but let the nozzle of the water pot be kept low to the ground.

HOW TO AIR A ROOM.

It is the general practice to open only the lower part of the windows of a room in ventilating it, whereas, if the upper part were opened, the object would be more especially effected. The air in an apartment is usually heated to a higher temperature than the outer air, and it is thus rendered lighter; and as the outer air rushes in, the warmer and lighter air is forced upward, and finding no outlet, remains in the room. If a candle be held in the doorway, it will be found that the flame will be blown inward; but if raised nearly to the top of the doorway, it will go outward; the warm air flowing out at the top, while the cold air flows in at the bottom. A current of warm air from the room is generally rushing up the flue of the chimney, if the flue be open, even though there should be no fire in the stove; therefore open fire-places are the best ventilators we can have for a chamber, with an opening from the ceiling.

MEAT and poultry will lose their flavor and firmness if left in the water after they are done; as will also fish, which will break to pieces.

To remove grease from wall paper lay several folds of blotting paper on the spot and hold a hot iron near it until the grease is absorbed.

IF bone-dust be applied now the result will be greater after two years than they will be the first season. It does not operate quickly.

IN TWOS.

Somewhere in the world there hide
Garden-gates that no one sees
Save they come in happy twos—
Not in ones, nor yet in threes.

But from every maiden's door
Leads a pathway straight and true;
Maps and surveys know it not;
He who finds finds room for two!

Then they see the garden-gates!
Never skies so blue as theirs,
Never flowers so many sweet
As for those who come in pairs.

Round and round the alleys wind,
Now a cradle bars the way,
Now a little mound, behind—
So the two go through the day.

When no nook in all the lanes
But has heard a song or sigh,
Lo! another garden-gate
Opens as the two go by!

In they wander, knowing not;
"Five and Twenty!" fills the air
With a silvery echo low,
All about the startled pair.

Happier yet these garden-walks;
Closer, heart to heart, they lean;
Stiller, softer falls the light;
Few the twos, and far between.

Till, at last, as on they pass
Down the path so well they know,
Once again at hidden gates
Stand the two: they enter slow.

Golden Gates of Fifty Years,
May our two your latchet pass!
Garden of the Sunset Land,
Hold their dearest happiness!

Then a quiet walk again;
Then a wicket in the wall;
Then one, stepping on alone—
Then two at the Heart of All!

GIVING AND LIVING.

Forever the sun is pouring its gold
On a hundred worlds that beg and borrow;
His warmth he squanders on summits cold,
His wealth on the homes of want and sorrow,
To withhold his largess of precious light
Is to bury himself in eternal night.
To give
Is to live.

The flower shines not for itself at all,
Its joy is the joy it freely diffuses;
Of beauty and balm it is prodigal,
And it lives in the light it freely loses.
No choice for the rose but glory or doom.
To exhale or smother, to wither or bloom.
To deny
Is to die.

The seas lend silvery rays to the land,
The land its sapphire streams to the ocean;
The heart sends blood to the brain of command,
The brain to the heart its lightning motion;
And over and over we yield our breath,
Till the mirror is dry and images death.
To live
Is to give.

He is dead whose hand is not open wide
To help the need of a human brother;
He doubles the length of his lifelong ride
Who gives his fortunate place to another;
And a thousand million lives are his
Who carries the world in his sympathies.
To deny
Is to die.
—Boston Transcript

A Connecticut man writes to the Hartford Times that he has become acquainted in South Carolina, where he is temporarily staying, with remarkably prolific families. He refers particularly to twenty that belong to the select society of Charleston and Columbia, and that average over 14 children each, the twenty having together 286 children, and the number that belong to each ranging from 10 to 26. The writer knows also of two families that have had twins two successive years, and one that had twins two years and triplets the third. He thinks it would not have been surprising had South Carolina shown a greater increase than 30,000 during the past ten years.

THE pride of so many London seasons has passed away without even what was left to Adriene—a memory. Mrs. Langtry is not even spoken of. The great beauty was the portionless daughter of a clergyman in the Channel Islands. Her husband is the son of a shipping agent, whose ships ran between Belfast and Liverpool. He was not brought up to any profession, as he had inherited a very ample patrimony, and had been educated to fill the part of a gentleman. But times are changed, and what was affluence in those days, will not support an establishment at the West End, with carriages and horses at command, and such hats and dresses as the world never saw, and such as the eyes of royalty loved to dwell on.

SOL SMITH RUSSELL tells the following story of his experience as an entertainer: At a small Ohio town where he had given his performance the previous night, he met at the depot the following morning an elderly granger, who, while he peacefully munched a huge quid of tobacco, intently eyed the humorist and finally said:

"Say, mister, ain't you the fellow wot gin the show up to Smoot's Hall last night?"

"Yes," replied Russell, "I did give an entertainment at Smooth's Hall last night."

"Wall, I thought you was the chap. I wanted tell you 'bout a boy of mine; you ought to have him; he's just the fellow for your show; he's the biggest fool I ever see."

THE other day a bright three year-old boy, "who has been around some," was taken to church to be baptized and christened. Although the little fellow's parents are church people, they mingle much with the world and are quite regularly at the theatre, where the little three-year-old always accompanies them. Being taken into church there was some delay before the ceremony was proceeded with, and the unregenerate youth becoming uneasy, cried out in a loud impatient tone, "Ma, why doesn't the curtain go up?"

THEY were walking by the sea-side, and he sighed and she sighed; and she was by his side, and he by her side, and they were both beside themselves, besides being at the sea-side, where she sighed and he sighed.

THE Princess of Wales has ordered that ladies coming to her receptions shall be not merely in full dress, but fully dressed.

Upon being spoken to concerning St. Jacobs Oil, our fellow townsman, Mr. Theodore Wakelee, said: I had been suffering with rheumatism, and obtained the greatest relief from the use of St. Jacobs Oil. It has also been used in my family for some time, and has never been found to fail in giving prompt relief.

The low price at which we sell is alone attributable to the fact that we pay no commission to agents, and are satisfied with a close margin ourselves.
Our Factory is always open to the farmers, and a cordial invitation is extended them to visit us there and inspect for themselves.

HELP Yourselves by making money when a golden chance is offered, thereby always keeping poverty from your door. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. We want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. The business will pay more than ten time ordinary wages. We furnish an expensive outfit and all that you need free. No one who engages fails to make money very rapidly. You can devote your whole time to the work, or only your spare moments. Full information and all that is needed sent free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Maine. Oct. 14, 1880.
