Farm and Household.

ESTABLISHED RULES FOR SUCCESSFUY POULTRY RAISING.

In raising poulty or stock it should be the aim of every one to keep it healthy and improve it. You can do it very easily by adopting some systematic rules. These may be summed up in brief as follows:

Fowls seldom tire of milk. They may eat too much grain or meat for health, but milk in any form is both palatable and healthy.

Construct your houses good and warm so as to avoid damp floors and afford a flood of sunlight. Sunshine is better than medicine.

Provide a dusting and scratching place, where you can bury wheat and corn, and thus to induce the fowls to take needful exercise.

Provide yourself with good, healthy chickens, none to be over three or four years old, giving one cock to every twelve hens.

Give them plenty of fresh air at all times of the year, especially in summer.

Give them plenty of fresh water daily and never allow the fowls to go thirsty.

Feed them systematically, two or three times a day, and scatter the food, so that they can't eat too fast or without proper exercise. Do not feed more than they will eat up clean, or they will get tired of that kind of feed.

Give them a variety of both dry and cooked food; a mixture of cooked meal and vegetables is an excellent thing for their morning meal.

Give them soft feed in the morning, and the whole grain at night, except a little wheat or cracked corn placed in the scratching place to give them exercise during the day.

Above all things keep the hen house clean and well ventilated.

Do not crowd too many fowls in one house. If you do, look out for disease.

Use carbolic powder in their dusting bins occasionally to destroy the lice.

Wash your roosts and bottom of laying nests with white wash once a week in summer, and once a month in winter.

Let the young and old have as large a range as possible—the larger the better.

Don't breed too many kinds of fowls at the same time unless you are going into the business. Three or four will give you your hands full.

Introduce new blood into your stock every year or so, by either buying a cockerel or sittings of eggs from some reliable breeder.

In buying birds or eggs go to some reliable breeder who has his reputation at stake. You may have to pay a little more for birds, but you can depend on what you get. Culls are not cheap at any price.

Save the best birds for next year's breeding, and send the others to market. In shipping fancy poultry to market send it dressed.—Poultry Nation.

REDUCE BONES TO MANURE.—A correspondent of the Massachusetts Ploughman says that for several years he has packed bones in green horse manure, making the heap with a layer of manure at the bottom and putting the bones and manure in layers of about three inches in thickness. He wets the layers as the heap is made. A few weeks time is all that is needed to reduce quite large and solid beef bones to a condition in which they can be broken to a coarse powder by the fork, when the heap is overhauled. Any tough pieces are put in another heap. He has rotted in this way over a ton of bones at one time in less than two cords of horse manure. The top of the heap is to be covered with some earth or muck to absorb the gases.

IMPROVE THE FARM.—If the farmer improves his farm he improves his financial condition. The more valuable he makes it, the more his capital stock is increased, the larger will be his returns, and when he dies the larger will be the patrimony he leaves to his family. Fix up the old home, then; clean out the fence corners; destroy the noxious weeds; grub out the hazel and thistle; burn out the stumps; clean off the logs and stones; make a paradise on earth of your farm, for are you not to live on it while you remain on earth, and will not your family live on it when you lie in yonder grave yard? Plant out young orchards so that your family may enjoy the good fruit that you have the forsight and energy to provide for them.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Rural New Yorker advises stock growers not to be in haste to destroy any animal that may break a leg, for by means of plaster of Paris and some bagging strips the limb may be set and supported until the fractured bone unites again. His plan has been, both with calves and sheep, to wind the strips of bagging about the broken limb, plaster over with calcined plaster mixed to a thin paste and other strips wound over that and more plaster applied, the leg fastened to splints of wood until the plaster sets. The animal would limp around for a few days on three legs, but recovered without blemish.

Too many farmers manifest a degree of contempt for the smaller products of the farm, particularly those cultivators who are engaged in raising large crops of wheat and corn, or who are largely engaged in the dairy business. As a consequence, there is often a lack of vegetables on such farms, with perhaps a short supply of eggs or honey, combined often with a complete neglect of small fruits.

POTASH, says a writer, is absolutely necessary to successful potato growing. The easiest and best mode of supplying it is in the form of wook ashes. It is furnished also in soft coal ashes and well rotted yard or stable manure.

KNOTS on plum trees are caused by a fungus and should be cut away as soon as discovered. Cut off and burn badly infected branches. Scatter a couple of quarts of salt on the ground under each tree.

LIME is an excellent fertilizer on clay soils, on account of its power to render soluble many of the componen parts of the clay, and also to make it more porous.

DARBY AND HIS JOAN.

When Darby saw the setting sun,
He swung his scythe and home he ran,
Sat down, drank off his pint, and said:
"My work is done, I'll go to bed."

"My work is done," retorted Joan;
"My work is done, your constant tone;
But hapless woman ne'er can say
My work is done, 'till Judgment Day "

Here Darby hem'd and racked his head
To answer what his Joan had said;
But all in vain, her clack kept on;
"Yes, woman's work is never done.

"You men can sleep all night, but we Must toil." "Whose fault is that?" quoth he.
"I know your meaning," Joan replied,
"But, sir, my tongue shall ne'er be tied;
I will go on and let you know
What work we women have to do.

"First, in the morning, though we feel
As sick as drunkards when they reel—
Yes, feel such pain through back and head
As would confine you men to bed,

"We wield the brush and ply the broom,
We air the beds and right the room;
The cow must next be milked, and then
We get the breakfast for the men.

"Ere this is done, with whimpering cries
And briskly air, the children rise;
These must be dressed and dosed with rue
And fed, and all because of you.

"We must"—here Darby rose and scratched his head,
And fast retreated for the bed;
And grumbling thus as on he run:
"Zounds! woman's clack is never done."

At early dawn, ere Phœbus rose,
Old Joan resumed her tale of woes;
Said Darby: "Thus I'll end the strife;
Be you the man and I the wife.

"Take you the scythe and mow, while I
Will all your boasted cares supply."
"Content," quoth Joan, "give me my stint;"
This Darby did and out she went.

Old Darby rose and seized the broom,
And whirled the dirt around the room;
Then, having done, he scarce knew how,
He hied to milk the brindle cow.

The brindle cow did whisk her tail
In Darby's eyes, and kick the pail;
The clown, perplexed with grief and pain,
Swore he'd never try to milk again.

Then, turning round, in sad amaze,
He saw his cottage in a blaze,
For as he chanced to brush the room,
In careless haste, he fired the broom.
The fire at length subdued, he swore
The broom and he should meet no more.

Pressed by misfortune and perplexed,
Darby prepared for breakfast next;
But what to get he scarcely knew,
The bread was spent, the butter too.

With hands bedaubed in paste and flour,
Old Darby labored full an hour,
But, luckless wight, he could not make
The bread take form of loaf or cake.

As every door wide open stood,
In pushed the sow in quest of food,
And, stumbling onward, with her snout
O'er set the churn—the cream ran out.

As Darby turned the sow to beat,
The slippery cream betrayed his feet;
He caught the bread-trough in his fall,
And down came Darby, trough and all.

The children, wakened by the clatter,
Start up and cry: "Law, what's the matter?"
Old Jowler barked and Tabby meowed,
And hapless Darby bawled aloud:

"Return, my Joan, as heretofore,
I'll play the housewife's part no more,
Since now by sad experience taught,
Compared with thine my work is naught.

"Henceforth as business calls I'll take,
Content, the scythe, the plow, the rake,
And nevermore transgress the line
Our fates have marked whilst thou art mine.

"Then, Joan, return as heretofore,
I'll vex thine honest soul no more;
Let each his proper task attend,
Forgive the past and strive to mend."

PANJUTIN, one of the Government officials in command of the district embracing Odessa, in Russia, is described at some length in the Berlin Tageblatt. Within a few months after his assuming office, ninety-three persons were despatched "administratively," which means without trial, conviction, or even accusation, to East Siberia, among them several whose ages ranged between 14 and 17 years. Some of these arrests and banishments were effected in such haste as to occasion trifling mistakes, like sending off the wrong man. Thus, in place of the student Andreas Ostrowski, the typesetter Waldimir Ostrowski was carted off; and the same thing happened to a railroad laborer, one Kuschnirenko, in place of a student of the same name. In the same category may be placed the arrest and banishment of a postillion, with his wife and a babe a year and a half of age, the child being recorded as guilty of treason, and transported for that crime. Panjutin selected congenial tools for the execution of his orders. He directed one of his subordinates to search the laboratory of the University of Odessa. The man made the search, and found nothing that he could safely seize; but he nevertheless expressed strong suspicions because there were so many of "those electric batteries" around. Teachers and professors were especial objects of Panjutin's kind offices. One of the Odessa faculty resigned and left the country to get out of the man's reach.

[Chicago Western Catholic.]

The latest man who has been made happy through the use of this valuable liniment is Mr. James A. Conlan, Librarian of the Union Catholic Library of this city. The following is Mr. Conlan's indorsement:

UNION CATHOLIC LIBRARY ASSOCIATION,
204 DEARBORN STREET,
CHICAGO, Sept. 16, 1880.

I wish to add my testimony as to the merits of St. Jacobs Oil as a cure for rheumatism. One bottle has cured me of this troublesome disease, which gave me a great deal of bother for a long time; but thanks to the remedy I am cured. This statement is unsolicited by any one in its interest.

JAMES A. CONLAN, Librarian.

A MAN with a handful of bills stopped Frank Duffy yesterday, and said emphatically:

"Now, I ask you for the last time to pay this bill for them boots."

"Is this the last time, sure enough—no humbug about it?"

"Yes, sir; this is the last time."

"Lord be praised!" said Duffy, with a sigh of relief, "I was afraid I was never going to hear the last of those boots," and he strolled off to get a cigar.

"WHAT is hell?" asked a Sunday School teacher of a boy in class.

"A shirt with a button off, ma'am," replied the boy.

"Explain yourself; what do you mean, sir?" demanded the teacher.

"Well, I heard my pa say to ma the other morning, when he put on a shirt with the back button off, 'Well, this is hell!' That's all I know about it."
