BARK LICE.

A correspondent: I have a young orchard, and the trees have got covered with lice. Would you give me some information through your columns what would be best to destroy them."

Reply.—In the middle or latter part of May, the young bark lice hatch out, and are then tender and easily destroyed. At all other periods of the year the scale covering them is sufficient to protect them from almost everything except coal oil, and this is injurious to the trees. At the time in May when the young lice are on the move, they may be destroyed by syringing or scrubbing the trees with a solution of whale oil soap.—Canady Globe.

NEVER use a check rein upon a horse at work, as it is calculated to worry and injure the animal more than the work he is required to do. If a man has a heavy load to draw, he lowers his head by bending forward, and throws the whole weight of his body against it. So does a horse if he is permitted to do so.—But if the man's head were so tied back that he could not bend forward he would lose the advantage of his weight; just so with the horse. By taking off or loosening the check rein on a horse at work, you not only increase his muscular power, but abandon a fashion which is both cruel and foolish.—Baltimore Weekly Sun.

THOSE TREES that have split in the forks should have the branches sprung together and tied, then bore a hole directly through both branches above the fork two or three inches, large enough to take a three-eighths bolt; screw it up solid, then remove the branches, and the wound will heal over. Young apple or other trees with acute forks, liable to split apart, can be made permanently safe by bringing a branch from each fork, and giving them one turn around each other and allowing them to grow in that shape.

A DRAINED SOIL is easier to work and will yield a larger crop for the same amount of labor. Quicker returns are obtained from any fertilizers applied to a mellow soil than when put upon one that is filled with clods.

To heavily feed a cow of some milking capacity is very poor economy. Rich food will produce good results when fed to cows that give large quantities of rich milk.

A TEASPOONFUL of powdered charcoal, a quart of bran, and refuse from the table, mixed and moistened with warm water, are the ingredients of a capital egg-producing food for hens.

CHARRED CORN is one of the best things which can be fed to hens to make them lay. It must not be fed as a regular diet, but in limited quantities each day.

FLAX is a crop which would follow a clean cultivated crop of sugar beets or mangels. It can only be grown to advantage on well fertilized lands.

SPENT tan bark has been plowed into a compact clay soil with the best results, as it rendered the soil mellow and increased its warmth.

IF BONE-DUST be applied now the result will be greater after two years than they will be the first season. It does not operate quickly.

WHERE WOOD ASHES can be purchased cheaply enough it will pay to procure a quantity and scatter liberally under the fruit trees.

THE man whose watering-trough is not dry, and whose stock can drink their fill under cover, has much to be thankful for.

HARNESS OIL made of 1 gallon of neatsfoot oil, with 4 ounces of lampblack well mixed, is simple and effective.

GOOD MILK requires good, sound food, and a large yield of milk requires a large supply of good sound food.

PURE MILK condensed to one-third will remain sweet from five to ten days in warm weather.

REFUSE salt and brine from the pickle-barrels should be sown broadcast under fruit trees.

CATTLE will eat ground bone, and a little should always be kept in a box in the cattle yard for their convenience.

IT IS AN OUTRAGE on society for persons to send calves to market when but three days old, as is now the practice.

POOR BUTTER is rarely salable, and if sold at all, only brings a low price. It is not equal to oleo-margarine.

THE SHORT-HORN has more carcass and less offal in proportion than any other. For beef they have no superior.

LINSEED MEAL is not only nutritious food for cattle, but also regulates the system and loosens the coat.

SALT is as necessary to stock as to humans. A quantity of it should be always within their reach.

PUT a half handful of superphosphate of lime in melon hills. There is no better fertilizer for that fruit.

GROUND BONE, fish guano and wood ashes are excellent fertilizers for strawberries.

A GOOD FARMER is always known by the care and attention he bestows on his stock.

GIVE the boys a chance, and the girls also, to have gardens of their own this year.

DARK stables are injurious to the eyes of horses.

THE MAIDEN MARTYR.

BY NATHANIEL W. CONKLING, M. D.

About two hundred years ago,
On Scotland's western shore,
A strange, sad sight was witnessed,
Strange even for days of yore,
And stranger, still, for Scotland,
Land of the free and leal,
Where Conscience owns no master
Save God's own sovereign will:—

The land where Chalmers thundered,
Where Knox braved Pope and Queen:
Where holy men unnumbered,
Loyal to Christ, were seen
Departing from their hearths and homes,—
Whilst the deep-dyed flag of blue
Proclaimed full well to powers and thrones:
"To God the Scots are true."

Yet on a bright May morning,
These hundred years ago,
Down to the sands of Blednoch
A procession moves on slow;
The tide is out that morning,
The sands spread far and fair,
And overhead the sun shines,
And sweetly breathes the air.

And why this great procession,
This marching through the streets,
The town of Wigton all astir,
While loud the drummer beats?
The Laird of Lagg rides foremost,
The soldiers likewise ride,
And all are marching onward
Down to the ocean side.

Strange sight!—two hapless women
Are guarded either side,
The one with gray hair streaming,
The other fair as bonnie bride:
One bowed with years and sorrows,
To be pitied and upborne;
The other, lithe, young, lovely
As the opening of the morn.

Yet they are bringing these two women,
This matron and this maid,
From out the loathsome prison,
And e'en to death, 'tis said:
For the Council they have ordered
That on this eleventh of May
This maiden and this matron
Must die in Wigton bay.

For these two hapless women
Have refused to take the oath,
The oath of abjuration,
Demanded of them both;
Have rejected the "Conformity,"
Which were denial of their Lord;
And, though death the threatened penalty,
They swerve not from their word.

In the rideway of the ocean,
One farther from the shore,
Are seen two stakes deep driven
Where soon the waves will roar;
And, look! the elder of the two
Is led along the sands,
And to that stake the matron
Is tied with strongest bands.

Then to the nearer station
The other is quick and roughly led:—
There have but eighteen summers
Passed o'er that fair young head;
Yet in this opening morning
Of her life, as of the Spring,
This gentle maid is doomed to die
For Christ's sake, her true King.

And now the tide is waxing,
Advancing sure and slow,
And she who faces death the first
Meets the crested ocean flow;
And as she sinks beneath it
In mortal agony,
"What see you yonder?" ask the crowd
Of the one who yet is free.

Oh, answer full of Heaven-born faith!
"I see," the maid replied,
"The Saviour Christ now suffering
In one for whom He died."
And as they tied her to the stake
There floated out a song,
Which told how Christ doth ever make
The soul that trusts Him strong.

She sang a Psalm of David:
"O God, my Heavenly King,
To Thee I lift my soul this day
Of my sore suffering;
I trust in Thee, my Saviour,
I trust alone in Thee;
Now pardon, bless, and help me, Lord,
And take me unto Thee."

Full soon the roaring billows
Drown the music of her Psalm;
Her head rests on no pillow
Within her chamber calm,
While loved ones whisper to her,
In words of hope and prayer,
The promises of Jesus,
So gracious and so near.

Yet, ere the waters whelm her,
One rushes through the wave,
His mighty love impelling
His chosen bride to save;
He lifts her in his strong arms,
And with beseeching prayer
Entreats the one he loves so well
Even for him to care:—

"Oh, Maggie, my own darling,
This is an awful thing;
To save thy precious life, dear,
Just say, 'God save the King.'"
"Aye, save him, an' He will;
I wish no other thing!
I pray with all my heart, love,
May God save Scotland's King.'

"She has said it! She has said it!
Now let the lassie free."
But, as he spake, a soldier
Came splashing through the sea;
He lifts his sword above her,
He swears that she shall die,
Unless she takes the oath that makes
The Covenant a lie.

"That impious oath I will not take,
And thus deny my Lord;
He loved me even unto death,
I'll be faithful to His word;
I hear His voice,—He calls me
To the regions of the blest,
Where the wicked cease from troubling
And the weary are at rest."

A JOLLY LIFE.—Insects generally must lead a truly jovial life. Think what it must be to lodge in a lily. Imagine a palace of ivory or pearl, with a pillar of silver and capitals of gold, all exhaling such a perfume as never rose from human censer. Fancy again the fun of tucking yourself up for the night in the folds of a rose, rocked to sleep by the gentle sigh of the summer air, nothing to do when you awake but wash yourselves in a dew-drop, and fall to and eat your bed-clothes!

IN few cities are there more than half a dozen railway stations. In London there are at least 150.
