Farm and Household.

SAVING AND MANAGING MANURE.

The importance of the care of home made manure is becoming more generally acknowledged as its virtues are investigated.

The farmer finds that he cannot rely on the commercial fertilizers alone, important as is their use in the saving of labor, but the combinations of the mineral and organic manures are found to be the solving of the problem of fertilization for our crops.

The young farmer especially should be induced to study this and other similar questions, and to acquaint himself with the constituents of manures as well as of plants, and to avail of the lights of science and the experience of practical farmers, who give in their experience at the club meetings to improve their patrimonial estates.

The value of the best cow manure, as given by the chemist, is about half the value of horse manure. In phosphoric acid it is as two to three for the horse; in potash the same; in ammonia two-thirds the value of stable manure. The same authority place the annual deposits from a cow as worth $5.15. We may estimate that by our careless and slovenly penning process, and from our scant pastures we do not get that much.

From hogs we get a very limited amount of manure. In fact, in most cases none, save from the pens in which we fatten for killing in the fall,

The best way to construct such a pen is over a pit, so that all excrements, solid or liquid, can fall into the pit. In such cases little or no litter need be used. When a number, fifteen to thirty or more, are to be penned and fattened, and especially if to be fed several months, it is well to construct a pen in the shape of a lane with a gate at each end. By this means a wagon can be driven through the pen to supply litter. This, in such a case, may be given freely—corn stalks, straw, leaves, woods' mould, muck, peat, &c.,—the more the better, until the whole pen is covered two or three feet deep.

The manure from the hog is in proportion to stable manure, in phosphoric acid as eight to twelve; in ammonia as eight and a half to six and a half; in potash as five to twenty-eight. It is better for special purposes than any other manure, and acts kindly on all kind of plants.

Hogs are sometimes allowed access to cow-pens and stables to help the manure-making process. This is wrong, and should not be allowed. The horse, the cow and the hog should each have separate quarters, and proper arrangements made for saving the manure separate. They may be mixed to advantage on or before application to the soil. With very little care, the value of the manure made from a pen of fattening hogs will be equal to the value of the labor required to feed them, if it does not far exceed the same.

MANURING THE GARDEN.

The cost of manuring a garden plot is so trifling, and the result so satisfactory, that it is a matter of wonder that those who desire a fair harvest of fruits or vegetables do not treat the soil a little more liberally in this respect. Before getting seed, plants, splittings or cuttings, get manure. Study the character of the soil and seek to give it the manure best calculated to enrich it, and there is nothing better than well-rotted stable manure. Let it be well worked into the soil. It is, of little use to a gardener to throw it upon the ground and there leave it. Let there be as thorough pulverization as possible, and then intermixture of the manure, and the land will show its gratitude in the results.

THE CORN CROP.—Thorough preparation of the land, even if it costs some time, pays. So does ample manuring. For giving the plant a start-off use a handful of rich compost in the hill. Where other materials are used in the hill, such as super-phosphates, care must be taken not to bring them in too close contact with the seed, which may thereby be burned. Some farmers soak the seed in a strong solution of saltpetre as a safeguard against insects and vermin; others coat thinly with tar—a pint of which made hot and stirred in a peck of seed will coat each grain.

SWEET POTATOES.—It pays well to thoroughly prepare the ground intended for sweet potatoes by repeated plowings, so as to get it into fine tilth. During the latter part of the month some farmers will have draws ready for transplanting.—Nothing is to be gained, however, by pulling out the plants before they have become somewhat stalky and well-rooted in the beds.

PEACH TREE BORE.—During this month, it is recommended by the best orchardists that the soil be banked up around each tree in the form of a crone or potato hill, about one foot high, as a protection against the attack of the borer fly. It seems to be the only preventative that is at once cheap and easily applied, and at all effectual.

GLAZED SWEET POTATOES.—Boil softly, peel carefully, and lay in a greased dripping-pan in a good oven. As they begin to crust over baste with a little butter, repeating this several times as they brown.—When glossy and a golden russet, dish.

QUALITY OF FOOD.—One pound of corn is equal, in real sustaining food, to about 3¾ pounds of potatoes or 8½ pounds of cabbage, or 11½ lbs. of white turnips.

FELONS.—Beef marrow, bound on and renewed twice a day, is said to be the most effectual agent for the cure of those painful visitants—felons.

WASP STING.—A lump of wet salaratus applied to the spot stung by a wasp will afford instant relief. The alkali property neutralizes the poison.

FINE LACES.—When washing fine laces do not use starch at all; in the last water in which they are rinsed put a little fine white sugar, dissolve it thoroughly, and the result will be pleasing.

IN MEMORIAM.

Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield.

BORN DEC. 21, 1804. DIED APRIL 19, 1881.

From Punch.

Disraeli dead! The trappings of late days,
The Coronet, the Garter, slip aside,
The peer's emblazonment, the victor's bays,
The pageantry of pride.

Triumph's mere symbols, badges of success,
Who weighs, who marks them now when all is said
In simple words, low-breathed in heaviness—
Disraeli's dead!

So all have known him from that earlier time
Of meteoric and all-daring youth,
And through the season of his dazzling prime,
And so to-day in sooth.

'Tis Benjamin Disraeli all will mourn,
Nor he the less unfeignedly whose lance
Against that shield and crest full oft had bourne
In combat a outrance.

The fearless fighter and the flashing wit
Swordless and silent! 'Tis a thought to dim
The young spring sunshine, glancing, as was fit,
Bright at the last on him,

Who knew no touch of winter in his soul.
Holding the Greek gift yet in mind and tongue,
And who, though faring past life's common goal,
Loved of the gods, died young.

Like the enchantress of the Nile, unstaled
By custom as unchilled by creeping years,
A world-compeller, who not often failed
In fight with his few peers.

Success incarnate, self-inspired, self-raised,
To that proud height whereat youth's fancy aimed,
Whom even those who doubted while they praised
Admired, e'en while they blamed.

No more that fine invective's flow to hear,
That buoyant wisdom or that biting wit!
To see him and his one sole battle peer
Sharp counter hit for hit.

No more to picture that impassive face,
That unbetraying eye, that fadeless curl!
No more in plot or policy to trace
The hand of the great Earl!

How strange it seems, and how unwelcome! Rest,
Not least amid our greatest! Who would dare
Deny thee place and splendor with the best
Who breathed our English air?

Peace, lasting peace, that strife no more shall break,
With honor none may challenge, crown thee now
Wherever laid, not faction's self would shake
The laurel from thy brow.

And England, who for thy quenched brightness grieves,
Garlands the sword no more to leave its sheath,
And, turning from thy simple gravestone, leaves
A tear upon the wreath.

Two patients in an Iowa insane asylum, a man and woman, escaped by means of a rope ladder, saddled horses in the stable of the institution rode twenty miles to a clergyman, and by him were married in the morning, nothing in their manner at that time indicating that they were not sane. The pair continued their journey until afternoon, when each became convinced that the other was demented, and applied for protection.

THE vigilance committee of Durango, the new Colorado mining town, commanded eight outlaws to skedaddle. The outlaws replied by parading the streets in a body with cocked revolvers in their hands, defying the whole population to fight them, declaring their intention to remain.

George Morton, a Canadian cheese exporter, will undertake a scheme for a great dairy colony in the Northwest. There are to be 224 farms of 160 acres each, stocked at the outset with thirty cows each. The novelty will be a narrow-gauge railroad, with a station on each farm, so that milk can be carried to a central cheese factory twice a day.

Stock to the amount of $10,000 has been sold for a mining company at Lebanon, Pa., on the strength of a man's dream that there was gold at a certain point, and a clairvoyant's assurance that the dream was trustworthy.

A BROTHER and sister, aged 12 and 10, of Belleville, Canada, desired to see the world, but had no money for travelling expenses. To overcome this obstacle they stole a cow, drove her ten miles, sold her for $9, and were arrested.

THE sons of a Cincinnati landlord scared an undesirable tenant out of a house by dangling a skeleton in the doorway at night, and then pulling the bell, thus creating the impression that death desired to call.

CHRISTAIN F. RAPP, principal of a Cincinnati school, married one of his pupils, and within three days so far forgot their changed relations as to whip her for disobedience. She has sued for divorce.

A LITTLE Illinois boy's new boots were too big for him. His brother proposed to chop off the ends. The plan was tried on one foot, with a loss of three toes.

"MAJOR, I see two cocktails carried to your room every morning as if you had some one to drink with."

"Yes, sir; one cocktail makes me feel like another man; and of course I'm bound to treat the other man."

A PHILADELPHIA girl, upon being remonstrated with for refusing an honest and industrious young man, exclaimed:

"It's no use in arguing, ma! His nose is so flat that I'm sure he must snore!"

[Wilmington (Del.) Daily Republican.]

Mrs. Adam Grubb, 231 Walnut street, has been a great sufferer for a number of years from extreme pain in the feet, something like rheumatism. She was also very much troubled with corns and bunions. It was with great difficulty that she could walk, and sometimes when she would visit her husband's shoe store or any of her children, she could not get home again without assistance, and often when she was walking along the streets she would be seized with such acute pain that she was compelled to stop in at the neighbors on the way until she got better. Some two weeks ago she heard of the wonderful cures St. Jacobs Oil was effecting and she at once commenced to use it and experienced great relief immediately. The pains have left her feet and ankles and the inflammation has left the corns and bunions. She is now tripping up to her husband's shoe store and out to see her children without experiencing any pain.
