Farm and Household.

RENOVATING WORN-OUT LAND.

No good farmer will allow his fields to become exhausted by excessive cropping but will adopt timely measures for keeping up their fertility; but should they become reduced under bad management, the question of renovatin[g is] one of the very first importance. If the farmer has an abundance of good dressing, the question is easy of solution; but where large acres are to be restored the manure heap is likely to fail, and some other plan must be adopted. The choice, in such a case, lies between green manuring and sheep. Land whose fertility has become quite low will produce a decent crop of clover by the aid of a liberal application of plaster, and this clover, when ploughed under, acts wonderfully in restoring the lost fertility of the soil. Buckwheat will flourish upon soil too poor for corn and wheat, and, next to clover, is perhaps the best crop for green manuring. Both should be turned under when in full bloom. The value of sheep for restoring run-out grass lands is too well known to require anything more than simple mention. It has been successfully practised for generations, and yet there are many farmers who complain of run-out lands, who keep no sheep at all. Aside from their value in restoring worn out lands to fertility, there is no stock the farmer can keep that pays so well, and that so many farmers do not keep them is a wonder. We asked one farmer the question the other day, and his reply was that his fences were too poor. In other words, it would require a little labor to repair his fences.

POWDERED HELLEBORE, which is the powder of the root or rhizome of veratrum album, is a poisonous substance, which, in most instances destroys caterpillar life very promptly, but there are some insects much less sensitive to its effects than others, and for these London purple or Paris green is required. Wherever hellebore will accomplish the desired purpose it should be used in preference to stronger poisons. The best plan we ever adopted for destroying what is generally termed the Canada thistle was to cut it down just before the blossom opened. Our method was to grind a hoe till it was quite sharp, and then to cut the thistle close to the ground. It is no worse if cut below it, but its permanent destruction in any neighborhood depends upon the hearty co-operation of all the farmers in the vicitity. The seed of the thistle is as light almost as that of the dandelion, and is carried a long distance by the wind.

CURRANT JELLY.—One of the best receipts for currant jelly is the following: If those who have an abundance of this most healthy berry, would make what they do not need for present use, do tonic duty next winter, there would be less loss of this fruit, and more health in the families of those who raise it. Take ripe, freshly gathered currants, and fill up a jar with them, and set it in boiling water for an hour; then turn out the juice carefully, not letting the berries fall into it. To each pint of juice take three quarters of a pound of the best lump sugar; boil all together for twenty minutes; strain through a jelly strainer into cups or glasses which have been dipped into cold water. When perfectly stiff, dip a thin paper the size of the glass into the white of an egg, and lay over the jelly; then paste over the glass a piece of stiff brown paper, and write the kind of jelly and the date upon it.

FAST WALKING HORSES.—It would seem to be about time for breeders of horses to turn their attention toward encouraging the very vaulable quality of fast walking. Millions are wasted yearly on the fast trotters, which are of no benefit to the farmers; while not a cent goes for the development of fast walkers. Yet a fast walker is a prize. One of our neighbors has a fine gray gelding that made five and a half miles in one hour and ten minutes a few days since with a good load behind him. This speed ought to be the rule instead of the exception among farm horses. Let the managers of our agricultural societies offer prizes for this quality and see how the fast walkers would come to the front.

RASPBERRY JAM.—Three-fourths pound of sugar to every pound of fruit. Put the fruit on alone, or with the addition of one pint of currant juice to every four pounds of raspberries. Boil half an hour, mashing and stirring well; add the sugar and cook twenty minutes more. Blackberry jam is very good made in the same way, only omitting the currant juice.

BOILING CABBAGE.—When you boil cabbage, turnips, onions, or any other vegetables that give out a strong odor, put a piece of charcoal or a red pepper (being careful not to break the skin of it) into the pot with them, and you will find that this is a strong deodorizer.

BEAN SALAD.—Put some lima beans, potatoes and beets (all boiled tender) on ice, and a short time before serving cut the potatoes and beets into rather thin slices, add the beans and dress with oil, pepper, salt and vinegar. Garnish with a few watercresses.

POULTRY will produce more flesh—pound for pound of feed—than the steer, sheep or hog, and it is meat of the tenderest quality compared with the others.

THE best cows are those which give the largest returns for the food consumed, whatever the breed, size, color or pedigree.

ALL fish skin should be washed, dried thoroughly, cut in small bits and put in a box or paper bag to use in settling coffee.

BAR SOAP, when bought, should be cut in square pieces and put in a dry place. It lasts better after shrinking.

IT is not necessary to grease fowls to rid them of lice. If their roosting places are kept clean they will keep themselves free from vermin by dusting themselves.

THE LAY OF THE POKE.

Ethel De Lancey reigned a queen
Of highest social station;
She set the fashions and, I ween,
She set her jealous sisters green
With envious perturbation.
Ethel De Lancey had a beau,
Herbert Fitzherbert Devereux;
Ho! ho!
A beau.

Early in Lent this belle bespoke
A dazzling Easter bonnet,
And as the season's master-stroke
She designates the species poke,
With all the fixings on it.
It came; with glee so carefully
She hastened to the glass to see;
"He! he!"
Quoth she.

The pains she took that poke to press
And shape it to her fancy
No inexperienced man could guess;
She sat upon it more or less,
This cunning Miss De Lancey,
And hammered it for many a day,
And slept in it, her parents say;
"Hey! hey!"
They say.

One morn she strolled, as well she might,
Without the least compunction,
To paralyze the sex on sight,
And all "our set, you know," to smite
From Fifth street to the Junction;
The ladies sigh, the horses shy,
The gamins in the gutter guy;
"Hi! hi!"
They cry.

Under the old ancestral oak
That evening, calm and pleasant,
Sat Ethel, on her head the poke;
A strong, suspicious smell of smoke
Proclaimed Fitzherbert present;
Around her waist his arm he threw,
That awful poke shuts out the view;
"Heu! heu!"
She too.

Farewell their little dream of bliss;
The silken cord is parted;
The cruel poke forbids the kiss.
"O Ethel! has it come to this?
I perish broken-hearted!"
And Ethel shrieks: "I die, papa;
See us interred with great eclat!"
"Ha! ha!"
They are.

MISS MULLER IN URBE.

Miss Muller, so the gossips say,
Flirted in quite a slanderous way.

But Maud, with a laugh, pronounced it fudge—
Yet we caught her wink at the ratty judge.

And the Judge—but we mention this subrose—
Blushed up to the roots of his bulbous nose;

Still he craned his neck, and in passing by
Gave a sinister wink with his dexter eye.

Quoth Maud to herself as on she passed,
"I've his royal nibs in tow at last;

My mother shall wear a sealskin sack—
My pa swing out in his broadcloth black:

My brother shall sip his whiskey skins,
And my sister revel in gay breast-pins;"

Quoth the judge, as he sauntered listless on,
"She's a rattling girl; you bet I'm gone!

No doubt my last wife's ma will kick,
And my heirs cut up the very nick;

And though I've known her a short, short spell,
You bet I'll have har in spite of——well,

No matter his word—'twas short and stout,
And the name of a place that's not played out,

According to Beecher. Alack for all,
The maid and judge ne'er wedded at all;

For he passed in his checks from too much gin,
And the maid grew long and lank and thin,

And eke as her chances glimmered away
She ceased for to flirt and began for to pray.

God pity the maid and pity the judge,
And these days of twaddle and bosh and fudge.

For of all sad words of a heart bereft
The saddest are these: "You bet I'm left."

A MODERN FABLE.

One day a bird of rare plumage and song sat on a limb of a tree on the banks of a pond, when a catfish arose to the surface and said:

"You may be able to fly through the air but you can't swim. You are not half so big a gunboat as you pretend to be.

This salutation nettled the bird, and he spunked up and replied:

"I'm a better man any day in the week than you are, and if you were up here on this limb I'd prove it or break my wings trying to!"

"Pooh! If you were down here in the pond, I'd take the brag out of you in about a York minute!" sneered the catfish.

After some further 'sass' it was agreed that they should go to the cat and have a test to see which excelled. It so happened that the cat was out to see if there was any chance to pick up a bone at some one else's expense, and the bird quickly brought her to the banks of the pond.

"You see," began the cat, as she stroked her whiskers and looked wise, "this bird cannot swim and the catfish cannot fly. Therefore, you must meet on neutral ground. Each thinks his case is right, and yet come to me to decade. The catfish will swim to the bank and the bird will alight on his back. One will try to pull the other down, and the other will try to pull the other one up, and may the best man win."

The program was carried out, each being certain of victory; but while they were struggling, the cat raked in both for the benefit of her stomach.

"When men can't agree," mused the satisfied cat, as she walked homewards, "they can always go to law and the law will settle the dispute, if it has to eat the cause of it."

MORAL.—In the first place peg away at what you can do best. In the second place, let other people have the same privilege. Brag is a good dog, but the umpire rakes in all the profits.—Detroit Free Press.

A STRIKING INSTANCE of what may happen to poor foreigners alone and without friends in Russia has just come to light. A foreign Ambassador recently received an intimation from the authorities at one of the Russian ports that one of the Ambassador's countrymen, a sailor, had been sentenced to two years' imprisonment for trying to break out of a lock-up, where he was incarcerated for an offence not stated, but presumably for the sailor's usual offence of drunkenness and disorder. The Ambassador at once requested the Consul at the port to inform himself of the facts of the case, and, if possible, see the prisoner. The Consul soon reported that the sailor had been removed to Siberia or to some distant jail nearly twelve months ago, and that nothing was known about him at the moment.

MARBLE WORKS,
Chestertown, Md.

ALLOW ME to tender my sincere thanks for the past patronage of the public, and hope to receive their approval and patronage this present year. I am prepared to cut and finish every design in the marble business.

I have a very handsome assortment of my own finished

TOMBSTONES.
Some of the Latest Designs,
HANDSOMELY FINISHED,
COPIED FROM THE LATE PARIS EXHIBITION.

A large assortment for children, different patterns, some as low as $6.00, lettering included. Some fifty different patterns for grown persons, handsomely finished, some of them as low as $15.00, lettering included. Also, a fine line of different patterns, expressly for the very thick and heavy and handsomely finished of the best marble.

Marble Posts, marble Vases with Pedestal, Marble Coping, Tombstones and Monuments, of all sizes and styles.

Marble or Sandstone worked to order. I warrant all my work not to color or blister—time has no effect on it. I set up all of my work, thus relieving the purchaser of all trouble or risk.

Come one, come all, that are in want, and examine my work and learn my prices. I will be thankful. Don't send the money out of your own neighborhood.

Call and see me. I do not like to canvass for work, for I think it too sad a business to barter with relatives or friends.

My work can be seen in all the cemeteries of Kent and the adjoining counties.
