Farm and Household.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Rural New Yorker advises stock growers not to be haste to destroy any animal that may break a leg, for by means of plaster of Paris and some bagging strips, the limb may be set and supported until the fractured bone unites again. His plan has been, both with calves and sheep, to wind the strips of bagging about the broken limb, plaster over with calcined plaster, mixed to a thin paste, and other strips wound over that and more plaster applied, the leg fastened to splits of wood until the plaster sets. The animal would limp about for a few days on three legs, but recovered without a blemish.

GRUB.—The New England Homestead gives the following item for the benefit of next year's crop: "Every one will notice in grass lands, especially those that have been seeded down for two or more years, many spires that are dead and brown. This is not caused by dry weather, as most people suppose, but indicates the presence of large numbers of grubs. There is no crop that is more liable to be injured by these worms than the potato, and therefore it should be noted where they are particularly prevalent this year in grass, and these pieces should under no circumstances be planted next year with potatoes."

HUNGARIAN grass or millet can be grown on sod land about as well as anywhere else. After taking off a crop of hay, turn the sod over flat. Spread on and harrow in some special fertilizer. Put in the seed at the rate of one bushel to the acre, bushing it in and rolling the land. If the ground is seeded by the middle of July, a fair crop can be cut by the middle of September. There are many wide awake farmers who adopt the above practice every year.

THE three following processes may be laid down as the foundation of all good farming: First, by draining, to get rid of all the superfluous water. Second, to return to the land through the medium of manure made upon the places, if possible, the fertility of the soil which has been taken away by cropping.—Third, to destroy all weeds, that they may not feed upon that fertility of the soil which the plants require.

THE chief solid fat found in butter is the principal ingredient in palm oil, while the chief liquid fat abounds in olive oil, and the soluble aromatic oils which give such an aroma to butter, and make its gilt-edge value, are found adunbantly in the cocoanut.

THYME will grow almost anywhere, but unlike many plants, that is the best which grows upon a poor soil. What makes thyme of value is its aromatic qualities; the more luxuriant it grows the less it possesses of these desirable qualities.

NOW is the time to look out for tent catterpillars. They will be found in their nests early in the morning, and after sundown at night when they can be easily removed by rolling them up in their web, and crushing the life out of them.

THOSE who wish to keep insects in check, must never have any "to-morrows" about their ways, but must act as soon as the eggs, chrysalis, or vermin in any state are seen. Destroy the first lot and it is rare that there is much trouble after.

ONIONS require about twenty lbs. of seed per acre. The usual remedy for the onion maggot (which is a great pest) is to scatter a superphosphate made from the refuse of petroleum refineries.

KEROSENE oil is sure death to insects of all kinds and in every stage of their development, according to Prof. Riley. At present prices it certainly would not be a very expensive thing to try.

LOOK out for the pasture fences. After the seed finds its way out of mother earth, old Cherry has a keen scent, and she will try to locate the exact spot where the corn has been planted.

A correspondent of the New England Farmer settles down upon salt, plugged tight in a hole bored endwise in the bottom of a post, as the best preventive of decay.

THE crops which do best on stiff clay soils, when well drained, are potatoes, onions, celery, late cabbage, late beans, Hubbard squashes and all kinds of fruits.

THEY have black peaches in Japan. When cut the flesh is a reddish brown. The flavor is excellent and it is thought that it may be naturalized in New England.

No man should be allowed to run a bug farm, without at least getting "license." Men who will not kill the curculio produced in their orchards should be compelled to cut down their orchards.

MANGE in horses, pigs and dogs can be cured by applying an ointment of whale oil and sulphur, and should be attended to on its first appearance, as it is contagious.

THE prospects for corn in California are very good. The rains have been abundant and timely, and the outlook for farmers could hardly be improved upon.

BUYERS of eggs show a preference as a general thing, for dark eggs, but for what reason is hard to surmise. There is no prettier sight than a dish piled up full of snow-white eggs.

EVERY farmer should keep from one to three pigs. They make way with all the refuse, and help to enrich the farm.

WHEN strawberry plants are set in rows three feet apart, and a foot apart in the rows, in requires 14,520 for an acre.

Whenever the sauce boils from the sides of the pan you may know the flour or corn starch is done.

EUTHANATOS.

Forth of our ways and woes,
Forth of the winds and snows,
A white soul soaring goes,
Winged like a dove;
So sweet, so pure, so clear,
So heavenly tempered here
Love need not hope or fear her changed above.

Ere dawned her day to die,
So heavenly that on high
Change could not glorify
Nor death refine her;
Pure gold of perfect love,
On earth like heaven's own dove,
She cannot wear above a smile diviner.

Her voice in heaven's own choir
Can sound no heavenlier lyre
Than here; no purer fire
Her soul can soar;
No sweeter stars her eyes
In unimagined skies
Beyond our sight can rise than here before.

Hardly long years had shed
Their shadows on her head:
Hardly we think her dead,
Who hardly thought her
Old; hardly can we believe
The grief our hearts receive
And wonder while they grieve, as wrong were wrought her.

But though strong grief be strong,
No word or thought of wrong
May stain the trembling song,
Wring the bruised heart,
That sounds or signs its faint,
Low note of love; nor taint
Grief for so sweet a saint when such depart.

A saint whose perfect soul,
With perfect love for goal,
Faith hardly might control,
Creeds might not harden:
A flower more splendid far
Than the most radiant star
Seen here of all that are in God's own garden.

Surely the stars we see
Rise and relapse as we
And change and set, may be
But shadows, too;
But spirits that man's lot
Could neither mar nor spot
Like these false lights are not, being heavenly true.

Not like these dying lights
Of worlds whose glory smites
The passage of the nights
Through heaven's blind prison:
Not like their souls who see
If thought fly far and free,
No heavenlier heaven to be for souls rerisen.

A soul wherein love shone
Even like the sun alone,
With fervor of its own
And splendor fed;
Made by no creeds less kind
Toward souls by none confined
Cold Death's self quench or blind Love's self were dead.

—A. C. Swinburne.

"HE LEADS HIS OWN."

Though the path of life be dark,
No light to mark the way,
Falter not! the "Hidden Hand,"
Shall be thy guide and stay:
Treasured is the widow's moan,
The orphan's sighs and tears;
God, through ways we have not known,
Leads all His own.

Though the heart be full of gloom,
And doubts and fears oppress,
Though bereft of all we love,
Fortunes frown, foes distress;
Look up! why should it matter then,
When many years have flown,
God, through ways ye have not known,
Leads thee, His own.

A day is surely coming,
To lay our burdens down,
Change tears for smiles, joy for woe;
Leave the cross, wear a crown.
Then the angel with flaming torch
Shall guide us to His throne.
God, through ways we have not known,
Still leads His own.

THE PALACE OF PETERHOF, the present residence of the Czar, although pleasantly situated on the sea coast and surrounded by a splendid park, has an unpleasant reputation. Princess Tarakanova had her last interview at Peterhof with her pitiless rival, Catharine, before her consignment to the dungeon from which she never emerged. At Peterhoff also died Alexandra, the eldest daughter of the late Czar, around whose fate some mystery is said to hang. Every night the spirits of the two princesses are said to walk, and sometimes they weep. The weeping of the ghostly visitants, like the wailing of the banshee, is said to be the sure prognostic of coming death. On the evening of the fatal Sunday when the Czar was slain more than twenty persons declare that they saw the princesses weeping.

AN ILLINOIS WOMAN was unwilling, on marrying a second time, to give up the alimony which she had been receiving from her first husband, from whom she had been divorced. She brought a suit to compel the continuance of payments, but the Supreme Court decided against her. "Treating alimony," said Judge Scott, "as the equivalent of that obligation for support which arises in favor of the wife out of the marriage contract, and which is lost when that contract is annulled by the decree, she obtains the same obligation for support by a second marriage. It is unreasonable that she should have the equivalent of an obligation for support by way of alimony from a former husband and an obligation from a present husband for an adequate support at the same time."

TWO ITALIANS closed their candy store at Savannah, Ga., paid the rent three months in advance, told the owner that they were going to Italy to get a stock of goods, and cautioned him to let nobody enter the premises until they returned. They had murdered a peddler, taken his $2,000, and hidden his body in the store; but their ingenious way of covering their flight prevented the discovery until the three months had elapsed.

"Are sisters Sally and Nancy resources, pa?"

"No, my boy; why do you ask that question?"

"Because I heard Uncle Joe say that if you would only husband your resources you would get along a great deal better than you do."

Astronomer Proctor says the world will last 50,000,000 years yet. That will do. Any man who demands more is a hog.
