OUT WEST.

HERMAN C. MERIVALE.

Under the forest, of its snows unladen,
And kissing back the nervous kiss of spring,
I sit and dream of courtly knight and maiden,
And old-world pomp encompassing a king.

Out of her wintry sleep the earth is waking,
And birds and flowers carol her reveille;
O'er East and West the common promise breaking,
Breathes the first whisper of their holiday.

Without, the mighty forms of things primæval
Stand all untenanted of Custom's robes;
Within, my mind shapes pictures mediæval,
With pencil fashioned forth in other globes.

The rugged miners share my board and pillow,
And by the camp-fire sing their lawless song;
But at a bound my thought o'errides the billow;
And breasts the strong surf by a flight as strong.

What do I here, among the waving grasses,
Which never learned to trim their graces wild?
While by my side Nature's rude army passes,
Another world still claims me for her child.

In vain I ply the ax in pass or clearing;
In vain I fill me with the unfettered air;
Still to my eyes are other scenes appearing,
Still my heart harkens to the low voice of Care.

Among our ranks no woman comes to harm us,
And sow us discord for our hands to reap;
No wiles and jars allure us or alarm us,
Or wanton with the mighty arm of Sleep.

Yet here, for me, though heart and will are master,
As strong as iron and as calm as Death,
The will will waver and the heart beat faster,
Touched by the memory of a woman's breath.

Why are ye here, rude fellows of my labor,
Thus outlawed from the bounds of woman's reign?
Read I, beneath the swart hues of my neighbor,
Another story of another pain?

She said she loved me—and one day she left me,
Without a warning, and without a word;
Of past and future at a blow bereft me;
The cause unspoken, and the plea unheard.

Behind me honor, and high hopes before me—
A life of earnest and a name of worth;
Her glamor shed the bright delusion o'er me;
Her presence kept the promise of my birth.

Then fell the blow, and past and future shivered,
Just at a fairy finger's heartless touch;
And from the bondage of a life delivered,
I laughed that I had trusted overmuch.

Laughed! and the echo of that hollow laughter
Rings in my heart with one eternal knell;
And the slow years which rolled their burden after,
With all the burden cannot crush the spell.

Pines of the Sierras, spread your mantles round me
And hide me from the past, untrodden West!
Oh! that the free lands and free souls which bound me
Could break the fetters of my prisoned breast!

In vain, in vain! Not the dividing ocean,
With all its storms one memory can drown;
While the vexed phantom of a lost devotion,
Still in the tortured bosom dies not down.

Up, and to work! The western spring invites me,
And Freedom calls me forth from among the free;
But no! Nor work nor freedom here delights me,
The Eastern bondage falls again on me.

—The Spectator.

A LIST of kidnapped British subjects between 1860 and 1881 shows a curious indication of the existing state of many countries that boast of being civilized. In Greece, brigands captured, but eleven years ago, in one swoop, Lord and Lady Muncaster, Mr. Herbert, Mr. Vyner, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd, and the latter's child. All the men were murdered except Lord Muncaster, released with the object of raising money for the ransom demanded. Mexican bandits captured three Englishmen one of whom was murdered, and the other two liberated upon ransom being paid by the British Government. Italian robbers seized five subjects; but Spain has tolerated more of these outrages than any other country. On four occasions they succeeded in making captures, and exacted large ransoms. Turkey is responsible for only two incivilities of this kind, but the sums demanded amounted in the aggregate to more than $120,000. In Sicily one individual of British birth was unfortunate enough to fall into the hands of brigands. In every instance where ransom has been paid, the British Government footed the bill.

SELDOM has a newspaper been issued under greater difficulties and amid less congenial surroundings than the News of the Camp, which was published during the 100 days' siege of Pretoria. The editor thus describes the conditions under which the feat was accomplished: "A bungalow for a printing office, with canvass thrown over its unfinished roof, through which the rain freely penetrated, a gentle waterspout running down the compositor's back as he stood with a bandolier of Martini-Henry cartridges over his shoulder, his white apron for a uniform, composing stick in hand, and his rifle lying suggestively near his printing frame; the editors' quarters, an army bell tent and a transport wagon, the space between ingeniously roofed in with a tattered sail stretched on telegraph poles; their work, editing a paper by day and on guard up to the knee in mud at night, or sleeping in a pair of leather breeches, long boots, and jack spurs." Forty numbers were issued.

"TOMMY, did you hear your mother call you?"

"Corse I did."

"Then why don't you go to her at once?"

"Well, you see she's nervous, and it'd shock her awful 'fi should go too suddent."

The owner of a large cranberry farm at Berlin, Wis., employs a hundred girls, and he promises to marry the one who picks the most berries this season, providing she wants him.

[La Fayette Daily Journal.]

Anxious to Rise.

There's plenty of room up stairs, as Daniel Webster said to the young lawyer anxious to rise, but despondent of his chance to do so; but no one need injure himself either in climbing the stairs of fame or those of his own house or business place. The following is to the point: Mr. John A. Hutchinson, Supt. Downer's Kerosene Oil Works, Boston, Mass., writes: Mr. Patton, one of our foremen, in walking up stairs last week sprained his leg badly. I gave him a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil to try. He used it and an almost instantaneous cure was effected.

He has the advantage of home spring water, which is better than hydrant water; 2d. He has the new improved block tin lined steel fountain, which makes any metalic contamination of the beverages impossible; the copper fountains, tin washed, are liable to poison; you are taking a great risk in drinking a beverage which when you discover the poison may be too late to remedy.
