MALARIA.

There is so much ignorance upon the subject of malaria that a few words are in order at a time when people are subject to malaria influences. Malaria, which means simply bad air, is the common name of a class of diseases, which commonly arise from spores of decaying vegetable matter, either rising from stagnant pools or piles of vegtation undergoing decomposition. These spores when inhaled with the breath or taken into the system with water soon enter the blood and germinating there find a foothold, whence the whole system is poisoned by them and the various functions disordered. When the germ theory of disease was first exploited it was supposed that these spores were of animal matter, and like the bacteria in diptheria were propagated in the blood, but they are now conceived to be of vegetable origin, like the fungi found on decaying wood or in cellars. The source of this state of the air is generally swamps or stagnant pools, which, partially dried by the hot sun, send forth vapors loaded with this malarial poison. These vapors descend to the earth in the night cooled by the loss of temperature, and breathed by sleepers are readily inhaled. Hence persons living near stagnant pools or marshes are liable to be afflicted with chills and fever, and such localities are never healthy, though they are more so when the water is high. Again, the drainage of houses, slaughter houses, barns, etc., are a fertile source of malaria. As a general rule the drainage of tanneries in consequence of the lime used and the tannin in the water is not as objectionable as other drainage. Usually houses on bluffs or hills are but little subject to malaria, because they are above the poisoned vapors when they settle in the cooler air of the night. One will often notice coming into the neighborhood of one of these sluggish streams that pass through almost every village a most villainous smell, is caused by the offensive refuse which communicates its bad odor to the atmosphere especially on hot days. This absorbed into the system by the lungs or taken in through water, which also absorbs it from the air, poisons the blood and deranges the whole system. The poison is also developed in force in wells and springs when they become low, and the result of drinking there is the same as breathing the poisonous air. In a time of drought the great quantity of vegetation that dries up in the meadows, stubble fields and pastures, the cornfields and forest leaves produce the same effluvia.—On the prairies when large tracts of prarie ground are turned over, the decaying vegetation is a widespread cause of malaria. It will be noticed that whenever there is a long continued drought in the late summer and fall there is always an abundance of malaria. This is dry malaria, and is very common at such times.

MANURING.—As between these two methods of manuring—one for the crop, but tending to exhaust the soil, and the other to increase the permanent fertility of the land—the first is altogether preferable. It is probable that on no land can good crops be produced for a succession of years without adding to its fertility. What is taken from the soil by making its plant food soluble is more than offset by what is added in even the most concentrated manures above what can be used. The use of guano has been condemned by some farmers because after a few years it leaves the soil so poor that nothing will grow. But the fault is not in what is added to the soil to make the crop, but in failing to return to the soil what has been taken therefrom. Selling everything off the farm where guano has been used to grow the crops tends to sterility, But also it would be if the same money were expended in buying stable manure, but making none upon the farm. The difference is that the stable manure is not so immediately available, and the process of exhausting fertility would be slower.

TO PROTECT A SHINGLE ROOF FROM FIRE.—The editor of an Eastern paper says that a wash composed of lime, salt and fine sand, or wood ashes, put on in the ordinary way of whitewashing, renders the roof fifty-fold more safe against taking fire from falling cinders, or otherwise in case of fires in the vicinity. It pays the expense a hundred-fold in its preserving influence against the effect of the weather. The olden and more weather-beaten the shingles are, the more benefit derived; such shinglee are generally more or less warped, rough and cracked.—The application of the wash, by wetting the upper surface, restores them at once to their original or first form, thereby closing the space between the shingles, and the lime and sand, by filling up the cracks and spots in the shingle itself, prevent its warping for years if not forever.

WHEN TO APPLY LIME.—Lime is most usefully employed in the fall when manure has been plowed in. It then exerts its best effect in the best season. But if it could not be applied then it may be used at any time afterward, but better before a rain than after it. Lime should be covered in the soil as soon as possible to prevent too rapid carbonization, which would quickly take place on the surface when the lime is exposed to the atmosphere and the nightly dews. But lime is so useful under any circumstances that it will pay to apply it anywhere, at any time, and anyhow, so that it is not put out of the reach of the roots of the crop.

A STRONG, good-sized table is almost a necessity in the cellar. Jars that are too heavy to be lifted on and off shelves may be set on the table. Many cellars are sometimes infested with ants and other bugs. One way to keep them from clawing over the jars is to take the tin cans in which peaches or tomatoes came, set the legs of the table in the cans, and fill them half full of water.

SILVER that is not in use may be kept from tarnishing by burying it in a box or barrel of oat-meal.

Charcoal powder is excellent for polishing knives.

Never allow salt meats of any kind to boil hard.

THE DREAMER.

All the day the white-haired woman sits
Beside the open door and knits;
No living thing her dim eye sees,
As busy with old memories
She dreams her dreams of what has been,
And knits her old time fancies in.

She thinks of those who long ago
Went out across the threshold low;
How many times her listening ear
Had thought familiar footsteps near,
And when she started up to find
A dead leaf rustling in the wind.

But never as of those who lie
Beneath the wide and tender sky,
With folded hands on quiet breast
All wrapped about with peace and rest,
She thinks of them. For her they tread
The green earth with her. None are dead.

Though years have fallen like the leaves
About the graves where Summer weaves
Her grass fringed coverlet, to keep
Safe hid from us the ones asleep,
She sees them all. Not grass nor mould
Can hide the ones she loved of old.

She talks with them. When brown winged bee
Makes merry in the locust tree,
She thinks he comes and sits with her,
Whose voice was love's interpreter.
O dreamer! young again to-day,
What matter if your hair is gray?

Sometimes she thinks that round her knee
Her children play in happy glee,
And when they tired and sleepy grow,
She sings some song of long age,
And on her loving mother's breast
She rocks her little ones to rest.

O dreamer knitting all the day
Your dreams in with your stitches gray,
Yours is a happy, happy heart—
A haunted world from ours apart;
The years that turned your tresses gray
Have given you back your youth to-day.

THE SAD END OF JOBKINS.

'Twas love that, in the usual way,
Made Jobkins throw himself away.

He, being not extremely wise,
First on a maiden cast his eyes.

And, seeing she was fair and young,
He tried to speak, but lost his tongue.

A little later, it appears,
He lent the angel both his ears.

And, smitten with her many charms,
Unto the darling gave his arms;

But not before, in euchre play,
He'd thrown two splendid "hands" away.

Of course, he let his treasure win;
Then carelessly wiped off his chin;

And on a handkerchief so gay
He blew his nose then right away.

She looked, and then he, turning red,
Became confused and lost his head;

And stumbling when she smiled so sweet,
From under him slipped both his feet.

He argued, but her answer grand
Left him no leg on which to stand.

Now was the time for her to part,
And, lo! she stole away his heart.

Affrighted in the darksome hall,
His very flesh began to crawl.

And then his horror made it known
That he, alas! had no back-bone.

All that was left of Jobkins gay
Began to quickly melt away.

And he, who might have lived for years,
Dissolved completely into tears.

D. L. LOVE has been three times reported killed by Henry Lanier at West Point, Mass., and the last report proves true, the previous announcements having been based on the settled belief of the community that a tragedy was bound to happen. Love was betrothed to Miss Johnson, but she married Lanier instead. Then Love had an offensive explanation printed on the backs of the wedding cards which had been prepared, and sent them to the persons who were to have been invited to his wedding. Lanier demanded an apology, on pain of death, and Love replied in a published card, saying: "I was engaged to Miss Johnson when she married Lanier, dad been for some months, and everybody knew it. She received my attentions and presents up to the day before her marriage. She married him without any notice to me, only a few days before the date set for our nuptials, without returning my ring, letters, presents, &c., and has not yet returned the presents she accepted from me the day before her marriage, nor my letters, &c., and all the explanation I have is her note, received after marriage, which began by saying that I should no doubt be surprised (and I was) to learn that since she saw me Tuesday night she had concluded to marry another fellow; and she did Thursday. All my statements are facts, and I can substantiate them, and others beside myself know them to be true. Mr. Lanier has known all these facts since the day after his marriage, but I have received no intimation of his killing me, and don't expect to." The murder was committed, nevertheless, and the bridegroom is a fugitive.

IF a man be gracious to strangers it shows he is a citizen of the world, and that his heart is no island cut off from other lands, but a continent that joins them.

THE lives of men who have been always growing are strewed along their whole course with the things which they have learned to do without.—Phillips Brooks.

HER mother had remained at home, and she said very truly "there was nothing to mar the pleasure of the occasion."

QUARREL not rashly with adversities not yet understood, and overlook not the mercies often bound up in them; for we consider not sufficiently the good of evils, nor fairly compute the mercies Providence in things at first hand.—Sir Thomas Browne.

"Where is my daughter to-night?" is the title of a new song. We do not know anything about that particular daughter, but we saw a daughter going down the street the other night, and she was hanging on the arm of a young man who eats cloves.

WHAT a rare gift is that of manners! How difficult to define; how much more difficult to impart! Better for a man to possess them than wealth, beauty or talent; they will more than supply them all.—Bulwer Lytton.

STATE OF MARYLAND,
Executive Department.

PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, by the Constitution of Maryland, article 14, section 1, providing for amendments to the Constitution, it is made the duty of the Governor to order the publication of any bill proposing amendments as therein directed.

And whereas the following act of the General Assembly, passed at the January session, 1880, chapter 417, proposes an amendment to the Constitution to wit:

CHAPTER 417.

AN ACT to amend section five of article four of the Constitution of this State.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, Three-fifths of all the members of the two Houses concurring, that the following section be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to the constitution of this State, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof as herein provided, it shall supersede and stand in the place and instead of section five of article four of said constitution.

SEC. 5. After the election for judges as hereinbefore provided, there shall be held in this State, in every fifteenth year thereafter, on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November of such year, an election for judges as herein provided; and in case of death, resignation, removal or disqualification by reason of age or otherwise, of any judge, the Governor shall appoint a person duly qualified to fill said office, who shall hold the same until the next general election for members of the General Assembly, when a successor shall be elected, whose term of office shall be the same as hereinbefore provided; and upon the expiration of the term of fifteen years for which any judge may be elected to fill a vacancy, an election for his successor shall take place at the next general election for members of the General Assembly to occur upon or after the expiration of the said term; and the Governor shall appoint a person duly qualified to hold said office from the expiration of such term of fifteen years until the election and qualification of his successor.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the constitution shall be, at the next general election to be held in this State, submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in article fourteen of the constitution of this State; and at the said general election the vote on said proposed amendment to the constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words "for the constitutional amendment," or "against the constitutional amendment," as the voter shall elect, and immediately after said election due return shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said fourteenth article of the constitution.

Approved April 10, 1880.

Now, therefore, I, WILLIAM T. HAMILTON, Governor of the State of Maryland do hereby order that the said act of Assembly proposing an amendment to the Constitution as aforesaid be published in two newspapers to be designated in each county, where so many may be published, and where not more than one, in that newspaper, and in three newspapers published in the city of Baltimore, one of which shall be in the German language, once a week for at least three months preceding the general election to be held on the 8th day of November next.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State at the city of Annapolis, this 7th day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one.

WILLIAM T. HAMILTON.

By the Governor:
JAS. T. BRISCOE, Sec'y. of State.
