"Yes, sir," said the criminal lawyer, "that fellow is an ungrateful whelp. Nobody ever saw a dead dude. Death goes around knocking out old men, decrepit old blind women, helpless infants and feeble cripples, but we reckon when it comes to the pinch he's kind of ashamed to strike a dude. There are humiliating depths of degradation from which even death shrinks.—Hawkeye.

The following notes of a speech recently delivered in Dublin are not without interest.—Speaking of the much-vexed Irish land question the speaker said:

'The country is overrun by absentee landlords,' and, after a magnificent peroration, delivered from the tub on which he was standing, he said: 'I tell you the cup of old Ireland's misery is overflowing; aye, and its not full yet.'—N. Y. Sun.

New York has just had a swell, titled wedding. The Baroness Nadine de Huppmah was wedded at St. Patrick's Cathedral to Count Krakowski. Two grammarians were wrangling the other day, one contending that it was only proper to say—'My wages is high,' while the other noisily insisted that the correct thing was—'My wages are high.' Finally, they stopped a day laborer, and submitted the question to him. 'Which do you say—'Your wages is high,' or 'Your wages are high?'

The other evening a masher addressed some language to a woman on the street. The woman had a closed umbrella in her hands at the time, and she hit the masher in the face with it in a dreamy and incidental manner five or six times, and then had him arrested. The next morning the masher was arraigned in front of the judge, and his honor looked him in the face and said, as he marked down $5 and costs:

'Don't you bring down any more repose work in here.'

'What's repousse work?' faltered the masher, toying with his lacerated countenance.

'Why, hammered brass, of course,' explained his honor. The masher groaned.—Rockland Courier-Gazette.

Doctor—Have you got the better of the ague yet?

Patient—No, sor. Me and me wife is as bad as iver, sor.

Doctor—Did you get that whiskey and quinine I prescribed?

Patient—Yis, sor; but it did no good at all, at all.

Doctor—That is strange! You took it according to the directions. I suppose?

Patient—Yis, sor; ye know a man and his wife are one.

Doctor—What has that to do with it?

Patient—Well, ye see, sor, bein' as we are one flesh, I tuk the whiskey and gave Biddy the quinine.—Phila. Call.

'Say, George, I am going to pop—'

The young man reached for his hat with a frightened expression of countenance, and faltered out something about an engagement with a man down at the hotel.

'Why, George, you ain't going so early, are you? I was just going to say that if you'd stay a little while longer I'd pop—'

George disappeared through the parlor door, and was hastily fumbling for the catchlock in the hall.

'Say, George—what's the matter?' she cried, rushing out after him. 'What are you going away in such a hurry for? If you'll stop just a few moments longer I'll pop—'

But George was thrashing around in the storm-house, and jabbing the door all over to find the latch. He finally burst a hinge off, and was kiting down the path like a frightened deer when his girl stuck her head out into the frosty air and dawled so that she could be heard a block away.

'Say, george! if you'll come back I'll pop some corn!'

George came back.—Burlington Free Press.

'George, dear, do you know that papa doesn't ke you very well?'

'Oh, yes,' said George.

'And he has said that I mustn't receive you any more at the house.'

'Good for him,' replied the young man, heartily.

'And,' continued the girl, with a blanched face, 'I hear him now in the woodshed untying the dog.''

'Yes, I hear him; but he is standing terribly in the dog's light. Does he hate the dog?'

'No, George, dear, he hates you. But what in the world will you do? You will surely have an encounter with the ferocious animal when you go out.'

George smiled a superior smile and said:

'My dear, as you know, I am a book agent. My income is derived solely from selling books. This afternoon I sold an editor of a daily paper an encyclopedia, a pronouncing dictionary and a gazetteer of natural history. It took me ten minutes. I shall spend five minutes with the dog.'—Phila. Call.

FOR THE YOUNG FOLKS.

Two Little Girls I Know.

I know a little girl
(You? Oh, no!)
Who, when she's asked to go to bed,
Does just so:
She brings a dozen wrinkles out,
And takes the dimples in;
She puckers up her pretty lips,
And then she does begin:
"Oh, dear me! I don't see why!
All the others sit up late,
And why can't I?"

Another little girl I know,
With curly pate,
Who says, "When I'm a great big girl,
I'll sit up late.
But mamma says 'will make me grow
To be an early bird,'
So she and dolly trot away
Without another word.
Oh, the sunny smile, and the eyes so blue,
And—why, yes, now I think of it,
She looks like you.

A Grateful Dog.

Captain Burton, the Oriental traveler, is British consul at Trieste, the Austrian seaport. He and Mrs. Burton are in the habit of spending two or three days each week at a rustic inn in the mountains above Trieste. While there, an interesting incident occurred which showed the gratitude of a dog.

The landlord of this inn had a dog of nondescript breed, but with a great deal of sense and a grateful heart; and he attached himself very warmly to the English lady and gentleman, whom he must have recognized as friends of his race.

The landlord, who was probably aware that too much meat is not good for dogs, used to be in the habit of shutting him up on Sundays, lest he should go from table to table and be overfed by the visitors

Mrs. Burton tried to mitigate this hardship by saving her own scraps and taking them to the dog, that he might not think himself forsaken; and he quite understood her kind motive.

Now it happened one week that Captain Burton was taken ill at this mountain inn, and was obliged to remain there three whole days in bed.

His four-footed friend knew and interpreted it after his own fashion, and the method of this doggish reasoning was this:

"I used to be shut up that I might not have any meat, and Captain Burton is now being treated just the same."

So when his master threw him a piece of meat, he did not eat it, though he took it in his teeth and growled ferociously if any one offered to come near him.

By-and-by, when he saw the way clear, he took the food in his mouth and trotted off to his friend's bedroom door, where he sat very patiently till some one opened it in order to come out.

This was the dog's opportunity, and he rushed in, jumped on the bed, laid the meat down within reach of his mouth, licked his hand, and trotted away again.

His meaning could hardly have been clearer if he had been able to talk; and you will not be surprised to hear that his friends adopted him as one of their own circle, and having so good a master and mistress, is now one of the happiest dogs in the world.

An amusing episode recently occurred in Judge Barnum's courtroom during the hearing of an ejectment case, says the Chicago Times. A little boy of eight years was presented by one side as a witness, and the opposing counsel objected.

'Do you know what an oath is?' asked the Court.

'Yes, sir,' answered Charley. 'It is to ask God to help you tell the truth.'

'Where did you learn all this?' frowned the opposing counsel.

'In the catechism,' said Charley, not to be frowned down or sat upon by the biggest lawyer in the business.

'In the Catechism? What catechism?'

'In the ten cent catechism, sir.'

'Who told you to look in the catechism?'

'My sister. She told me last night, and I got it and studied it.'

'Have you got your catechism with you?'

'Yes, sir. Here it is,' and the well-thumbed little pamphlet was forthwith produced from the depths of that mysterious receptacle for all odds and ends, the trousers-pocket.

'You see the boy has his documents,' interposed the court with a smile, and a quiet titter went around the courtroom as it became evident that the legal luminary was being "downed" by the child.

'Hm'm! Let me see the book. I wonder if you know anything more that's in it. Who made you?'

'Why, God, o' course,' was the reply, as if the lad pooh-poohed the idea of being asked such a simple question, and wanted 'somethin' hard.'

Several questions were asked, and elicited ready replies. The lawyer, though loath to "acknowledge the corn," saw that he was in for it, and accepted defeat as gracefully as possible. Turning to the Court he said:

'Your honor, I think we will accept this witness, and as for this little book, I would submit it to my learned friend, the counsel for the other side, and recommend its careful perusal by him. It will do him good.'

A Warm and Cosy est.

The moss-bumble-bee builds his nest of moss. When a bird builds a nest he carries his bits of straw and wood in his beak. But the bumble-bee does not take his bits of moss in his mouth and fly away with it to his nest; he pushes it along on the ground

Three or four bumble-bees always work together. One of them takes a bit of moss in her mouth, shakes it with her forefeet, passes it on to her next pair of feet, then seizes it with her hind feet and pushes it towards the nest.

The second bumble-bee does the same, and then the third, and so on, till they have pushed the moss to the nest. Then they break it into bits with their mouths and stick it on.

The nest is lined with a sticky substance as thick as paper. This keeps out the rain. If you should take up a nest of the moss bumble-bee, you would see that it looks quite a bird's-nest bottom side up.

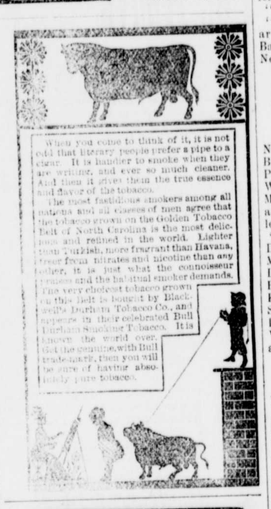

There is a winding entrance to the nest, and a bee always stands at the door, to keep out ants and field-mice, who like to eat the cocoons or eggs. You know a soldier who keeps guard is called a sentinel. So this bee is called the sentinel bee.—Little Men and Women.

The Intelligence of Birds.

Dr. Charles C. Abbott describes in Science some interesting experiments on the intelligence of birds. When he girdled branches on which birds had built their nests and thereby caused the foliage to shrivel up so that the nests were exposed, the birds abandoned the nests, although they had already laid their eggs. But in a case in which a nest already contained young birds, the old birds remained, notwithstanding the exposure of the nest, until the young ones were able to fly. He placed a number of pieces of woolen yarn—red, yellow, purple, green and grey in color—near a tree in which a pair of Baltimore orioles were building a nest. The pieces of yarn were all exactly alike except in color. There was an equal number of each color, and the red and yellow pieces were purposely placed on top. The birds chose only the grey pieces, putting in a few purple and blue ones when the nest was nearly finished. Not a red, yellow or green strand was used. Dr. Abbott concludes from his observations of the building of birds' nests that the female bird is exacting, obstinate and tyrannical, and not at all disposed to give in to the wishes of her lord and master. The site of the nest is selected after careful examination of suitable locations by both birds

When you come to think of it, it is not odd that literary people prefer a pipe to a cigar. It is handier to smoke when they are writing, and ever so much cleaner. And then it gives them the true essence and flavor of the tobacco.

The most fastidious smokers among all nations and all classes of men agree that the tobacco grown on the Golden Tobacco Belt of North Carolina is the most delicious and refined in the world. Lighter in grade, more fragrant than Havana, freer from nitrates and nicotine than any other, it is just what the connoisseur requires and the habitual smoker demands.

The very choicest tobacco grown on this belt is bought by Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Co., and prepared in their celebrated Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco. It is known the world over. Get the genuine, with Bull trade-mark, then you will be sure of having also purely pure tobacco.

JOHN N. DODD

FUNERAL DIRECTOR

—AND—

Furnishing UNDERTAKER,

CHESTERTOWN, MD.

CASKETS, Burial Cases, Coffins, Fine Cloth Work, Shrouds, Burial Robes, Merino and Satin Linings, &c., of all descriptions and kinds, and all the requisites of first-class Funeral Furnishings constantly on hand, or furnished at the very lowest prices.

METALIC COFFINS and CASKETS,

Furnished upon short notice when desired.

full line of
SHROUDS and BURIAL ROBES.

Patent Improved

COLD AIR ICE CASKETS for the preservation of the dead; also Embalming Fluids. I have recently introduced a remarkably cheap BLACK CLOTH CASKET, which in appearance is almost equal to the finest. Remember I do not confine myself exclusively to fine and high-priced work, but have an endless variety at medium and low prices.

I have THREE HEARSES, two large ones and one small white one for children and young persons; and with my handsome new Glass Hearse and fine pair of Black Horses, can furnish as fine a Funeral Turnout as can be seen in our large cities. I am constantly adding new features and improvements to my business, in order to keep up with the times; and as there are such changes in style and kind constantly going on, and, as is generally the custom, some friend is called into the embarrassing position of ordering what he supposes may be wanted, it would be much more satisfactory to all concerned to name the price of the article wanted

☞ ALWAYS REMEMBER that I guarantee to furnish anything in my line, of the same kind and quality, at lower prices than any other establishment of the kind. Ever grateful for the very liberal patronage heretofore extended me, I respectfully beg a continuance of the same.

☞ Residence second door above my shop.

Respectfully,

Aug 10—tf. JOHN N. DODD.
