WIT, HUMOR AND WISDOM.

"BLESSED IS HE WHO CAN UNDERSTAND A JOKE, FOR VERILY THERE BE SOME WHO KNOW NOT A JOKE WHEN THEY SEE IT."
—A more or less ancient proverb.

Yes, Alonzo, you are indeed correct, 'a living dog is better than a dead lion.' Especially for rats. But if you should happen to want a lion skin for a rug, why of course a live dog wouldn't help you out a cent's worth.—Anon

'My dear,' said an aristocratic old Brahma hen to one of her little ones, 'you mustn't scratch gravel with that no-account Bantam chicken.'

'Why not, mamma?' asked the little chick, who, not having had very much experience in the world, was naturally very much surprised.

'Why not?' repeated the mother, 'because the Bantams do not belong to our set.'—Anon.

'There is a fine specimen of a bull-dog,' remarked Smith to Jones at the dog show.

'Yes, he is a beauty.'

'You ought to have a dog like that, Jones. Living in the suburbs, as you do, a watch-dog is almost a necessity.'

'No, it isn't,' replied Jones, wearily. 'A man who has seven daughters, all unmarried and over twenty-two, stands in his own light if he keeps a dog.'—Anon.

'Is this a free fight!' inquired a man with his coat off, in a wild Western town as he bustled up to a struggling crowd. He was told it was.

'Then count me in!' said he, as he tumbled headlong into the heaving mass.

In five minutes he came out with a bloody nose, bunged eyes, and a wopperjawed phiz. Wiping the blood out of his eyes, he inquired again of the crowd:

'Is this a free fight?'

'Yes, it is,' was the reply.

'Then count me out,' he replied, as he slipped on his coat and took down a back alley on a dog-trot.—Hatchet.

'You're a nice man, ain't you? The idea of as big a man as you being brought here for whipping you wife, as small and delicate a woman as she is. Ain't you ashamed of yourself?'

'Well, Judge, I must confess that I am ashamed of myself. She's a little and apparently weak woman, and that's why I am ashamed of myself, fur I know I ought to be able to lick her, but I can t. She jist laid me out quicker: and I ll bet she can lick you ur any other man in town. She's about half cat and the other half lightnin'.'

His Honor surveyed the little woman, got frightened and told them both to go home.—Kentucky Journal.

Never talk back! such things is reprehensible;
A fellow only corks hisse'f that jaws a man that's hot;
In a quarrel, ef you'll only keep your mouth shet and be sensible,
The man that does the talkin' 'll git worsted every shot.

Never talk back to a feller that's abusin' you—
Jest let him carry on, and rip and cuss and swear;
And when he finds his lyin' and his cussin's jest amusin' you,
You've got him clean kerflummixed, and you want to hold him there.

Never talk back, and wake up the whole community,
And call a man a liar, howsomever that's his fix;
You can lift and land him furder and with graceful impunity
With one good jolt of silence than a half a dozen kicks.

—James Whitcomb Riley.

'What are you hanging around here for?' asked a policeman of a suspicious looking character, who was lounging about the car shed.

'Oh, I'm just waiting,' meekly replied the man.

The officer moved on, but kept a close watch on the waiting man, and presently beheld his fingers coming into too close proximity with a gentleman's watch chain.

Instantly the arm of law was heavily laid on the would-be thief's shoulder, and the policeman asked:

'What have you been waiting for?'

Seeing that he was caught, the stranger replied: 'I've been waiting for an opportunity.'

'I've been waiting, too,' again spoke the officer.

'What for?'

'To see that you get nothing but the opportunity; we have both been satisfied, so come along and wait till the court meets to-morrow;' and as the key turned on him, the prisoner began whistling, 'Wait till the clouds roll by.'—Atlanta Constitution.

'Good gracious,' said the grocery man in alarm, 'I am sorry for your pa, if he has got his head set on going into politics. I was in politics once myself, and it has taken me five years to get out and pay my debts, and now every ward politician owes me for groceries. You see they came to me and wanted me to run for supervisor. They said I was just the man they wanted, a man with a large head, one who was a business man, and who would not kick at the expenditure of a few dollars when he could make a barrel of money. They said if I was on the board of supervisors, I could be placed on a committee that handled the funds, and I could make the purchase of groceries and provisions for all the county institutions, the poor house, house of correction, insane asylum, hospitals, and everything, and I could buy them at my own store at my own price, and in two years I could be rich as any man in town. Well, I never had a proposition strike me so favorably, and I went in head over appetite. For a month I went around every night and day, spending money, and the politicians came to the store and traded when I was out, and had it charged, and when the caucus was held I only got one vote for supervisor, and I voted that myself. Well, the politicians tried to explain to me, but I bought a revolver, and they kept away. Do you know, the next day after the caucus I didn't have twenty dollars worth of groceries in the store, and the clerk was dying of lonesomeness? Whatever your pa does, don't let him go into politics, for he will bring up in an inebriate asylum, sure.'

'Well, pa has got it bad, but he is too numerous. He has been yearning two years for a political campaign to open. I don't suppose there is a citizen who enjoys politics as much as pa. He stays out nights till the last place is closed, and is the first man on deck in the morning.—He has drank more candidates, more different times, than anybody, and when he is so full that he can't drink he takes cigars and brings them home. His guests have been smoking up old election cigars ever since the Hancock campaign, and some of them are awful. But this time they are going to run pa for alderman, and he has opened the campaign with a cork screw. Pa thinks that the position of alderman is greater than governor, because aldermen wear a badge and have influence. He wants to please everybody and he has promised to put ninety-seven men on the police force, has promised forty-four men the position of bridge tender, and there is only one bridge in his ward. He promised the saloon keepers to reduce the price of licenses, and allow them to keep open all night. He has promised the prohibition temperance people to raise saloon licenses to a thousand dollars and close every saloon in town. The result is going to be if he is not elected he will kill himself, and if he is elected the people will kill him, so somebody must save pa.'—Peck's Sun.

"Puffing Billy."

One bright day in June, 1781, a group of miners who had just finished their work were standing around Wylam Pit, near Newcastle, England.

Word was passed from one to another that a baby boy had been born in old Bob's cabin. Old Bob, the engineman at the pit, had a houseful of children already, but he and his wife had plenty of love for the new-comer, whom they called Geordie.

Wee Geordie Stephenson was not born with a silver spoon in his mouth. His father's house was a rough hut, with unplastered walls and a floor of clay.

Geordie began to work when he was less than seven years old, at twopence per day. A lady paid him this sum for looking after her cows. When a little older, he was taken on at the colliery as a 'picker,' receiving sixpence a day, and at fourteen he became his father's assistant at a shilling a day. A year or two later he was given the charge of an engine of his own. It became his pet, and never had engine better care.

At eighteen years of age George Stephenson could not read. He was wide awake, and had a great longing for knowledge, but did not understand the alphabet. This could not be borne.

He went to a night school, and paid threepence a week to be taught spelling, reading, and writing, and soon a Scotch minister who knew him undertook to teach him figures. He worked very hard, and made great progress.

In his leisure hours, when he was not busy with his engine or studying, he made and mended shoes. Bit by bit he saved a little money, and by and by was able to marry.

I suppose you are wondering what all this has to do with Puffing Billy. Have patience; I am coming to that part of my story.

Though James Watt had invented the working steam-engine, as yet there was no traveling steam-engine. It was George Stephenson who first laid rails, found out what the locomotive could do when attached to cars, and sent the iron horse spinning along the line. His first locomotive was called Puffing Billy.

If you were to peep into some of the public journals of the England of 1825 you would laugh at the fright the people felt at this monster, which fed on coals and water, and flew over the road at the rate of eighteen miles an hour. Some thought it was like witchcraft.

Others gravely said that one might as well be shot off by a rocket at once as put themselves at the mercy of such a machine as this.

George Stephenson kept quietly on, plodding at everything he attempted, until he had found out its secrets. Whatever he did he did with all his might. When men opposed him he did not lose his temper, but only said, 'Wait awhile and you will see.'

'Suppose, Mr. Stephenson,' said a grumbling somebody, thinking he was advancing a terrible objection to the new iron horse—'suppose a cow should happen to be on your line!'

'Well,' replied Stephenson, very coolly, 'it would be a bad job for the coo.' So it is all through life, boys. When a brave, wise man has a new and brilliant thought, it will never be put a stop to by any 'coo.'—Harper's Young People.

Geo. W. Cable's Five Children.

[Springfield (Mass.) Republican.]

George W. Cable, the New Orleans novelist, spent Sunday with friends in Monson, attended the Congregational church, and was invited to talk to the Sunday-school in the afternoon. Mr. Cable's fondness for children is proverbial, and he accepted. In the course of his remarks he raised his hand, expanded the digits, and said: 'I have so many children at home. How many is that?' 'Five,' piped up a youngster promptly. 'And half of them are girls,' continued the speaker, staggering his audience with his apparent reckless disregard of the truth. 'How much is a half of five?' asked Mr. Cable. 'Two and a half,' reproachfully replied a little miss in the front pew. 'Yes,' said the novelist, with benignant smile, as he saw that his reputation for veracity was fast slipping away, 'two and a half of them are girls and the other two and a half, too—five girls.' 'Oh,' gasped the little miss with a look of relief, and then a ripple of laughter bubbled up from the corner where the 'bird's nest' class sat, floated over the backs of the pews, climbed into the gallery, and died away in the organ loft.

ALMOST every father knows about the inquisitive boy, and frequently has occasion to wish his boys were girls. A North Hill farmer began shaving himself in the presence of his four-year-old hopeful. The boy commenced and kept on with a result some what as follows:

'What are you doing, papa?'

'Shaving.'

'What are you shaving for?'

'To get my face clean.'

'Why don't you wash your face to get it clean? 'At's the way I do.'

'I shave to get the hair off.'

'What hair?'

'The hair that grows on my face.'

'What hair that grows on your face?'

'My whiskers.'

'What are whiskers, papa?'

'Hair that grows on the face.'

'What does the whisker hair grow on the face for?'

'I don't know.'

'Why don't you know why whisker hairs grow on the face?'

'Because——'

The interview came to a sudden termination. A long gash and flowing blood was the cause, with the sudden departure of young America in his mother's arms as an incident.—Philadelphia Call.

In the Museum.

A teacher was showing a class through a museum, explaining to them many of the wonderful things to be seen.

'Now, this is the skeleton of a mastodon, Johnny; can you tell me to what kind of a mastodon this skeleton belongs?'

'It belongs to a dead one, sir.'

A bright boy, whose parents were discussing at the breakfast table the many and expensive gifts at a wedding the previous evening, mastered the 'wedding-present question by exclaiming:

'Why, father, such a wedding would pay expenses pretty well, wouldn't it?'

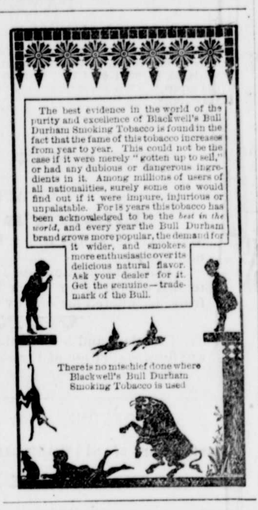

PROFESSOR (to class in history)—'Why does an Indian usually make up his mind more quickly than a white man?'

Small boy (near the foot)—'Because he mostly has less mind to make up.'

The best evidence in the world of the purity and excellence of Blackwell's Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco is found in the fact that the fame of this tobacco increases from year to year. This could not be the case if it were merely "gotten up to sell," or had any dubious or dangerous ingredients in it. Among millions of users of all nationalities, surely some one would find out if it were impure, injurious or unpalatable. For 18 years this tobacco has been acknowledged to be the best in the world, and every year the Bull Durham brand grows more popular, the demand for it wider, and smokers more enthusiastic over its delicious natural flavor. Is the only Machine with a successful Phosphate Attachment for dropping in the hill. The Evans is a strong, simple machine; excelled by none as to quality and price.

BUCKEYE RIDING CULTIVATOR!
This implement is well known in Kent County. It excells all other machines in the following points:
It has Rotary Shields, the best and only practical shield made. The shovels are strong, scour well, are adjustable to throw earth to or from the corn. Depth is regulated from the seat without stopping the team. Has high wheels, and will pass over corn in the last plowing. Is worth twice its cost in preparing fallow and corn ground for wheat.
Is easier to manage than any other Cultivator now before the public.

Buckeye Twine Binder
Appleby Binding Attachment, Wrought Iron Drive-wheel, Strong Frame.
Handy Double Adjustable wheel, B shaped cutter box.
Easily managed, perfectly automatic.
The Buckeye is an old standard machine, and was as near perfect three years ago as other Binders are to day.

TO FARMERS
We say don't buy a delicate Self Binder, it may do nice work one year, but you will have need of sympathy about the second or third year you use it. Buy a Standard machine, one that won't rack to pieces in two or three years.
No Binder in the market is as thoroughly stayed and braced as the Buckeye. Call on our agent and have him explain it to you. Examine the

BUCKEYE LOW DOWN OR PLATFORM BINDER.

Nichols, Shepard & Co.
Engines and Vibrators
THE N. S. & CO. TRACTION ENGINE
Is the Strongest built, Most Powerful and Easiest Handled Machine yet produced. These points were thoroughly illustrated on the streets in Chestertown, Tuesday, April 22d last. All persons who saw how quickly our competitors left the field will readily understand that they did so because they saw that their engine would not handle as easily and quickly as the N. S. & Co. Engine. We challenge any and all engines on the market for quality of material, strength of build, finish, ease of management, economy in fuel and water, and power.

VIBRATOR.
Nichols Shepard & Co., of Battle Creek, Michigan, built the first Vibrator ever produced, and have continued to build them for 33 years. So sweeping has been the success of these machines that all other builders of threshing machines have been driven to imitating them. The most valuable features of these machines are fully covered by letters patent and cannot be used on any other machine.
Simplicity, Durability, Ease of management, Great Capacity are the strong points of this machine.
Our 36 inch Vibrator with a sufficient numbers of teams and men will, if kept full, thresh sure and clean 1800 bushels per day, and do it better than any apron machine ever made. We leave to your own engineers and threshermen to pass judgment on these machines.

Repairs for Both Always on Hand.

BUCKEYE GLASS FEED DRILL!
NO MORE CLOGGING.
NO MORE RUSTING.
NO MORE UNEVEN SEEDING OF PHOSPHATE.
The Phosphate Feeders in this Drill are made of ½ inch thick glass. Won't rust, won't corrode. Phosphate drops in plain sight of man following the Drill. Quantity changed from 100 to 800 lbs. per acre in one second. No cogs to change. This Drill is the best result of all previous Grain Drills, combined and improved. We noticed one crop of wheat a short distance above Chestertown, so poorly drilled that the owner will lose enough wheat to pay for two Drills. No implement on the farm should be selected with more care than a Grain Drill. Upon its good work depends the whole crop of wheat. This is an important matter. The number of these Drills to be obtained this year is limited, and farmers must place orders at once to be sure of obtaining them.
