There's a love for the girl in the sealskin sacque,
And a love for the girl without;
There's a love for the girl who never goes back
On her young man with a doubt.
There's a love for the girl who's got the tin,
And a love for the girl who's none;
There's a love for the girl of the rolling pin
Who knows when the pies are done.

'Look here, waiter,' called a feeder at a city restaurant, 'look at the hair I found in this turtle soup.'

Dumley came into the dining-room and, casting a sweeping glance over the table, jammed down into his chair and muttered under his breath:

A medical journal states that the average Chinese baby weighs but five pounds. The journal did not state whether the Chinese baby's capacity for squalling was less, in proportion to weight, than that of any other baby, but if they howl in the Chinese language as loud as the American kid does in the United States language, how the poor mother must suffer. If any one has ever heard two Chinamen holding a convention in their native tongue, they can readily see that a child who is just learning to lisp a few syllables in the Chinese language would make Rome howl.—Peck's Sun.

Good heavens, child, weren't you terribly embarrassed?'

'No, mamma.'

'What did you do?'

'I just looked at it and said to Mr. Brown, "W'y, Mr. Brown, you lost your handkercher," and, mamma, you ought to seen him blush, and so did auntie.'—Anon.

Samples of the white elephant prize poems as suggested by the New York Times.

From the purple and passion of rivers
Filled full with bright panthers and priests;

With longings for fish and for feasts:

With the silence and shimmer of song;
Thou art come to our clasp and caresses,
Our Toung Talong. —Swinburne.

The bright brush hovered o'er the victim's hide:
Touched—and my flanks were white.

'I can't finish plastering your house until I get more sand,' said a plasterer to a groceryman the other day.

'How much sand will you require?' asked the groceryman.

'About three bushels will do, I guess.'

'Here, John,' said the groceryman, 'roll out another barrel of that brown sugar and send it up to my new house. I want to keep the plasterers at work.'

'That won't do,' said the plasterer.

'Why, isn't that good sand?'

'Not very good; and besides, those bees in the garden will be constantly trying to suck the sweetness out of the sand after it is plastered on the walls.'

'Not much, my friend. Guess you don't know my sugar. If the bees suck any sweetness out of it they will do some of the dangdest hardest sucking you ever saw!'—Paris Beacon.

Mrs Singleton put her head over the fence and thus addressed her neighbor who was hanging out her week's washing,—

'Not particularly.'

'Two loads and I wouldn't give a dollar a load for it. Carpets! I wouldn't put them down in my kitchen. And the children! I won't allow mine to associate with them, you bet. And the mother! She looks as if she had never known a day's happiness. The father drinks, I expect. Too bad that such people should come into this neighborhood. I wonder who they are?'

'I know them.'

'Do you? Well, I declare. Who are they?'

'The mother is my sister, and the father is superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school.'

Gus De Smith imagines that he is the best solo singer in Austin, but nobody else thinks so. Whenever he is present at a social gathering, he bribes somebody present to call on him for a song, and then he warbles forth a madrigal that has a depressing effect even on the real estate in that neighborhood. After a performance of this kind a few nights ago, Mrs. McSpillkins, who does not live happily with her husband, remarked to Gus with whom she is quite familiar:

'Oh, how I wish my husband could sing like that!'

'Ah!' responded Gus; 'I expect you would like it. There would be more harmony in the family.'

'It's not that, but if he sung like you, I'd have no trouble getting a divorce on the ground of cruelty and brutal treatment.'

Then Gus ceased to smile and smirk.—Texas Siftings.

FOR THE YOUNG FOLKS.

The Wicked Old Batchelor and the Lion.

BY EVA F. L. CARSON.

Once a Wicked Old Bachelor, hating small boys,
Swore he certainly would put a stop to their noise.
"It is really distressing—it's dreadful," he said.
"I am sometimes afraid I'll go out of my head.

"There's the two little Browns, with their trumpets and drums;
There's the Joneses, who whistle by means of their thumbs;
And that Spinner, whose voice is so shrill—though he's small—
And so loud that he needs no assistance at all.

"There's the Smiths and the Tompkins, and twenty beside,
'Twere a blessing, I'm sure, if a few of them died.
I am not a bit cruel—oh, no, not at all!—
But I shudder in thinking how loud they can bawl."

So this Wicked Old Bachelor made up a plan
(As a matter of duty he owed fellow-man),
To go out, one dark night, to a neighboring town,
Where he heard they had brought a menagerie down.

There he purchased a Lion, grim, ugly, and old,
Who, because of his age, for a trifle was sold.
But he hated, they said, above all things, a noise,
And for dinner preferred, above all things, small boys.

And then home the Old Bachelor stealthily came;
And the Lion he carefully led by the mane
(I suppose he was cautious in not pulling hard)
And he prudently shut him up in the back yard.

The next morning, the Browns, with their trumpets and drums,
So gaily marched, singing, "See the hero; he comes."
And the Wicked Old Bachelor smiled a sad smile,
As he gently invited them in for a while.

Next "that Spinner," the dear little lamb, skipped along,
Shouting, sweetly and shrlly, his dear little song.
And the Wicked Old Bachelor came with a spring,
Crying: 'Come to my parlor, dear Spinner, and sing!'

Then the Joneses, the darlings, who whistled and ran,
Were invited to stop by this wicked old man.
And the Smiths and the Tompkins—a dozen or more—
They went in, but they never came out of, that door!

And the Lion waxed fat—yes, indeed; and he kicked.
His old eyes he winked, and his old chops he licked;
He wagged his old tail, and remarked, with a roar,
To the Wicked Old Bachelor: "More—give me more!"

And the Wicked Old Bachelor shook in his shoes.
When a Lion is asking, ah!—who can refuse?
Yes; he shuddered to think of a time coming fast,
When the season for finding small boys should be past.

When the crop of small boys for the year was used up,
And the Lion was hungry, on what should he sup?
'Twas a serious question. A stray dog or cat
He might find; but how much for a Lion was that?

And, alas! all too soon came that terrible morn,
When the Lion was hungry, and small boys were gone.
And fiercely he glared, with a terrible roar,
At the Wicked Old Bachelor—"More, give me more!"

Then the Wicked Old Bachelor dropped in affright.
He fell down on his wicked old knees—served him right.
And the Lion observed: "It's a pity he's tough;
But, still, it's important I should have enough!"

So he opened his mouth in an unpleasant style,
And he ate the Old Bachelor up, with a smile.
But 'twas too much for even a Lion's digestion—
That he lived after that meal is out of the question!

The Tragedy of the Apple.

A was the apple, so rosy and red, that lay all alone on the shelf.
B was the boy, the wicked boy, who wanted that apple himself.
C was the chair he determined to climb, and reach for the coveted pelf.
D was the door, slightly ajar, through which mamma came in by stealth.
E was the ear, suddenly seized, as sudden the blow she dealt.
F was the fright, the awful fright, the boy, the wicked boy felt.
G was the grin from the little sister, who had wanted that apple to take.
H was the hand that administered the blow as well as the shake.
I was the ire that filled mamma's soul, as the boy his intentions did own.
J was the joy the little sister experienced at having left that apple alone.
K was the knuckle the boy rubbed in his eyes, as tears both his cheeks ran down.
L was the laughter another boy indulged in, as he stood and looked in from outside.
M was mamma, who had arrived just in time her predatory urchin to chide.
N was the neighbor, passing along, who wondered why the boy cried.
O was the oration delivered by mamma to the penitent boy at her feet.
P was the picnic that took place in a room somewhat back from the street.
Q was the question mamma debated with what her dear boy she should beat.
R was the resolve, and the boy was bade the instrument of torture to get.
S was the slipper, so delicate and small, the cause of his eyes being wet.
T were the tears the wicked boy shed, as he felt he was not mamma's pet.
U was the unrest he experienced that night, as at the supper table he sat.
V was the vow he solemnly made to take it all out on the cat.
W was the whaling he got from papa when he heard what his son had been at.
X were the excuses the wicked boy made all in vain.
Y the youth's promises never to do so again.
Z was the zeal with which the father laid on the cane.
&c. was the apple, so rosy and red, that still lay all alone on the shelf.
—Golden Days.

Annie was sobbing as she entered the library, and placed her head sorrowfully on her grandfather's arm.

'What is it?' said the old gentleman, softly.

'Is'e dot sumpfin' in my eye!' she wept.

A long search revealed nothing.

'There's nothing in it,' said the good grandfather.

'Yes there is!' protested Annie, ''cause Tom said my eye had a twinkle in it!'

Not long ago the 'golden text,' in Sunday-school, was:

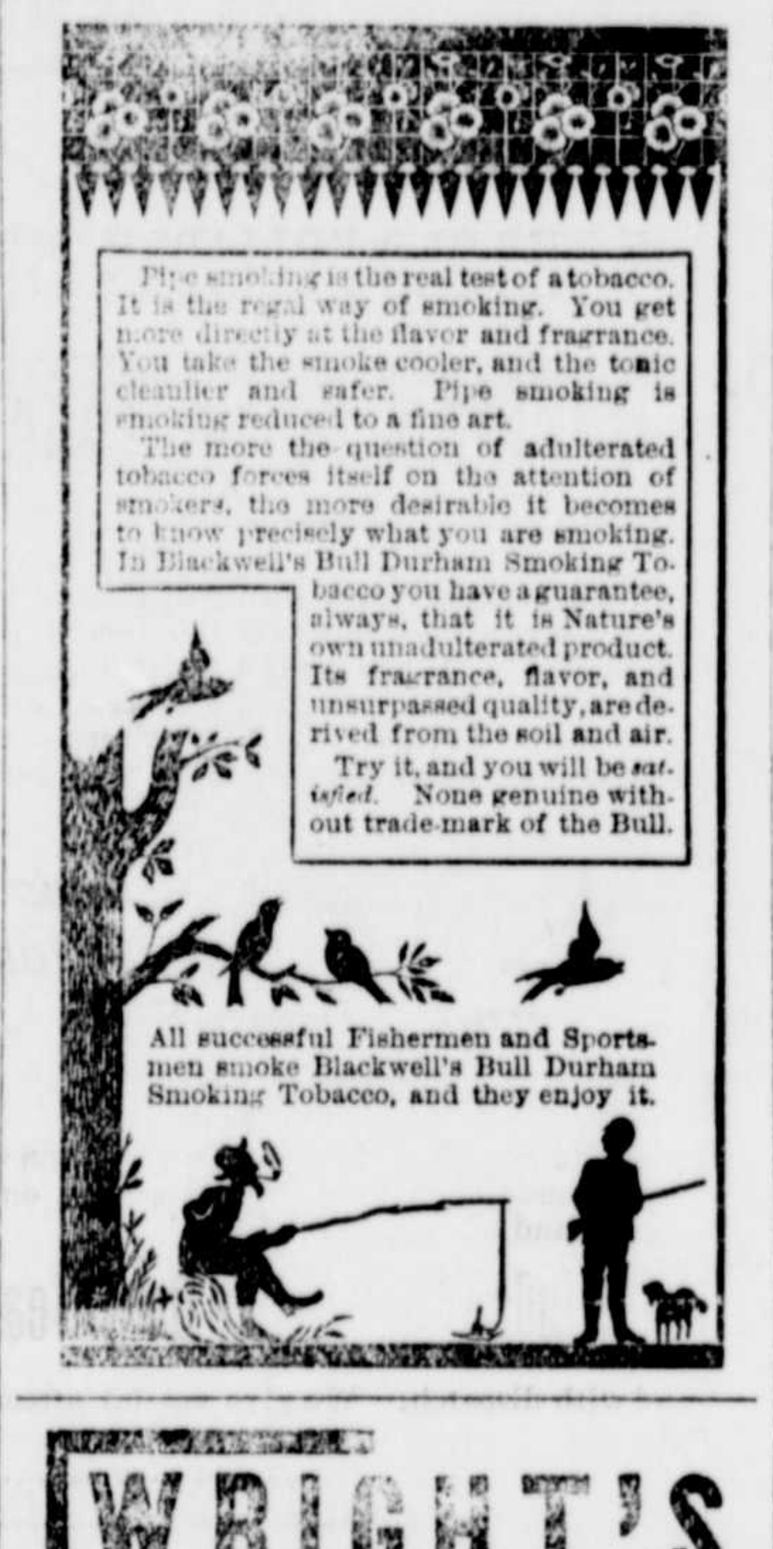

'For in Him we live and move and have our being.

Grace, a scholar whose years numbered but four as yet, was asked to repeat the text. She tossed her curls back, and, with the most ludicrous solemnity, replied:

'We live in the moon and have our beams.'

TUTT'S PILLS
TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.
From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect
ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.
HE FEELS LIKE A NEW MAN.
"I have had Dyspepsia, with Constipation, two years, and have tried ten different kinds of pills, and TUTT'S are the first that have done me any good. They have cleaned me out nicely. My appetite is splendid, food digests readily, and I now have natural passages. I feel like a new man." W. D. EDWARDS, Palmyra, O.

ALABASTINE

A Superior Substitute for Kalsomine, etc.

Alabastine is the first and only preparation made from calcined gypsum rock, for application to walls with a brush, and is fully covered by patents and perfected by many years of experiments. It is the only permanent wall finish, and admits of applying as many coats as desired, one over another, to any hard surface, without danger of scaling, or noticeably adding to the thickness of the wall, which is strengthened and improved by each additional coat, from time to time. It is the only material for the purpose not dependent upon glue for its adhesiveness. Alabastine is hardened on the wall by age, moisture, etc., while all kalsomines or whitening preparations have inert soft chalks and glue for their base, which are rendered soft or scaled in a very short time.

In addition to the above advantages, Alabastine is less expensive, as it requires but one-half the number of pounds to cover the same amount of surface with two coats, is ready for use by adding water, and easily applied by any one.

For sale by your Paint Dealer. Ask for Circular containing Samples of 12 tints, manufactured only by the ALABASTINE Co., M. B. CHURCH, Manager, Grand Rapids, Mich.
