THE Greeley relief expedition, under charge of Commander Schley, has been heard from to the good effect that it has rescued Lieut. Greeley and six of his companions. The others of the Greeley party had died of starvation. The rescue was speedy. People had scarcely ceased to talk of the start of the Thetis and the Bear from New York harbor, when news was received of the rescue. The Greeley expedition throws some new light upon Arctic geography and strengthens to a considerable extent the theory of an open polar sea, but, like other Arctic expeditions, the results accomplished are scarcely of enough practical good to mankind to compensate for the suffering entailed and the loss of human life.

THE upholders of a protective tariff sometimes advance the illogical and ridiculous theory, that all classes of citizens are benefited thereby.

The falsity of this theory can easily be demonstrated by a reductio ad absurdum.

To begin with, a protective tariff is a tax, that has to be paid by somebody. This tax goes to the parties engaged in the protected industries. This much is conceded by protectionists and may be accepted as axiomatic.

The somebody that pays the tax, must be some class or classes of American citizen, because it is the American citizen that buys the protected article.

When one class of American citizen is enriched by a tax from a protective tariff, another class of American citizen must be made exactly that much poorer by a tax from a protective tariff.

Therefore the theory that a protective tariff benefits everybody is absurd: which was to be proved.

ARE wages in this country affected by a protective tariff? No logical minded man can think so. Wages like every thing else are affected by the law of supply and demand. This is a new country that is yet to be built up and developed. It possesses immense stores of natural wealth. The development of this new and great country, keeps up a constant demand for labor. When the supply of labor outruns the demand, wages will naturally fall. When there are two carpenters seeking every job, the wages of carpenters will naturally fall, because the supply of carpenters will exceed the demand. This will be the case in all branches of labor, and wages will not be kept up by a protective tariff or by any other artificial process whenever it comes that there are more workmen than there is work. On the contrary, a protective tariff imposes a burdensome tax upon every workingman. He is compelled to pay an average of one third more for all the necessities that his wages go to buy. In other words his dollars only purchase sixty-six and two third cents worth of the necessaries of life. He is taxed to sustain the factories to the extent of one-third his earnings.

MR. BLAINE has written his letter of acceptance. Like all things coming from James G. Blaine, it is very skillfully written. But it is a policy letter from beginning to end. It comes out strong on questions that the writer believes will sway votes on election day. He serenely praises the record of his party during the past twenty years as being one of uprightness and purity, calmly ignoring the numerous developments of corruption during the last administration of Gen. Grant, and the immense star route thievery that took root and flourished under the administration of Mr. Hayes. Mr. Blaine's strong stand, however, is upon the tariff. He believes that a tariff for protection is going to win, and he comes out strongly for a protective tariff. He even pays the poor compliment to the farmers and agriculturists of the country, of endeavoring to bamboozle them into believing that they are benefitted by being taxed to sustain the manufacturers. There is one thing however, that Mr. Blaine was expected to do in his letter, in order to encourage O'Donovan Rossa and his dynamite followers, that he has failed in, and that is to vigorously twist the British lion's tail. Mr. Blaine cannot be said to have twisted the British lion's tail even in the slightest degree.

ASIATIC cholera is raging in a number of cities of the south of France. Some prominent medical authorities believe that it will spread entirely over Europe, and it is even feared that it may reach our shores. Great precautionary measures are taken by the sanitary authorities at American ports of entry, however, to prevent it reaching us. At Toulon and Marseilles, in France, there are from fifty to one hundred deaths daily from cholera. But even a more terrible danger than cholera is threatening. Business of all kinds has been brought to a standstill, and thousands of inhabitants are threatened with starvation. The infected cities are deserted by all who can get away, and are shunned by all who live outside. The poorer classes who have been compelled to remain have gathered by thousands and asked the authorities for work, but there is no work for them. Outside assistance alone can prevent the horrors of a famine being added to the horrors of epidemic disease.

Cleveland and Irishmen.

Ex Senator Kernan said to a Pittsburg reporter while passing through that city: 'Why, I would ask, should the Catholics, any more than any other denomination, oppose Cleveland? Is it to be supposed for a moment that the Catholic Church of this country is in the hands of a pack of politicians? That its power and influence are to be bartered away by John Kelly or any other man? That sort of campaign bosh I consider malicious, and is undoubtedly a direct insult to every Catholic in this country. I myself am a Catholic. Probably as constant and consistent as John Kelly. I have a number of Catholics in this car with me. Many of them are influential and powerful politicians, and I am satisfied they stand as high morally and religiously as does the much talked-of Kelly, yet they never dream of calling down the wrath of their Church on those who oppose them. I say it is an insult to every Catholic in this land to even intimate that they will knife Cleveland on John Kelly's account or any other account. During Mr. Cleveland's administration as Governor of New York he has acted judiciously in distributing his appointments. He has favored no class or creed. He has given a fair share of his patronage to the Catholics. He appointed my son, Francis Kernan, a devout Catholic. During our stay in Chicago the Presidents of three separate and distinct Irish Catholic societies of that place called on me to get definite information on this same subject. One of the party was William J. Onahan. I told them just what I have told you. I assured them that nothing could be more unjust than to accuse Governor Cleveland with being biased against the Catholics. They went away satisfied. I am happy to be able to set the Governor right on this important matter.'—Phila. Record.

THE INDEPENDENTS.

A BIG GATHERING IN NEW YORK—MORE DEFECTIONS FROM BLAINE.

New York, July 22.—The independent republican convention meets in the University Club Theatre to-morrow morning. Delegates are expected from all the Eastern States and from several of the Western.

The indications are that the most sanguine hopes of the promoters of the movement will be far exceeded. To-night the corridors of the principal hotels are alive with the Blaine bolters. Without an exception these men represent the better element of the Republican party of the sections from which they come.

The reports which they bring show that the movement against Blaine in the Republican ranks has been greatly underestimated. The Massachusetts men say that the anti Blaine force is extending in their State.

They estimate that the anti-Blaine Republicans would poll now fully seven per cent. of the party vote, and declare that unless there is an unforseen check to the movement, this will certainly be doubled by election day.

They are unanimous in their enthusiasm for the Democratic ticket. They say that a third ticket is out of the question.

It was a noticeable fact to-night, wherever these independent Republican delegates gathered to discuss the situation, they were shadowed by men from the headquarters of the Republican national committee.

THE SCHOONER BONITA, or the schooner A. & M. Ella will make weekly trips for grain from Travilla wharf to Baltimore. Other freighting at the place may be done daily, with the steamers Enterprise and Corsica.
