Mr. Blaine's Picture of Himself.

On the outside of this issue we print a batch of letters, written by James G. Blaine while Speaker of the House of Representatives. These letters have been but recently published. On the inside, and completing the picture, we publish four other letters, written in connection with the same subject, that were made public in 1876.

To every man who possesses a mind capable of drawing logical deductions, and at the same time a mental structure that is honest enough to acknowledge truth when it sees it, we think these letters must clearly prove that Mr. Blaine has a dishonest and dishonorable record,—that he bartered the influence of a position of great trust to make money for himself.

It must be remembered, that when Mr. Blaine wrote these letters he was Speaker of the national House of Representatives. The Speaker of the House of Representatives occupies a position of power second only to the President of the United States. In his opportunity for influencing legislation, his power is greater than that of the President. The Speaker of the House has the formation of all the committees that originate legislation. He can so form a committee as to favor or disfavor any legislation contemplated. Aside from this, in his rulings as speaker, he has an immense power to assist or defeat any given bill. Taking these facts into consideration, light is thrown upon the meaning of two sentences in Mr. Blaine's letter of June 27th, 1869, published elsewhere on this page, where he solicits an interest in the enterprise (The Fort Smith and Little Rock Railroad) and winds up by saying,—"I do not feel that I shall prove a deadhead in the enterprise if I once embark in it. I see various channels in which I know I can be useful.

In another letter published also on this page, dated Oct. 4th, 1869, Mr. Blaine puts himself to the trouble of explaining how in a ruling as speaker, and also in advice given before the ruling was made, he did the managers of the Fort Smith and Little Rock enterprise, "a great favor."

In the letters published on our outside, which have more recently been laid before the public, a fuller and clearer conception of Mr. Blaine's "usefulness" is given. The general tone of these letters, more than what they actually reveal, indicates the character of the transactions in which he was engaged. In one letter he gives assurance that 'no one will ever know from him that he has ever disposed of a dollar in Maine.' In another letter he indicates one instance in which his position as speaker can make him useful to the managers of the Fort Smith and Little Rock enterprise;—i. e., he gives information that there will probably be a large increase, fifty to seventy-five millions of dollars, in the national currency. This will probably take the form of bank circulation. If his friends desire to establish a bank at Little Rock, "it will be in his power to cast an anchor to windward in their favor." In another letter he states that he thinks that he (the speaker of the House of Representatives) can make "a very advantageous arrangement with Thomas A. Scott, for taking, say $300,000, and finally the confidential letter, begging Fisher to make a copy of a draft letter enclosed, that would exhonorate him by saying that he secured stocks and bonds of the Little Rock and Fort Smith enterprise on exactly the same conditions as the general public.

Some of the letters of Messrs Caldwell and Fisher also indicate the relationship Mr. Blaine bore them, and the reasons why his good will was valuable. In a letter to Fisher, under date of April 25, 1871, Caldwell says, "Blaine is an important man for us to have feel all right toward us, and I only wish that I was so situated that I could help him." Warren Fisher's letter to Blaine under date Sept. 30, 1871, says regarding the claims of parties that had been transacted through Blaine,—

"I am constantly reminded about it, and they all say, 'Why don't Blaine deliver to us our interests? Mr. Caldwell tells me he has paid you his last note due you, and gave you the $50,000 land bonds in addition. I should judge it was for your interest to settle the matter at once and have no further delay. You must be your own judge in the matter, but my advice is to settle it at once."

Finally the letter written by Warren Fisher to Blaine from Boston, under date of April 15, 1872, calls to Mr. Blaine's attention a number of interesting facts. Though this letter is published in full elsewhere, we give a portion of it here,—

"I have loaned you at various times, when you were comparatively poor, very large sums of money, and never have you paid me one dollar from your own pocket, either principal or interest. I have paid sundry amounts to others to whom you were indebted, and these debts you have allowed to stand unpaid like the notes which I hold. I have placed you in positions whereby you have received very large sums of money without one dollar of expense to you, and you ought not to forget the act on my part. Of all the parties connected with the Little Rock and Fort Smith Railroad no one has been so fortunate as yourself in obtaining money out of it. You obtained subscriptions from your friends in Maine for the building of the Little Rock and Fort Smith Railroad. Out of their subscriptions you obtained a large amount both of bonds and money free of cost to you. I have your own figures and know the amount. Owing to your political position you were able to work off all your bonds at a very high price, and the fact is well known to others as well as myself. Would your friends in Maine be satisfied if they knew the facts? Are my associates satisfied to have you obtain $25,000 for Northern Pacific Railroad and you not make the investment as per agreement? The course you have thought proper to take in regard to my request is rather a poor one, taking your relations with me, and I again ask you to reconsider and grant it."

Before the Chicago Republican Convention of this year met, there was a loud outcry on the part of the better element in the Republican party, and of the best portion of the Republican press, against the nomination of James G. Blaine. The objection urged to Mr. Blaine, was that he had used a position of trust to subserve his personal ends. When the Convention in spite of this protest, nominated Blaine, this better element of the party and of the press, openly deserted him, and have since given their support to the nominee of the Democratic party. It is no use for any Republican who desires that the head of this government shall be an honest man, to shut his eyes to the facts in the case. The record of James G. Blaine, while speaker of the House of Representatives, demonstrates that he is not the man into whose hands can be placed a great trust.

FOUR LETTERS OF MR. BLAINE.

In May and June, 1876, an investigation was made by a committee of the National House of Representatives into the affairs of certain land grant railroads. This investigation brought out certain letters which Mr. Blaine, while Speaker of the House of Representatives, had written to Mr. W. Fisher, of Boston, a gentleman connected in a business way with one of those roads.

Augusta, June 29, 1869.

MY DEAR MR. FISHER—I thank you for the article from Mr. Lewis. It is good in itself and will do good. He writes like a man of large intelligence and comprehension. Your offer to admit me to a participation in the new railroad enterprise is in every respect as generous as I could expect or desire. I thank you very sincerely for it, and in this connection I wish to make a suggestion of a somewhat selfish character. It is this: You spoke of Mr. Caldwell's offer to dispose of a share of his interest to me. If he really desires to do so I wish he would make the proposition definite, so that I could know just what to depend on. Perhaps if he waits to the full development of the enterprise he may grow reluctant to part with the share, and I do not by this mean any distrust of him. I do not feel that I shall prove a dead-head in the enterprise if I once embark in it. I see various channels in which I know I can be useful. Very hastily and sincerely your friend,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

Mr. Fisher, India street, Boston.

Augusta, Me., July 3, 1869.

MY DEAR MR. FISHER—You ask me if I am satisfied with the offer you made me of a share in your new railroad enterprise? Of course, I am more than satisfied with the terms of the offer; I think it a most liberal proposition. If I hesitate at all it is from considerations in no way connected with the character of the offer. Your liberal mode of dealing with me in all our business transactions of the past eight years has not passed without my full appreciation. What I wrote you on the 29th was intended to bring Caldwell to a definite proposition. That was all. I go to Boston by the same train that carries this letter, and will call at your office tomorrow at 12 M. If you don't happen to be in, no matter; don't put yourself to any trouble about it. Yours,

J. G. B.

Mr. FISHER, Jr.

[Personal.]

AUGUSTA, ME., Oct. 4, 1869.

MY DEAR SIR—I spoke to you a short time ago about a point of interest to your railroad company that occurred at the last session of Congress.

It was on the last night of the session, when the bill renewing the land grant to the State of Arkansas for the Little Rock Road was reached, and Julian, of Indiana, Chairman of the Public Lands Committee, and, by right, entitled to the floor, attempted to put on the bill, as an amendment, the Fremont El Paso scheme—a scheme probably well known to Mr. Caldwell. The House was thin, and the lobby in the Fremont interest had the thing all set up, and Julian's amendment was likely to prevail if brought to a vote. Roots and other members from Arkansas, who were doing their best for their own bill (to which there seemed to be no objection), were in despair, for it was well known that the Senate was hostile to the Fremont scheme, and if the Arkansas bill had gone back to the Senate with Julian's amendment, the whole thing would have gone on the table and slept the sleep of death.

In this dilemma Roots came to me to know what on earth he could do under the rules, for he said that it was vital to his constituents that the bill should pass. I told him that Julian's amendment was entirely out of order, because not germane; but he had not sufficient confidence in his knowledge of the rules to make the point, but he said Gen. Logan was opposed to the Fremont scheme, and would probably make the point. I sent my page to Gen. Logan with the suggestion, and he at once made the point. I could not do otherwise than sustain it, and so the bill was freed from the mischievous amendment moved by Julian, and at once passed without objection.

At that time I had never seen Mr. Caldwell, but you can tell him that, without knowing it, I did him a great favor. Sincerely yours,

J. G. BLAINE.

W. FISHER, Jr., Esq., No. 24 India St., Boston.

AUGUSTA, Oct. 4, 1869.

MY DEAR MR. FISHER—Find inclosed contracts of parties named in my letter of yesterday. The remaining contracts will be completed as rapidly as possible, as circumstances will permit.

I enclose you part of the Congressional Globe of April 9, containing the point to which I referred at some length in my previous letter of to-day. You will find it of interest to read it over and see what a narrow escape your bill made on that last night of the session. Of course, it was my plain duty to make the ruling when the point was once raised. If the Arkansas men had not, however, happened to come to me when at their wits' end and in despair, the bill would undoubtedly have been lost, or at least postponed for a year. I thought the point would interest both you and Caldwell, though occurring before either of you engaged in the enterprise.

I beg you to understand that I thoroughly appreciate the courtesy with which you have treated me in this railroad matter, but your conduct toward me in business matters has always been marked by unbounded liberality in past years, and, of course, I have naturally come to expect the same of you now. You urge me to make as much as I fairly can out of the arrangement into which we have entered. It is natural that I should do my utmost to this end. I am bothered by only one thing, and that is the indefinite arrangement with Mr. Caldwell. I am anxious to acquire the interest he has promised me, but I do not get a definite understanding with him as I have with you. I shall be in Boston in a few days, and shall then have an opportunity to talk matters over fully with you. I am disposed to think that whatever I do with Mr. Caldwell must really be done through you. Kind regards to Mrs. Fisher. Sincerely,

J. G. BLAINE.

W. FISHER, Jr.

WHO ARE MULLIGAN AND FISHER.

A BRIEF SHETCH OF EACH.

A despatch from Boston to the Philadelphia Times, gives a brief pen sketch of two men, to whom just now, interested attention is turned:

WHO MULLIGAN IS.

James Mulligan is a singular individual. He has lived in this city [Boston] for more than thirty years and always occupied positions of trust and responsibility. In all of them he has shown himself an exemplary citizen and no man's word stands higher than his. This Irishman occupies a peculiar position in this community. He came from the north of Ireland years ago and leans to the Protestant rather than the Catholic faith. With a stubborn idea of integrity, he is everywhere known as a man whose word is as good as his bond. No one in this city or elsewhere could charge him with an untruth or with bad faith and be believed. Ever since he landed in this country he has occupied the highest confidential positions with business men. As seen along the streets one would wonder that such grave responsibilities had been committed to his charge. If Dickens had have known him in his palmly days no more interesting character than this could have been woven into his beautiful stories. He reminds one of the confidential clerk of a great law firm as this individual is presented in the plays. Of about medium height, with an easy, shuffling gait and slender build, he moves about his business and leisure in a perfectly methodical way. His face is small and the lines in it rather severely drawn. Like almost all old bachelors, he is scrupulously neat in his dress and evidently dyes his hair. Perhaps this man is fifty years old or more, and yet it would be hard to guess within ten years of his age, so neat and nice does he look for a man of his years.

ABOUT WARREN FISHER.

Warren Fisher, like Mr. Mulligan, has been an innocent party to all this business. Mr. Blaine's letters to him passed out of his possession in the regular order of proceedings in bankruptcy and he has simply been intruded into this matter as an accident of the occasion. Mr. Fisher is a well known character in the business life of Boston. He is quite an old man now—perhaps fifty five years of age. Just at present he is living quietly upon his farm in Vermont and he only comes to Boston when business requires his presence. It is said of him that he feels very keenly the unpleasant position he has been placed in by this political adventure, into which he has been dragged against his will, and that whatever he does in this matter now will be to protect himself against the assaults which may be made upon him by Mr. Blaine or his friends.

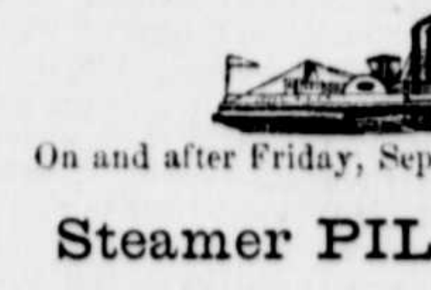

These are the characters that are or have been prominent in giving publicity to Mr. Blaine's letters. They are all living here and moving about in the every day business affairs of this city. Any of them can be seen any day. In this region, where they are known, their reputations cannot be assailed with success. None of them are politicians except Mr. R. M. Morse, and he was the chairman of the recent regular Republican gathering here, but was powerfully silent as to his knowledge of the disclosures made to him while he was the assignee of Warren Fisher's estate. Time brings queer changes. Politics make strange bed fellows. The end of this controversy has not yet been reached. There are more developments behind, hence the short sketch of the central figures in this peculiar contest, together with the plain statement of how these interesting communications were first unearthed. A gentleman just nominated for Congress by the Republicans in one of the Boston districts went on a hurried trip to Europe to escape giving testimony in this matter. He is now sick on account of the revival of this scandal at a moment when he was about to win high political honors.

IT is universally acknowledged by the most practical farmers that the Ohio Chilled Plow is the best plow in the world for neatness of work, and lightness of draft to the team. As I have ordered a large number of these plows, both two and three-horse, farmers will do well to give me an early call.

As there have been a great many Chilled Plows sold in these counties, and as farmers have been put to a great deal of trouble to get Castings for them, if they will only give the name and number of the Plow, I will endeavor to keep them on hand at my shops in Galena and Chestertown. J. K. ALDRIDGE.

NOTICE.

The New Buckeye Glass Feed, Grain and Fertilizer Drill is offered to Farmers Club, headed by Mr. Victor Hendrickson and Mr. James Byron, open to the county. After having posted themselves upon the merits of drills now upon the market they have settled upon our Drill. Any farmer needing a Drill, by joining this club will get one at figures way below the regular price, and beside will get the best Drill now upon the market. I haven't the time to canvass the county on account of being busy erecting the Iron Turbine Wind Mill. So save money by joining the club. Call on Mr. Hendrickson or Mr. Byron.
