WIT, HUMOR AND WISDOM.

"BLESSED IS HE WHO CAN UNDERSTAND A JOKE, FOR VERILY THERE BE SOME WHO KNOW NOT A JOKE WHEN THEY SEE IT."

—A more or less ancient proverb.

'Mamma, is dat duck?' asked a bright three-year-old at the dinner table.

'No, my dear, that is roast beef.'

'What's dat made of?'

'It comes from a cow.'

After a moment's pause, the little toddler exclaimed:

'Say, mamma, ain't it funny to have a cow for dinner?'—Anon.

At a country school house in Kentucky last month, a boy was told by the teacher to stand on the platform until some lessons should be finished, when the culprit would be whipped. The bad boy waited until the teacher turned his head and then ran out at the door. The teacher was vexed and, in his vexation, offered another boy twenty-five cents to go out and bring the runaway in. But the latter, who was under the house listening at a crack in the floor, cried out:

'Hold on, if you please; I'll come back and take the licking for ten cents—cash down!'—Anon.

Some months ago a geologist went among the Scotch Highlanders and gathered a number of fine specimens of rocks and rare stones. Completing the collection, the man of science hired a stout Scotch youth, a regular mountaineer, to carry the bag across the rugged range to a railway station beyond.

'It was a heavy load, and just nothing but stones,' said Donald, relating his experience to a friend, 'and I was not fool enough to drag the pebbles a guid ten miles. I emptied the bag before I started and filled it at the last pile of stones I came to, and the gentleman was just as well pleased.'

The unlucky geologist must have been puzzled a good deal when he examined the contents of the bag.—Anon.

4. The first three rows in the balcony are always reserved.

5. Only those who deport themselves as gentlemen will be permitted to remain in the house.

7. The management would further request that any gentlemen finding it absolutely necessary to his happiness to use tobacco during a performance will please not expectorate on the floor or carpets. By notifying an usher he can secure the use of a cuspidor.—Anon.

About this time of year the amateur sportsman sallies forth with a shot-gun and a dog, tramps fifteen miles through stubble, briars, brush and swamp, and comes home with one woodpecker and a howling appetite. Or, mayhap, he may thoughtlessly pull his gun over the fence by the muzzle and inadvertently come home in a neighbor's cart.

Therefore, this being about the beginning of the accepted season when the amateur sportsman goeth about seeking how he may accidentally shoot himself, or some luckless companion, I have laid down for the guidance of amateur sportsmen some valuable rules, which, if they would not die in autumn when the coroner is busily engaged in seeking a re-election, they will do well to follow.

Having once been an amateur sportsman myself, and having in my time narrowly missed killing two or three birds, and five or six of my friends who were reckless enough to stay in the same field with me while I was shooting, I can justly claim to know something of the subject I herein discuss.

Before setting out on a gunning expedition be sure that your gun is loaded. The unloaded gun is always the more dangerous to the amateur sportsman. It kill the most people, anyway.

Do not carelessly handle your gun in the house, or you may seriously damage the bric-a-brac.

A breech-loader is the safer gun for you, though it is more dangerous than a muzzle-loader to your dog or any other living thing that happens to be in front of you while you load.

If you are gunning with another amateur sportsman, get behind a tree when you see him preparing to shoot. The bigger the tree and the closer you stand to it the safer you will be.

If you should accidentally shoot a farmer's cow, do not stay to make an explanation to the farmer or to try to excuse yourself with the plea that the darn old cow ran in front of your gun just as it went off. Hurry on to the next farm without waiting to re-load.

Never climb a fence with a gun in your hands or pull the gun after you by the muzzle. If you must climb a fence while gunning, throw the gun over first, keeping the muzzle always from you, and then climb over yourself.

Don't try to kill two birds with one charge until you have practised awhile on one bird; otherwise you may wear yourself out very early in the game.

Don't take your own dog with you if you can borrow one from a friend. You will naturally see that your friend's dog can be spared better than your own dog.

Never take your gun by the muzzle and punch with the butt in a brush heap to start out the game. The premature discharge that in this case is likely to occur may frighten the game away too suddenly and surprise you to such an extent that in the hurry of the moment you will forget to observe which way the game goes.

If your gun is a muzzle-loader, do not put the shot in first and the powder on top. The amateur sportsman who loads his gun in this way is apt to become discouraged before the day is half done. But there is one advantage—he never shoots himself.

If you see a farmer coming hurriedly toward you with a long gun on his shoulder and malice in his eye, do not wait to learn the cause of his haste or the object of his mission. His appearance is indicative of a malarious neighborhood, and you should go away from the locality as quietly and speedily as possible.

After you have missed ten or fifteen birds, and have shot off one of the ears and a piece of the tail of your dog, it will be time to eat your lunch, if you have any with you. Thereafter, if your dog walks behind you and refuses to hunt, do not think his conduct strange. It is very easily explained: he is just beginning to get acquainted with you, and has learned, perhaps, that you are an amateur sportsman. He has probably been out with amateur sportsmen before. You should seek to restore his confidence in you, or he will be likely to go home, leaving you to conclude the day's sport alone.

The only thing that is entirely safe in the vicinity of the amateur sportsman is the game he is hunting, or, at least that is the way it used to be when I was an amateur sportsman; and things don't seem to have changed much since I reformed and sold my gun and gave my dog to the poor.—SCOTT WAY, in Puck.

You Can Have It.

"My dear, what would I give to have your hair?" is often said by middle-aged ladies to young ones. Madam, you may have just such hair. Parker's Hair Balsam will give it to you. It will stop your hair from falling off, restore the original color and make it long, thick, soft and glossy. You need not stand helplessly envying the girls. The Balsam is not oily, not a dye, but is an elegant dressing, and is especially recommended for its cleanliness and purity.

FOR THE YOUNG FOLKS.

UP PIKE'S PEAK

BY CHARLES M. SKINNER

"Pike's Peak, or Bust!" was the heroic inscription blazoned on many a 'prairie schooner' that crossed the western plains after gold had been discovered in Colorado. Alas! how many daring enterprises were "busted,' in the effort to reach the new-found El Dorado! Burned and broken wagons, starved and over-driven horses and cattle resolving into their elements, men's skeletons, disfigured with arrows and bullet holes, were the ghastly landmarks strewn about the plains in the old days, as white-haired gold hunters now call them. To-day, however, all is different. You may ride from New York to Pike's Peak in palace cars and pay a visit to the summit with but little expense or hardship. The start is made from Manitou, a little settlement nestled in a broad ravine near the base of the mountain, and noted for its delicious soda springs, which bubble out of the earth, cold and refreshing, and highly charged with carbonic acid gas, like soda water sold at the drug stores.

It was on a beautiful July morning that I made the start. The air was thin, bright and pure, and laden with fagrance of pines and wild roses. Although Manitou is upward of 6,000 feet above the sea, the summit of the mountain is over 8,000 feet higher, reaching the grand altitude of 14,300 feet above tide water, and up such an ascent the difficulties of pedestrian travel are so great that few people gain the top except on horseback. Mine was a good, sure-footed steed, who knew his business well and refused to be hurried when turning corners on the shelf-like path traversing the side of a canyon for the second or third mile of the trail.

Trees grow quite thickly on some portions of the mountain, offering a most refreshing contrast to the arid plains below, while the plunge of cascades and tinkle of rivulets recalled pleasant memories of eastern mountains.

As we drew toward timber-line, a lonesome lake was revealed in a wide notch in the mountain, with wild birds dipping into its surface and the tracks of deer leading to its shore.

Fire has swept through the branches of the upper forests, leaving nothing but the dead trunks, white and black with bleaching and charring, standing in mockery of their former stateliness. Landslides, too, have cut wide swaths through the woods, and fallen trunks block the trail occasionally, necessitating detours to pass them. Vegetation ceases sharply at timber-line; at least, all forms of plant life, except two varieties of a small flowering shrub like the forget-me-not, are unable to endure the snow and cloud and tempest.

And now the great pyramids of broken rock that mark the outlying peaks loom up at our right—bare, saving masses of red granite, streaked with snow, with gigantic curtains of cloud swirling and flapping around them. Pike's Peak is a "weather breeder," if ever there was one. It seems to gather to itself all the floating filaments of vapor to be found in the surrounding neighborhood; it disgorges clouds from the brooks and pools and snowdrifts in its ravines, it manufactures clouds out of the pure air before your very face, and defies you to guess by what magical process a first-class thunderstorm can be arranged while you are traversing the last mile of your journey. But although the clouds surged up in a very ominous way, and turned over and over, sometimes almost burying us in fog, they desisted from mischief, and eventually scurried out over the plains, where they appeared so small and white that, as we looked down upon them, they suggested flocks of sheep.

Worse and worse grew the path the nearer we approached the top, until finally the horses staggered along the bed of a former brook, now and then plunging their feet into a snow bank or pool of icy water, and panting violently with their climb.

I dismounted and led my horse for a time in order to rest him, but I found the atmosphere so thin at that great height that I had not walked one hundred yards before my lungs were heaving like a pair of bellows, my knees shook with the exertion of climbing, and I felt dizzy and faint.

In self-defense I was obliged to remount and ride until we reached a point a quarter-mile or so from the summit, where we fastened our horses and plunged through snow and over rough rocks to the hospitable signal-service station on the crest.

More than once I fell from pure exhaustion in making that short climb, thirty miles or so without trouble. So thin is the atmosphere that one has to breathe nearly twice as much of it to get the same amount of oxygen into his lungs that he breathes on low ground.

Many people are made ill by it, and their efforts to walk are so violent that blood occasionally oozes from their ears and throats and nostrils.

The guide insisted that I should enter the signal station first of all, and get something to eat, as that would relieve the unpleasant sensations caused by the rarified atmosphere; and, in good sooth, some sandwitches and hot coffee did put me in a better condition for enjoying the view. And what a view it is! You look out over thousands of square miles of country, across ocean-like expanses of plain, and in the serried ranks of the mighty Rocky Mountain range, west, north and south of you, may be counted hundreds of peaks that lift their stony masses into the regions of eternal snow.

Below, on the west, is visible a portion of the great South Park and the Arkansas Valley, in which lies the great mining-camp of Leadville.

Beyond surges the Alpine mass of the Sangre de Christo Range, snow-clad, rough and grand.

Turning to the east, where the boundless plains shine in the afternoon light, the foot-hills of red granite, thinly dotted with pine, are seen, and through a dark gap between them appears the pretty town of Colorado Springs, reduced to the size and aspect of a potato patch, while to the left of that settlement glows the fantastic towers and monuments of red sandstone in the Garden of the Gods.

Far away in the northeast is a tiny blot on the lonely plains. It is the city of Denver.

Pike's Peak slopes to the Westward at an easy angle; but on the east, it plunges toward the foot-hills in frightful slides and crags.

The vast chasm known as the 'bottomless pit,' which is riven down its eastern face, is of a depth to make the head turn giddy as you look down.

The summit of this mountain is the highest inhabited spot in the world, for 'Old Probabilities' keeps his servants there to tell the public what the weather prospects are. These poor fellows get an awful deal of weather in the course of a year—rain, hail, wind, snow, fog and lightning.

Not long ago, the little stone house in which they live was struck and torn open by lightning, which damaged the scientific instruments and injured one of the men.

For a long time after entering the signal service at this lonesome spot, the men suffer for want of air, and are often awakened at night by a sense of suffocation wich impels them to sit up and breathe as hard as possible.

It was night before I completed the descent, and I reached my hotel quite convinced that Pike's Peak is a better place to visit than to live upon.

THOUGH numerous causes may operate to turn the hair gray, all that is needed to restore the natural color is Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer. For more than twenty years its sales have been enormous, but we have yet to learn of its first failure.

'My son,' said Mr. Thrifty, 'I always eat the crusts of my bread.'

'Pardon me, papa!' replied the youth, 'I know you do, and so I'm saving my crusts to give you by-and-by.'

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.
HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude?" Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRADDOR."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

ALABASTINE

A Superior Substitute for Kalsomine, etc.

Alabastine is the first and only preparation made from calcined gypsum rock, for application to walls with a brush, and is fully covered by patents and perfected by many years of experiments. It is the only permanent wall finish, and admits of applying as many coats as desired, one over another, to any hard surface, without danger of scaling, or noticeably adding to the thickness of the wall, which is strengthened and improved by each additional coat, from time to time. It is the only material for the purpose not dependent upon glue for its adhesiveness. Alabastine is hardened on the wall by age, moisture, etc., while all kalsomines or whitening preparations have inert soft chalks and glue for their base, which are rendered soft or scaled in a very short time.

In addition to the above advantages, Alabastine is less expensive, as it requires but one-half the number of pounds to cover the same amount of surface with two coats, is ready for use by adding water, and easily applied by any one.

Elliott & Gemmill's
Farmers' Agency
Will furnish at short notice and Bottom Prices, any Implement manufactured in the United States.

We make a specialty of the Iron Turbine Wind Mill, manufactured by Mast, Foos & Co.; also, the Buckeye Force Pump, especially adapted to deep wells and forcing water.

Any one needing a Wind Mill we say try a Turbine. They are strength and durability itself. We control this Mill for the county, and have no sub-agents. Will make prompt estimates for any one desiring a Mill.

We would also call the attention of Farmers to our
which we pronounce, after thorough testing it last season, to be the best combined Grain and Fertilizer Drill ever offered to the trade. Our reasons are—

First, It is a perfect Wheat Seeder
Second, You have no cog wheels to take off or put on to chance quantities.
Third, With the Glass Feed for Phosphate you can sow any quantity of Fertilizer without clogging, gumming or pasting, from 100 to 500 lbs., and can make the changes while walking along.
Fourth, Both wheat and phosphate are distributed within plain view of the operator.
Fifth, It has doubleforce feed for wheat, which makes it sow regular in whatever position it may be placed, especially when seeding side hills. All other drills will seed more or less according to position.

Call and examine it before buying, it will pay you.

Farmers clubbing together can make it pay.

Remember we have no sub-agents Save money by giving us your orders direct.

We have in use in Queen Anne's county eighty-three of the Buckeye Drills. In 1882 we sold there 28; in 1883 we sold 55.
