The End of the G. O. P.

The country has been kept in a long suspense since election, because the Republican party chooses not to die decently and calmly, but to give up its life with a frantic and tragic struggle. For several days after the election, in face of the clearest proof to the contrary, James G. Blaine, the Republican National Committee and the New York Tribune, claimed a Republican majority in New York State. When, finally they were compelled to concede that official returns as received through every source of information, indicated a clear plurality for Cleveland, they fell back upon the empty charge that frauds had been committed, without being able to specify in what particular form or in what section of the State. The official canvass of the election returns of the State began on last Tuesday, and will probably not have been completed by the time the present issue of the Transcript goes to press. There can be little doubt, however as to the outcome. The vote has been too closely scanned already, to admit of any honest changes that will materially affect Cleveland's plurality. It is possible that the Republican party, headed as it is by such a desperate and unscrupulous representative as James G. Blaine, may seek to set aside the honest verdict of the people by some abnormal process, but it is not probable that it will be successful in such an attempt. Grover Cleveland will be the next President of the United States.

A Cause for Thankfulness.

Beyond a doubt, the interests of that gigantic gambler, Jay Gould, were in a very close manner indentified with and dependent upon the election of James G. Blaine. The election of Blaine meant millions of dollars of gain to Gould, and the defeat of Blaine means millions of dollars that Gould will not rake in. James G. Blaine and Jay Gould are men very much of the same type. Both have made money by bold, unscrupulous and dishonest methods. Before the Erie investigating committee of 1873, Jay Gould frankly declared his moral and political creed. In reply to a question he said:

"We had to look after four States, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and have helped men in all of them. It was the custom where the men received nominations to come to me for contributions, and I made them, and considered them good paying investments for the company. In a Republican district I was a strong Republican. In a Democratic district I was Democratic. And in a doubtful district I was doubtful. In politics I was an Erie Railroad man every time."

In the late Presidential contest, Jay Gould was a Blaine man, and it cannot be doubted that he was an "Erie Railroad man" at the same time. It is not to be doubted that he made his "contribution" and that he considered it "a good paying investment for the company." What a country this would have been with such a man as James G. Blaine at the head! That he would have "cast anchors to the windward" in favor of such men as Jay Gould, his past record clearly enough demonstrates. There is now no partizan reason for speaking of James G. Blaine as a corrupt man, but that he is corrupt, and that he is unfit for any high position of trust, should be clear as noonday to the man who is not morally or intellectually blind. The American people, regardless of party, should thank the God of nations that Grover Cleveland, and not James G. Blaine, has been chosen to rule over them.

THE war is at last over. Henceforth there will be no North and no South in national politics. The bloody shirt will never again be waved as a campaign issue. Hatred between the sections will never again be preached from the stump. The election of November the 4th inst., was the funeral sermon of dead issues. Henceforth parties must contend for the support of the people, not upon their past records, but upon their records at the time being; not upon dead issues, but upon living issues. Yes, the war is over.

THERE is a widespread feeling, that President elect Cleveland should in his distribution of places of trust, recognize the independent element of the Republican party. Carl Schurz is talked about as minister of the interior, or George William Curtis would very fittingly succeed Mr. Lowell.

THE career of Grover Cleveland proves that in politics as in all other things, honesty is the best policy. The smart politician may scheme and manoeuvre to forward his own interests, but the man who stands up for right methods and performs his duty fearlessly, must by the force of circumstances come to the front.

BEN BUTLER and Charles A. Dana,—these two, but the most contemptible of these is Dana. A spiteful, venamous, malicious old man, he will go down to his grave without honor and without esteem. The New York Sun too, will go down with him, unless a better man than he is placed at its head.

JAY GOULD'S Western Union Telegraph mixed, confused, retarded, and it is charged even falsified returns immediately succeeding the late election. The matter was so apparent that intense indignation was aroused all over the country. In New York City there were loud threats of mobbing Gould, and crowds paraded the streets singing, "Hang Jay Gould to a sour apple tree." From this condition of affairs Mr. Gould took a hint. He telegraphed Mr. Cleveland congratulating him on his election.

"Ring out the old,
Ring in the new,
Ring out the false,
Ring in the true."

CLEVELAND'S CABINET.

FIGURING ON THE POSSIBLE SELECTIONS.

From Phila. Times.

WASHINGTON Nov. 10.

Democrats here are canvassing the probable complexion of Cleveland's cabinet in as lively a manner as though there were not a shadow of dispute about his election, and Republicans find themselves unconsciously falling into the same habit, though they vociferously declare that they believe Blaine is elected when their attention is called to their slip. It is noticeable that none are bothering their heads about the personality of Mr. Blaine's Cabinet. A number of prominent Southern men were to-day spoken to on the subject, and they agreed that the South should demand at least two representatives in the Cabinet. The names of Lamar, Hunton, Reagan and Beck were most frequently mentioned. Senator Beck said to-day that he would not give up his seat in the Senate for a Cabinet position and expressed a belief that Mr. Bayard would also prefer a continuation of his Senatorial career in case he were offered a Cabinet portfolio. The blunt-spoken Scotch Kentuckian said it was absurd to talk of Randall for the head of the Treasury Department, but did not explain the nature of the absurdity.

Mr. Beck's Cabinet, as far as he has got, is Thurman for the State Department, McDonald for Attorney General, General McClellan for Secretary of War and Reagan for Postmaster General. Several prominent Democrats are carrying the following slate around in their pockets; Thurman or Bayard for Secretary of State, Randall for the Treasury, McClellan for the War Department, Hunton or Lamar for the Navy, Carl Schurz for the Interior, McDonald for Attorney General and Reagan for Postmaster General. It is claimed by many, however, that the Secretary of the Treasury must come from New York, and that that will preclude the selection of Schurz for the Interior, as he is now a citizen of that State. Tariff Democrats are enthusiastic for Randall for the Treasury position and the free traders oppose him. Speaker Carlisle is named for a position by representatives of the latter faction. It is said that Dorsheimer, of New York, would like to be Attorney General, but here again the unexplained assumption that the Secretary of the Treasury must be a New Yorker, stands in the way of the portly ex-Lieutenant Governor's ambition. No one seems to be able to name a New York candidate for the position. Senator Kernan's name bobbed to the surface once for a moment, but went down again like lead. Democrats who are looking for a Sherman or a McCullough in the Empire State have not yet apparently discovered their man. They say that all the ablest Democratic financiers of New York have business alliances that will not admit of their choice. The Eastern States do not have a place at all in the affections of the Cabinet makers.

The Three Independent Republican Leaders.

From the Brooklyn Union.

The revolt of Independent Republicans against Blaine, which resulted in Cleveland's election, had three conspicuous leaders.

George William Curtis went as a delegate to the Republican Convention. He fought to the last against the nomination of a corruptionist, and when it was accomplished he came home to renew the fight against his election. He made Harper's Weekly one of that large number of Republican journals which repudiated the Republican candidate, and addressed their sober appeal to the conscience and patronism of Republican leaders. Mr. Curtis worthily led the anti-Blaine Republican press.

Carl Schurz stood forth as the fit type of that once foreign but now thoroughly American element which constitutes so large a percentage of our population. German by birth, American by long residence, always a believer in the Republican party, but never so partisan as not to place principle above party, Mr. Schurz spoke to native and foreign-born hearers alike with a unique impressiveness. His long series of speeches against Blaine in nearly a dozen States left their ineffaceable impress on the returns of Tuesday's elections.

Last, but not least—so far from that, the greatest of all—came Henry Ward Beecher. The Plymouth pastor contributed to the canvass the element of religious fervor.

Our Jim Beaten.

[After New York Sun June, 1876.]

Wha-at—Jim?
Jim Blaine!
Beat him?
Great Cane!
Jim Blaine,
Of the State of Maine,
Smartest cuss in out of the rain—
Beat him?
Our Jim?
Cheeky Jim,
Full to the brim
Of brass and sass and pluck and vim,
Beat Jim?
Why, he's the festive little pill
That went through catawampus Hill,
And made the chivalry so ill;
He stole Ulysses's little squirt,
And put on Morton's bloody shirt;
Hammered Conkling's bump of gumption,
Wallopped Hayes out of resumption,
Whitened Butler's gory locks,
And put a black eye on Sam Cox.
Beat him?
Our Jim—
Jim Blaine,
Of the State of Maine!
Will somebody please explain
Why he has been beaten again?

A Candidate Who Grew.

[From the Boston Herald.]

Gov. Cleveland was a model candidate. Through all the long and bitter campaign he conducted himself with modesty, propriety and dignity. He constantly attended, with but two or three brief interruptions to the exacting duties of the Executive of the imperial State of New York, not saying or writing a single word that was not correct in taste and judgment. He has made upon his countrymen the impression of a level-headed, clear-eyed, reticent man, not brilliant, but weighing well his words and speaking to the purpose. The desperate warfare made upon him was the lowest and dirtiest ever made on a candidate for President. He stood the investigation well, and constantly gained the respect of the best men in the country by his modesty and candor. Looking back upon the hot campaign, the supporters of Gov. Cleveland cannot find a single act or word of their candidate to regret. He steadily grew in public esteem from the beginning to the end of the campaign.

A DANGEROUS GAME.

NOTES OF WARNING TO JAY GOULD FROM THE NEW YORK PRESS.

N. Y. Times Leading Editorial on Last Friday.

For the past forty-eight hours Mr. Jay Gould has been using the Western Union Telegraph to spread abroad through the United States false information as to the result of the election in the State of New York. The proof of this is well known to every intelligent journalist in New York. It is the same thing that Mr. Gould did in October with reference to the election in Ohio, when not one specific statement capable of verification or exposure was allowed to pass over the Western Union wires, and when the statements that were sent were shown within two days to be conspiculously and intentionally false. As to the vote of New York, the plot has been nearly identical and has been carried out with the same persistence. The returns are sent out in lumps of "election districts," which are not named and cannot be identified, and the publication of these has been made in sums and at times to suit the schemers. Occasional pronunciamentos from the Blaine committee have shown that returns from comparatively remote points have been used promptly, while those from points within an hour's ride of the Western Union Building have been held back.—Meanwhile there have been long breaks during which no returns whatever have been given out, and these intervals have been used to issue boasting bulletins in vague terms as to the general result. All the time the despatches in the offices of real newspapers, from county committees of both sides and from county officers holding the official returns, have steadily contradicted both the doctored figures of the Gould men and the bulletins of the Blaine managers.

The motives of the Gould-Blaine combination are obvious. They have determined to keep back the truth, to confuse the public mind and to inflame the passions of their followers or dupes in hope that by fraud and corruption in Virginia, in West Virginia or Indiana they could secure enough electoral votes to dispense with New York. They have also dared to think that there would be an opportunity to falsify the vote in this State, and if every device elsewhere failed them, to steal the Presidency here. Besides this was the plan to hedge on the heavy bets which their confidence in their ante-election plots, in their alliance with the arch-trickster Butler, and in the corruption fund raised at the Field-Gould dinner had led them to make. There was also the chance of recouping their heavy election expenses by the manipulation of the stock market. But the main purpose was to carry out the desperate scheme which was to place Blaine in the White House, put Gould's Judges in the Supreme Court, and open the rich leads of official patronage to the principal partners in this blind pool, Gould and Blaine, and to those whom they should choose to admit to a share of the profits.

This scheme was obviously rottenly corrupt; it was plainly desperate; it was, moreover, dangerous for its authors to a degree which they could hardly realize. Shut out from intercourse with honest men, surrounded by plotters whose necks were in the same halter and whose greed was fired by the same hopes and by flatterers who thought that thrift would follow fawning, neither Gould nor Blaine, who is subordinate to Gould, could realize the depth and heat of the indignation which their base designs aroused in the public mind. Nor, accustomed to listen only to those whose wits were hired by themselves, did they conceive of the sharp inspection, the untiring vigilance, the trained acumen of the honest journalists and the political leaders who were upon their track. They thought, in their blind pursuit of their own gain, that the men who for months have been following them at every step, exposing their falsehoods, laying bare their tricks and baffling their best-laid plans, would now humbly veil their eyes and stand silent while the people were robbed of the priceless victory for honest government which had been so laboriously striven for, so gloriously won. They have already seen their terrible error. Another day will not have passed before they will first pause and then retreat. If they do, the people will allow them to pocket without molestation such compensation as they have been able to pick up for their reckless expenditures and wagers. But if, in their madness, they choose to go on, the people will know how to deal with them.

Commercial Capabilities of Mexico.

As for the capabilities of the Mexican in commerce and manufacturing, so small is the development in these directions that it is difficult as yet to tell what the future will be. At present nearly all the importing trade in this country is in the hands of the French, Germans and Spaniards, as well as a large share of the retail trade, especially in dry goods, hardware, drugs, machinery, carriages and wagons, tools, &c. The Mexican storekeepers confine their attention mostly to articles of food, groceries, meats, liquors and the like. They are not very enterprising as a race, and do not venture into new enterprises as do the Americans. The native Mexican shops are, for the most part, little holes in the wall, and their stock of merchandise of the most meagre character. It is my impression, though I give it only as a personal impression, that the large retail trade and almost the entire wholesale business of this country will for many years to come remain in the hands of foreigners, the only change being a constant increase of Americans and English among the large wholesale trading houses, crowding out or diminishing the business done by the French and Spanish houses, who are not so "pushing" or so adventuresome as either the English or the Americans.—Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

THE CENTURY

IN 1885.

A GREAT ENTERPRISE.

Papers on the Civil War.

The important feature of the Century magazine for the coming year—indeed, perhaps the most important ever undertaken by the magazine—will be a series of separate papers on the great battles of the War for the Union, written by general officers high in command upon both the Federal and the Confederate sides,—General Grant (who writes of Vicksburg, Shiloh, and other battles), Generals Longstreet, McClellan, Beauregard, Rosecrans, Hill, Admiral Porter, and others. The series opens in the November Century with a graphically illustrated article on written by the Confederate General, G. T. Beauregard. Brief sketches, entitled 'Recollections of a Private,' papers chronicling special events, descriptions of various auxiliary branches of the service, etc., will supplement the more important series by the various generals.

The Battle of Bull Run,

A strict regard for accuracy will guide the preparation of the illustrations, for which the Century has at its disposal a very large quantity of photographs, drawings, portraits maps, plans, etc., hitherto unused. The aim is to present in this series, not official reports, but commanding officers' accounts of their plans and operations,—interesting personal experiences which will record leading events of the war, and possess, at the same time, a historical value not easily to be calculated.

Fiction.

In this line the Century will maintain its prestige, and furnish the best stories by American writers that can be procured. In November begins

A New Novel by W. D. Howells,

Author of 'Venetian Days,' 'A Modern instance,' etc. This story deals with the rise of an American business man. A novel by Henry James, a novelette by Grace Denio Litchfield, and short stories by 'Uncle Remus,' Frank R. Stockton, H. H. Boyesen, T. A. Janvier, H. H., Julian Hawthorne, and other equally well-known writers will appear at various times.

Miscellaneous Features.

Under this heading may be included a series of papers on the Cities of Italy by W. D. Howells, the illustrations being reproductions of etchings and drawings by Joseph Pennell; a series on being an interesting group of papers by E. V. Smalley, Lieut. Schwatka, Principal Grant (of Kingston, Ontario), and others, descriptive of little-known regions; papers on French and American art,—sculpture and painting, with some exquisite illustrations; papers on

The New North-West,

Astronomy, Architecture, and History,

the first being by Professor Langley and others. Under Architecture are included more of Mrs. Van Rensselaer's articles on Churches, City and Country Houses, etc. Colonel George E. Waring, Jr., will describe

Progress in Sanitary Draining;

E. C. Stedman, Edmund Goose, and others will furnish literary essays; George W. Cable will contribute in various ways; several papers on sport and adventure will soon be published, and will write from time to tim on outdoor subjects.

Readers of the CENTURY may feel sure of keeping abreast of the times on leading subjects that may properly come within the province of a monthly magazine. Its circulation is now about 140,000 monthly, the November number exceeding that figure. Subscriptions should date from this number beginning the War Series and Mr. Howell's novel. Price $4,000 a year, 35 cents a number. All book-sellers and news-dealers sell it and take subscriptions, or remittance may be made to the publishers.

ST. NICHOLAS

FOR YOUNG FOLKS.

Attractions for 1884-5.

No printed periodical can take the place of parent, pastor or school teacher; but a good magazine can supplement their work and influence to a wonderful degree. In view of this, it is not extravagant to say that—instead of 'Can we afford to take ST. NICHOLAS?'—the question of every earnest household in English-speaking countries, to-day, should be 'Can we afford not to take ST. NICHOLAS?'

The magazine, during its eleven happy years of existence, under the editoral charge of

has grown familiar to hundreds of thousands of young readers; and their interest and intelligent enjoyment have constantly inspired the editor and publishers to fresh effort. To-day, its strength is in its wholesome growth, its sympathy with young life, its hearty recognition of the movement of events, and its steadily increasing literary and pictorial resources. The following are some of the good things already secured for future numbers of ST. NICHOLAS:

'His One Fault,' a serial story for boys, by the popular author, J. T. Trowbridge.

'Personally Conducted,' illustrated papers on famous places in Europe. By Fank R. Stockton.

'Historic Girls,' a companion series to 'Historic Boys.' By E. S. Brooks

'Ready for Business;' suggestions to boys about to choose an occupation,—based on personal interviews with prominent representatives of various trades and professions. By G. J. Manson.

'Driven Back to Eden,' a serial. By E. P. Roe.

'Talks for Young Folks,' a series of popular papers, by H. H. (Helen Jackson.)

'Among the Law-makers;' recollections of a boy-page in the U. S. Senate,—containing much political information, both instructive and amusing. By Edmund Alton

'Davy and the Goblin,' a very funny serial story by a new writer, Chas. Carryl.

Short Stories by Louisa M. Alcott.

'The Progress of Invention;' 'From Palanquin to Parlor-car,' 'From Cros-bow to 100-ton Gun,' etc. Descriptive papers, by Chas. E. Bolton.

'Art Work for Young Folks;' papers on decorative handicraft, by Chas. G. Leland.

'Sheep or Silver?' a story of Texan life. By the late Rev. William M. Bake.

'A Garden of Girls,' being six short stories for girls, by Six Leading Writes.

'Tales of Two Continents;' sories of adventure, by H. H. Boyesen.

'Cartoons for Boys and Girls,' funny pictures, by St. Nicholas Artists.

'From Bach to Wagner;' brief pointed biographies of great musicians. By Agatha Tunis.

Special Papers by chosen writers, including Mary Hallock Foote, Joaquin Miller, Alice Wellington Rollins, G. B. Bartlett, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Rev. Washington Gladden, Julia Schayer, Anna Lea Merritt, W. O. Stoddard, D. Ker, Ernest Ingersoll, Clara E. Clement, Lieutenant Schwatka.

The Illustrations will be the work of the very best artists and engravers,—and there will be plenty of them. In the November and December numbers are beautiful

COLORED FRONTISPIECES.

Buy the November number for the children. It costs only 25 cents, and all book and news-dealers sell it. The subscription price is $3 00 a year, and now is just the time to subscribe.

A free specimen copy of St. Nicholas will be sent on request. Mention this paper.
