Russell say that in case the said six . thousand pounds of lad were not paid the land was to be his brother William's in case he Came againe into Mary land from the South ward, & this she heard him say very neare about the time when he the said Walter gave directions to Charles Russell to make the former Will, if not at the very instant.
To the third she saith she Cannot Sweare that Walter Russell was of a sound disposing minde, being soe extreamly weake & soe very neare his death & faultering in his speech very much & as well as he could utter his minde said as she understood him, he would signe this Will if it were as his other will was.
To the fourth she saith that William Russell received the rent of the land & that she heard her brother William say, that he had sold the land to Cap: James Meale.
To the fifth she saith that she did see Charles Russell write this Will now shewed her from another Coppy & shee hath heard that Cap: Josias Fendall penned that Coppy.
At last appeared John Easstock. Who

To the first saith that he knoweth of noe other Will of Walter Russell but this now shewed him, which he saith is the same to which he put his marke ad a Witness.
To the second he Cannot sweare.
To the third he saith that he Conceaves he was of a sound disposing minde & spoke good sense.
To the fourth he Cannot sweare.
To the fifth he Cannot Sweare, more then that he see Charles Russell Write it according as Walter Russell gave it.
Whereupon the Judge would advise upon the Evidence till the fourth of Aprill.
