COLLINS & HOPPER,
EDITORS AND PUBLISHERS.

The American Flag was raised over the Island of Cuba on Sunday at noon and the sovereignty of Spain was formally relinquished.

After being out five hours the jury found Mrs. Cordelia Botkin guilty of murder in the first degree, for the killing of Mrs John P. Dunning, and Mrs. Deane, Mrs. Dunning's sister. The punishment was fixed at life imprisonment.

Henry Watterson, the versatile genius of the Courier-Journal, in the New Year editorial of his paper referring to the national democratic outlook, said: "The voters have about made up their minds that party pledges are fabricated chiefly to be broken. Let the Democrats, banking on this circumstance, put up a [t]icket without a platform; let them nominate [candidates] for President and Vice-President who [are] a platform in themselves; and if they can induce the great Admiral and the gallant General to accept, here is the card to win with: For President, George Dewey, of Vermont. For Vice-President—Fitzhugh Lee, of Virginia. Platform — The Stars and Strips, God bless them.

A CHRISTMAS SERMON.

Extracts from the Fine Sermon of Father Miles J NcManus, at Galena.

St. Denis Church on 'Xmas Day was the scene of elaborate ceremonies, especially at the late mass, celebrated at 10.30 A. M. The choir, augmented by several voices, was assisted by an orchestra including the best musical talent of the congregation. The church was crowded, and those present seemed to highly appreciate the ceremonies appropriate to the occasion. Mr. B. J. McCauley presided at the organ and directed the music in his well-known masterly style. The following was the musical programme:

"Asperges" ... Webb
"Kyrie" "Gloria" "Sanctus" } ... Battman
Credo ... Leonard
Offertory (Adeste Fidelis) ... Nonvello

During the mass Father McManus delivered a sermon appropriate to the occasion, part of which was as follows:

"The closing days of the nineteenth century are days of great energy, of intellectual and material progress. Advancement is the ambition of all, and the burthen of the great world's song. The masses and the classes, it would appear, are arriving at a better understanding; nations are clamoring for unity, and even the sects are searching for a common ground whereon all may unite and labor for the common good of all. This is but a dream, for there is one great obstacle to this unity of purpose, and that obstacle is Jesus Christ, who is a sign of contention between those who hate Him and those who love Him.

"We are told that in the beginning God was all goodness, all love, but there came a time when His love was turned into wrath through the rebellion of angels and men. We read in the Apocalypse there was a terrible silence in heaven, after which Lucifer and his host of followers were precipitated into hell, and then began that awful warfare between the powers of light and darkness which will continue to be waged while men are born into the world. Our first parents, less culpable than the angels, were driven from the Garden of Delights and condemned to misery and death, but God in his mercy promised them a Saviour, a Redeemer. "I will place enmity," said he to the serpent, "between thee and the woman, between thy seed and her seed, and she will bruise thy head." This promise has been and is the hope of the human race.

"Truths entrusted to tradition sometimes lose their primitive purity, but they are never entirely eliminated from the mind and heart of man. Thus the far East grew attentive to the prophecies of Balal, and Rome became captivated by the sweet-singing Virgil, who announced the advent of a great king and peace throughout the world. Even in the forests of distant lands we find scintillations of the divine light. But in order that this light should not be extinguished in Paganism, God raised up the Jewish people, to whom He entrusted the mission of perpetuating the glories of the past and the secrets of the future. From the very beginning this glorious mission marked them a distinct people, and the honor conferred became the soul of their nationality.

"God represented the mysteries of Christ in various ways. First by types. These types were facts, events or personages. A type is a divine sign which cannot be counterfeited. Great personages, like Alexander, Cyrus and John the Baptist were announced, but not prefigured. But when it became a question of Christ says St. Thomas, the history of the Jewish people seems to owe its development to the Messianic idea. The bronze serpent, the Paschal Lamb, are signs of Christ and of redemption. Abel killed by his brother, Melchisedeck offering bread and wine in sacrifice, Isaac, who ascended the mountain side carrying wood for the holocaust, Moses, who delivered the people from the slavery of the Pharoahs, all represent and prefigure Christ. But it is the biography of Christ which puts forth the strongest argument for the divinity of Christianity. His genealogy descends from woman, who is to crush the serpent's head. Her progeny is divided. She comes from the nation of which Abraham is the head, and to that nation God speaks: "In thee shall all nations of the earth be blessed." Abraham was favored with two sons, and God appeared to Isaac and said: "All nations shall be blessed in thee and in him who shall issue from thee." But Isaac has two sons, Esau and Jacob, and God appears to Jacob and declares to him: "I am the God of Abraham and of Isaac, thy father, and I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven, and thy descendants shall be blessed, and in thee all the kings of the earth." But Jacob has twelve sons, heads of as many tribes. Which tribe shall have the honor of carrying the sacred blood to the veins of Christ? Jacob, lying on his death bed, assembles about him his twelve sons. God breathes into him the spirit of prophecy, and as the light of eternal day begins to break upon his vision he points out Judah as he from whom the Redeemer should come, and says: "Thy brethren shall adore thee and the sceptre shall not de-[illegible] from Judah until He come Who [illegible]ght to come, and Who is the expecta-[illegible]of nations." And from what fam-[illegible]ll the Redeemer be born? Listen [illegible]ah: "There shall come forth a rod [illegible]f the stem of Jesse, the spirit of the [illegible]hall be upon Him, and all nations [illegible]rn unto Him." All the prophets [illegible]naming David the progenitor of [illegible]h. But who of the great king's family shall give Him birth? Listen again to Isaiah: "Hearken to the prodigies of the God of Israel. The Lord Himself shall give you a sign. Behold a virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and His name shall be called 'Emanuel.' He shall be called 'Counselor,' 'The Mighty God,' 'The Everlasting Father,' 'The Prince of Peace.'" And now follow the Scriptures and you shall see the blood which is to flow in the veins of the Redeemer descend from the sinful to the immaculate woman, from Noah to Abraham, from Abraham to Isaac, from Isaac to Jacob, from Jacob to Judah, from Judah to Jesus, from Jesus to Mary, the Mother of God.

"My dear brethren, can the annals of the world produce anything similar? The evangelists narrate it, upon whose testimony we are obliged to accept it as authentic, and the prophets had announced Him thousands of years ago. But where is this Redeemer to be born? Listen to Micah: 'And thou, Bethlehem, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall He come, the Ruler of Israel. And for this, thou shalt be great, and abide unto the ends of the earth.' But when shall this great Ruler come? Jacob says before the subjection of the Jewish nation, and Daniel says that He shall come in the seventh week after the promulgation of the edict. And Malachi, that before the second temple be destroyed by a foreign nation, an extraordinary messenger will prepare the way. "Behold, I will send My messenger, and he shall prepare His way before Me." But is this all? David in prophetic vision saw the kings of Arabia bringing Him gifts; he saw even the gold and frankincense. The prophets did not confine themselves to a narration of the circumstances of His birth They speak of His beautiful traits of character, His poverty, His humility and pity for a sin-stricken world. They tell of His suffering, His rejection even by His own people, and, lastly, of His ignominious death on the cross for the salvation of the world. Is not this story of the prophets sufficient to illicit our admiration; and are we not moved to worship the omnipotence of Almighty God?

"What objections has the incredulous man to oppose to this concurrent testimony of the prophets, verified by the realization of facts, as contained in the New Testament? Shall he say the prophets connived together? The difference in times and other circumstances renders such impossible. Shall he doubt the authenticity of the prophesies? The prophecies were unknown before the coming of Christ, and nearly five hundred years elapsed from the last of the prophecies to their fulfillment; and in order to render all doubt impossible, Divine Providence decreed that under Ptolemy, king of Egypt, thirty years before Christ, these prophecies were translated, and this translation, called "The Translation of the Seventy," was already in circulation. Shall he say they were the result of chance? Their variety and great number preclude the idea of chance. The Messianic idea was continuous in the minds and affairs of the Jewish people, and the very definition of chance excludes the idea of continuity. "There is no chance," says the immortal Lacordaire, "of 1,000 years duration." Shall he advance as an argument that the Redeemer having been rejected by the Jewish people, did not fulfill their expectation; that contrary to their expectation, He came to establish a spiritual kingdom instead of restoring to them the glories and triumphs of former days? But His rejection was foretold by the prophets, and the spiritual kingdom of Christ, unlike the kingdom of this world, shall endure forever. Where are the powers of this world that opposed Christ and his doctrines incardinated into the teaching of His infallible church? The Jews who rejected Christ have no longer a national existence, no longer a common place of sacrifice. The greatest personages of the ancient and modern world who opposed Him or His church have passed away, and left no trace behind save what is embalmed within the lettered folds of sacred or profane history. The centuries are strewn with the vanquished who have opposed Christ's kingdom on earth, so that, in truth, it may be said that history has no consolation or encouragement for the enemies of Jesus Christ.

What can infidelity offer to the world more consoling or more beautiful than that suggested by the angelic chorus which descended so softly upon a weary, sleeping world on that eventful Christmas Night nearly 2000 years ago—"Peace on Earth to Men of Good Will?" Where are its orphan asylums, its hospitals, its heroes or its virtues? What has it done to console the widow, the orphan, or alleviate the sufferings of the afflicted or console the dying? Its feeble operations are confined to spiritual anarchy—attempting to rob the Christian of his greatest hope.

"One of the strongest proofs in support of the Divinity of Christianity is not only the fact that it has defeated its enemies, but also the universality of its consolation. There is no condition of life to which its consoling truths cannot be applied. The history of Christianity is one of self-sacrifice and heroic deeds. Neither fever, fire, nor the sword can abate its holy zeal. Has the history of this closing century recorded the number of regiments which infidelity recruited and sent to the front during our recent war with Spain in defense of Cuba's suffering humanity? Like the dark-lantern brigade who in time of peace, constitute themselves the sole protectors of the American flag, we presume they were contemplating reduced rates to Canada when Old Glory was dancing fandangos to the music of Spanish bullets on the field of Santiago. How many bands of noble womanhood did it send to the fever-stricken southern camps? We have not heard of any, but on the contrary, noble womanhood sustained by the spirit of Christianity in the persons of the Red Cross and Sisters of Charity went forth with the courage of the martyrs of old to succor the wounded and console the dying. What spirit is, at present, fostering rebellion in the Philippines against the honest efforts of the American government? The spirit of infidelity as championed by Aguinaldo, whose greatest desire seems to be abuse of the church that fed, clothed and endeavored to make a man of him. He, too, in the course of events, shall pass away to join Judas, Nero, Julian & Co.,—the dead failures.

"Since Christ, the Foretold of Prophets, has come into the world on his mission of 'peace to men of good will,' there is a correlative obligation on our part to accept the blessings of that mission and to pass them down the ages to generations as yet unborn, and most especially, should the teaching element of Christianity feel the pressure of that obligation. The 20th century promises fair to be one of unusual intellectual activity and aggressiveness, and the church has already felt the necessity of greater endeavor. As the head of our nation calls for stalwart volunteers when the country's interests are in danger, so will Christianity of the 20th century send forth a bugle-blast calling for men strong of intellect and strong of purpose. The day is fast closing when the insignia of office will any longer be an argument in defence of Christianity or the elevating doctrines which it teaches. The church of God was never benefited by cyclonic gazoos or fat salaries, for it rather championed the idea later expressed by Burns when in a bright moment he wrote:

"The rank is but the guinea's stamp,
A man's a man for a' that."

"What the Christian world wants and most needs is promoters who will feel as comfortable in the sandal of St. John the Baptist as the patent leathers of the blooming youth who regards the earth as merely an exhibition space set apart for his individual use; men who can appease the pangs of hunger with, at least, modern 'locusts and wild honey' without feeling that their position and the world are unkind to them; men whose feet are not too sacred for the alleys and by-ways of the great cities vitiated by the sulphurous breath issuing from the nostrils of industry, the towering smoke-stacks of the world's great mart; men who believe that God is in the country as well as in the city, and that the village nestling by the forest has souls suffering spiritual hunger while the gay and gilded throng is suffering spiritual indigestion from a well-advertised dose of pulpit sensationalism or homoeopathic doses of operatic buffoonery administered by a high-salaried choir. This is, indeed, monotonous to the low-salaried church-goer, but fortunately he sees in it all the humorous side of a divine institution. Then let us hope, since in the nature of things it is necessary that Christianity have a human side, that its divine side will be brought into evidence for all alike. This is the object of Christianity, the reason of Christ's advent into the world. The church of God has never faced an enemy, but to defeat him, and she will continue to exist while she has enemies to defeat. If the church is a human institution she is now very old—nearly 1900 years—and like all human institutions she will decay and become but a memory. If on the other hand, she is Divine, why resist the omnipotence of God? Let us then thank God for his goodness to men. Let us frequently ask Him to permit us to share in, at least, one ray of that light which guided the shepherds to the cradle of Christ, that we also may arrive without faltering at our Heavenly Home prepared for those who love God and keep his commandments."

FROM ROCK HALL.

Magdalene's Delightful News Contribution to the Transcripts's Readers.

Our geographies tell us that Maryland has a "temperate climate" and they might add that it is also a variable one. When we have a snow storm before Thanksgiving, a genuine electrical storm before Christmas, and the New Year is ushered in by a small-sized blizzard, the variety is almost too much "spice of life."

By-the-way, how many of your readers have written 1898 since Sunday last? And how many of them went to the Christmas entertainments at the churches? Doubtless the majority of them.

Wesley Chapel and Rock Hall opened wide their doors to admit old and young. Santy telegraphed several messages. When he reached Chestertown he deemed it nearly impossible to come any farther because one reindeer was dead and the roads were muddy, but he made the effort and entered the M E. Church just as the pretty recitations were concluded and happy childish voices were singing "Santa Claus is coming." He delighted each little heart by a present, and did not forget the teachers and officers. Many packages besides candy and nuts were there and their contents suggested love, friendship and kindness, and even laughable jokes. One lady received a nice fresh Maryland biscuit to which she added upon her return home some nice fresh Maryland butter, and ate it with such evident relish that one envious on-looker felt like saying with the little bootblack to his comrade who was eating an apple, "Say, will you give me the core?" but feared to receive the same reply, "There ain't agoing to be no core."

The rumors of last week have been verified. On Thursday, Dec. 30th., Miss Katie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Sewell, was married to Mr. William Gale by Rev. C. K. McCaslin. The reception was at the home of the bride's parents. The popular young couple have the best wishes of their friends.

There have been several young people at their homes for the Christmas holiday. Among them are the Misses Clara Middleton, Anna Leary, Louise Harris, Helen Sappington, Minnie Sewell and Nannie Taylor, and Messrs. Frank Sappington, Elwood Burgess and Melville Arthur; while Misses Nita Maslin and Jessie Arthur visited friends in Baltimore. Mr. Clarence Greenwood spent some time at Still Pond. Mr. Geo. Henderson, of Baltimore, is at Mr. J. T. Arthur's and Miss Amy Hogg is the guest of Miss Mary Hersch.

On Christmas day, the pastor of the M. E. Church being indisposed, Rev. James Downey addressed the congregation in the morning, his subject being one of the prophecies concerning the birth of Christ. Mr. Outten gave a special Christmas sermon in the evening about the wonderful fulfillment of the prophecy.

A host of the ladies of the church walked into the parsonage on Friday evening bearing with them many of the necessities and luxuries of life. It was totally unexpected by the good pastor and his wife, but they welcomed the visitors cordially. A pleasant evening was passed, refreshments were served, and the company returned to their homes wishing their genial hosts a happy New Year.

Many friends of Mrs. Etta Leaverton went in a group to call on her on Thursday evening but found her away from home, however, a messenger soon told her to return as a friend had called, and her surprise was complete when she found that one really meant many. The evening was passed in amusements of various kinds. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ayres, Mr. and Mrs. John Casey, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Greenwood, Mr and Mrs. Lee A. Durding, Misses Annie and Mollie Durding, Jennie Apsley, Ida Ayres, Lizzie Taylor, Sallie Casey, Kate Maslin, Sallie Crosby.

There was a pleasant dance given by a committee of young men in the Knights of Pythias hall on Thursday evening. Music was furnished by Messrs. Eugene Willson and John Ayres and must have been inspiring since many of the dancers lingered until three o'clock in the morning.

Master LeRoy Crosby is on the sick list, and looks regretfully at the snow and a new sled which Santa Claus was kind enough to leave behind when he visited the little man's home; but Roy is generous and loans the sled to his cousin

Misses Clara and Julia Middleton invited a large number of their young friends to spend Monday evening with them. The prospect of pleasure was too clearly defined to admit of a refusal so the kind invitation was accepted and none were disappointed in their anticipations. Miss Clara expects to graduate at the Normal school in Baltimore next May and return to her home prepared for the more arduous duties of life. We wish her perfect success.

Messrs. Editors, death is always sad, but your paper was unfolded last week to see what mention you had made of the closing scenes of life of two personal friends of the writer, Mrs. Walter Kendall and Miss Laura Ashley. The passing away of Mrs. Kendall was peculiarly sad but if sympathy can assuage grief it must surely be a comfort to her husband and little children to know that far and wide people sorrow with them and her many other loved ones.

Miss Ashley had known for months that death was likely to visit her, but at the last her suffering was intense. She had been a useful member of Piney Neck Church for several years and is sincerely mourned by her mother and a host of other friends. Magaline.

La Grippe Successfully Treated.

"I have just recovered from the second attack of la grippe this year," says Mr. James A. Jones, publisher of the Leader, Mexia, Texas. "In the latter case I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and I think with considerable success, only being in bed a little over two days against ten days for the former attack. The second attack I am satisfied would have been equally as bad as the first but for the use of this remedy, as I had to go to bed in about six hours after being 'struck' with it, while in the first case I was able to attend to business about two days before getting 'down.'" For sale by M. A. Toulson, druggist.

[THE HUSTLING YOUNG PROPRIETOR OF THE ARMSTRONG HOUSE.]

I WISH to inform the public that I have rented the recently remodeled and handsomely equipped Chestertown hotel, known as the Armstrong House, formerly conducted by Messrs. Armstrong and Sparks, on East Cross street. The entire house is heated by steam; closets and other conveniences in the building. The rooms are all prettily papered and nicely furnished. The table will be furnished with the best the market affords with especial attention to preparation and service, so that the traveling public need not fear that the splendid standard set by the former proprietors of the house will not be kept up. The entire management will be under the immediate supervision of myself and wife. A pool-table will be conducted in a spacious parlor, and I will also have a raw box in order that the traveling public may at any and all times secure the world-renowned Chesapeake oyster served in the most approved style. In short, the Hotel will be one of the most up-to-date houses on the peninsula and will be conducted with an eye single to the comfort and convenience of my guests and the traveling public. Soliciting a continuance of the liberal patronage heretofore accorded to the old proprietors,
I am very truly,

Christmas Presents

—TO BE HAD AT—

Mody & Lusby's.

USUALLY, stockings have most universal consideration at Christmas-time, but you should not forget the rest of your Clothing. We should like to have you inspect our line of Suits. They are neat and serviceable. The fitting kind, the economical kind, the wear resisting kind. These features don't belong to cheap shop clothing. Our's possess them because they are made right, and we sell Men's Suits low as $4.65 that are all right, $4.65 to $18.00 they range. Filled in with $6.00, $7.00, $7.50, etc., that are simply unmatchable. You'll say so when you see them.

Mothers, what about them? Here's what they think of Moody & Lusby's Boys' Suits

Take a little recreation;
Mother's lives are all vexation,
But her clear discrimination
Is a thing none disputes
And we trust you'll have compassion
On a mother whose one passion
Is to see her boy in fashion,
Wearing one of Moody & Lusby's Suits.

Good will to all. We wish you one and all a merry and happy Christmas.
Respectfully,
MOODY & LUSBY,
Directly opposite Court House. Square Dealing Clothiers.

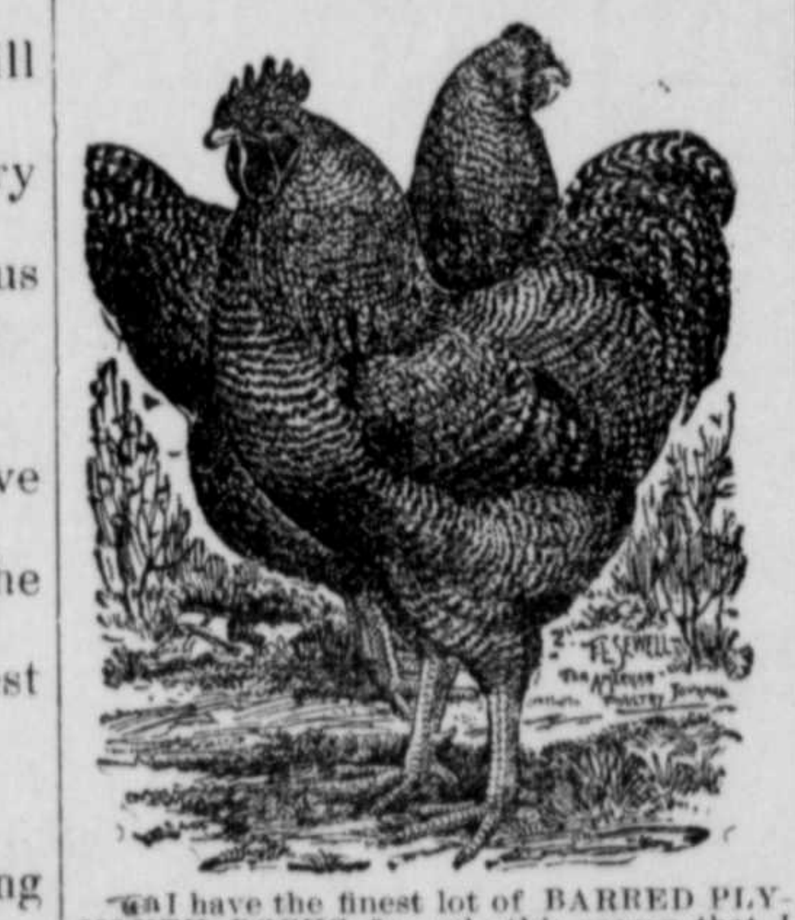

OUR MANY FRIENDS and customers will accept our thanks for the very liberal patronage extended us during the holiday just past.

We assure you we will strive to merit your confidence in the future by giving you honest goods at honest prices.

We were compelled during the Xmas rush to keep some of our customers waiting for repair work, but we are now getting straightened out and can give all repairs prompt attention.

Wishing one and all a happy New Year, we remain
Yours to please,
J. H. SIDES,
Jeweler.
