interest. In every neighborhood there are small things that never appear in a general history. Such are what we are after. For instance you may know of some house, still standing perhaps, that was shot at from some gun-boat; some event of blockade-running. These little things of different localities need not be connected nor time taken to arrange sentences gramatically. If I can get just rough outlines of them I can do the rest at my leisure. Birth-places or graves of noted men are also wanted. Now, be time enough not to forget me; also that photograph of yourself.

With Great Respect,

Very Truly,

Wm A Miller.
