best company and could not leave her for anything else after I came home from work. If I went out she went too and if she couldnt go I stayed at home with her. We loved one another in the right way and were satisfied to be together. It makes it so hard now to be separated and the cause of the separation is so heartbreaking that it is almost killing. Maybe she will yet be spared to me. She is trying mighty hard to live. She wrote a few days ago that she must get well because too many people loved
