FARMERS AND LAND OWNERS
Why not Look to Your Interest
In the Improvement of your lands, while grain is a good price and the indications have an upward tendency. Does it pay to let your land sour and degenerate for want of a stimulant? We answer no. The question arises how are we to get the best results from our crops and at the same time raise the standard of our land? We answer by the use of lime. Well, what Lime do you think will give the best results? We think
The Celebrated Kerr's Wrightsville Lime, which has stood the test for many years by our oldest and most prosperous land owners. We can furnish you with other limes as you may wish, all of which will be delivered to any station on the Balto. & Del. Bay R. R. at short notice on reasonable terms. Last but not least is the well known
Standard Lime and Stone Company's Lime, which has been the greatest selling Lime on the market; this Lime runs 97 per cent. of pure Carbonate of Lime. We can deliver this Lime by water to any point on the Chesapenke Bay or tribntaries on reasonable notice, We would be pleased to have you call on or write us before placing your orders.
COAL AND WOOD.
Building and White Wash Lime, Cements, Baled Hay, Roofing Felt and Terra Cotta Piping, all of which will be sold at city price. Hoping you may favor us with your orders and we will promise to try and please you. Thanking you for past favors, I remain, yours for business,

Farmers and Land Owners
LOOK!
IF YOU WANT to get a nice looking fence and one that will make your place look nice, why buy the Chandlee Fence Lock and Picket, the best and cheapest fence now on the market. It has a steel picket and galvanized lock and can never rust or get out of shape. It will pay you big to tear down your old rail fence and grub up the old holey thorn hedges, and put up a nice looking fence. It will increase the value of your farm 25 per cent. No farm is complete without good fencing. Both plain and barb wire sold lower than any in the county, for cash only.

Only Thirty and Gray
How is this?
Perhaps sleepless nights caused it, or grief, or sickness, or perhaps it was care.
No matter what the cause, you cannot wish to look old at thirty.
Gray hair is starved hair.
The hair bulbs have been deprived of proper food or proper nerve force.
Ayer's Hair Vigor
increases the circulation in the scalp, gives more power to the nerves, supplies missing elements to the hair bulbs.
Used according to directions, gray hair begins to show color in a few days. Soon it has all the softness and richness of youth and the color of early life returns.
Would you like our book on the Hair? We will gladly send it to you.
Write us!
If you do not obtain all the benefits you expected from the Vigor, write the doctor about it. He may be able to suggest something of value to you. Address, Dr. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Holding her skirts of snowy carot weed
Above the dew, in emerald-vested case,
Truant and free she goes, where scattered trees
Cast scarce a shade on pasture fields and mead.
Who follows there, searching her sunny creed,
Or joins her where the Hesperian breeze
Plays by a stream imagined melodies
In mornings blue, must feel a thrill, indeed.

And he who seeks her as she stands,
With golden wheat stems fastened on her breast
And scent of new mown hay upon her hands,
Her calm eyes to the evening star addressed—
A queenly donor in her harvest lands,
Sueing content, could never be unbiest.

THE CARROLL ESTATE—DOUGHOREGAN MANOR.
The Historic Home of Charles Carroll of Carrollton.

Maryland numbers among it historical places this home of the Carroll family. Located in a fertile, salubrious portion of our State, six miles distant from Ellicott City, in Howard county, every native of our good old "bay State" should feel a pleasant pride in the beauty and fine cultivation of this colonial estate, still in possession of the lineal descendants of the first colonist.

The present proprietor shows his friends, with justifiable satisfaction, the original parchment grant, given to his worthy colonist ancestor, by Lord Baltimore, still bearing its large, round, State seal, embellished with mystic symbols, in bas relief.

These old deeds of parchment have, somewhere on the margin, the autograph of the "Keeper of the seal"; in this instance, upon the Carroll grant, made in 1680, is the name of "Charles Darnall."

The original tract of land was 10,000 acres in extent, which was soon augmented by 5,000 additional, making the whole several miles in extent.

The road from Ellicott City to the Manor, gives one rather a pleasant surprise, as the topography of the immediate neighborhood about Ellicott City is so broken with deep ravines and steep hills, the visitor naturally expects to encounter a wilder country than is the case, in proceeding towards the Manor. There are frequent hills on the road, and the surrounding fields are beautifully undulating in every direction, but a good turnpike makes driving pleasant, and the landscape delights the eye.

Arriving at the entrance to Doughoregan Manor, marked by a simple genteel gate-way and the pretty grey stone Porter's Lodge, the well-kept road and fine forest trees, at once remind one of an English gentleman's private park. In our comparatively new country the smooth, hard roads of the old world are not so common as in our Mother Country across the broad Atlantic; but when we do see such, as are at Doughoregan Manor, this fine condition at once reveals the secret of constant care and labor.

All the long distance from the outer gate to the mansion there is the same beautiful order and pleasing landscape.

The house is a veritable "Manor" with a frontage of several hundred feet, the family chapel at one end and a recreation building at the other, while suites of pleasant rooms and passage ways make a continuous link between these two end buildings. Everything is in good taste and harmonious; from the front portico with its pillars and flat roof with a low railing around it, one looks upon a scene of smiling beauty in every direction across the spacious lawn, and far beyond. Some distance from the mansion, peeping through a cluster of trees, one can just see a group of modest cottages where dwell the workers upon the estate, cultivating the soil and keeping every thing in nice order.

Inside this hospitable, Maryland colonial home, the rooms are all furnished comfortably and prettily in a style that suits the house. The wall paper and furniture correspond in color tints so that one room is called "the red room," another "the blue room," another "the pink room" and so on. The square hall where one first enters, is like a room with doors on every side leading to suites of rooms, and to the front and rear, making a pretty picture as the vista opens to the gaze.

At this season vases of lovely flowers are kept on numerous tables and in odd corners, adding their fragrance to the general beauty. There are handsome family portraits of seven generations on the walls of the drawing and dining rooms, and here and there are valuable pieces of antique furniture, and on the beautiful old sideboard heirlooms in rare silver and cut-glass.

It is delightful to know that this lovely, colonial, Maryland home, still shelters the direct descendants of the patriot "Charles Carroll" who signed the Declaration of Independence so boldly, and so warmly sided with his fellow countrymen, struggling for their country's freedom.

In the simple, but beautiful chapel, every thing speaks of the loving care of the family. The altar of pure white Italian marble finely carved, and appropriately draped with thin gold embroidered muslin, is a model of neatness, with its shining silver candlesticks and usual adornment of lace and flowers. Above the altar is a fine large painting of the Saviour healing the sick and the afflicted, surrounded by a multitude of the waiting suppliants praying for relief. On one of the side walls is another splendid picture of "The Annunciation" with groups of cherubs proclaiming to the listening Virgin—(life size in the centre) the glad tidings of the high honor about to be conferred upon her. But what makes the chief historical interest, is the fact that in the vault under the rear door, rest the mortal remains of the revolutionary statesman and patriot, "Charles Carroll of Carrollton." Within the church, between the chancel and the door, is a handsome white marble memorial tablet to "the signer" as he is designated in distinction from his predecessors and numerous successors of the same name. The design is simple but appropriate. Upon a square surface, is the name with dates of birth and death, and additional carving surrounded by a chiseled wreath of oak leaves and laurel. Higher up, above a simple decoration, is carved a half-opened scroll with a quill pen across, representing the Declaration of Independence, and the pen with which he signed that famous writing, while still higher, is a carved cross, the symbol of his Christian faith. On both sides of the central square, containing the inscription, are long inverted torches, which emblems of sorrow are always carried at Roman Catholic funerals, as was explained to me on account of my Protestant ignorance.

I have thus described Dougboregan Manor because it is such a fine old place, in which every Marylander should feel an interest and laudable pride as once the home of "Charles Carroll."

How Tha Spel in Chikago.
A dispatch from Chikago yesterda sez that the bizniz men thar ar in favor of fonetik speling. Dr. E. Benjamin Andruz, the Superintendent of the Publik Skools thar, iz in favor ov it to. Wun bizniz man, it iz sed, wants the word which most pepl spel "through" to be spelt "tru," but Dr. Andruz is not in favor of this bekoz he sez that it iz not pronounst that wa. But the bizniz man sez it is pronounst just that wa.

This queschun of fonetik speling iz an old wun, and this iz just wun of the objecshuns to the plan, that everybody wood spel words the wa he himself pronounst them, even when he pronounst them rong, and so a good many pepl cood not reed what other pepl rot. Thar iz another objecshun to it. If it shud ever be uzed altogether, if books shud be printed this wa and if pepl shud lern to reed this sort of stuf, tha wood not no how to reed the books that ar printed in the present wa, and so ol the books and ol the librariz that thar ar in the world to-da wood be simply wast paper, for nobudy cood reed them exept skolorz who had learned the old wa of speling.

In Chikago tha propoz to chang the speling of 10 words, as an entering wej. But why stop at 10? Why not chang them of at wuns and rit lik this?

TWENTY-FOUR OUT OF TWENTY.
The Unequaled Performance of a Civil Service Candidate.

(From the Washington Star.)

"I think the luckiest man I ever heard of was examined here along last spring," said an old clerk in the civil service commission in a group of official reformers at the civil service building the other day.

"He was from one of the big towns in Central Illinois, and had worked for several years in a rolling mill. He was a big, brawny, handsome fellow, and I liked his looks from the first. When I am working around these examinations I always pick out my favorites and keep track of them to see if they are winners.

"Somehow this fellow had been stuffed up by his friends at home to think he could get a good, juicy place if he crammed up on a lot of old questions he had got hold of somewhere, and he put himself down for a $1200 place. When we came to read the papers for this examination my Illinois friend's papers came to me, and I tell you it was a picnic. Answer after answer was all wrong. He bounded Illinois on the north by Michigan City, and put the battle of Bunker Hill at Yorktown, and in arithmetic he said 'interest was the share a partner got of the profits,' and that the cube root of 729 was that number multiplied by itself several times. But it was in spelling he surpassed even himself. We had 20 words. They were given out for all to write down and the applicants were permitted to rewrite them as they thought was correct. I saw my fellow sweating and working like a beaver to keep up and get them all down, and when I got his spelling paper I had to copy his list and carry his copy in my pocketbook. Here it is:

"'Spelling Exircice.
"'Aperl Foreth, 1898.

Exillirate	Emansippation
Purambullate	Booy (Buoy)
Orgunnize	Doserve (deceive)
Febry	Hidrawlic
Purforate	Anthrysite
Salution	Prelimonery
Nesesry	Backterea
Publicasion	Auntesedent
Selibrate	Fulmenate
Ventalation	Redemsion

"The young fellow had missed 24 words out of 20, and he worked harder over it than anybody else there that day. It was genuine work, too. Of course, his hopes were dashed to the ground and he had a good deal of rough talk to let off about the civil service humbug. I suppose he must have received a good deal of consolation from his Congressman, for it was not long after the trouble with Spain broke out that I noticed my young fellow was commissioned a lieutenant in an Illinois regiment, and he is now in Manila. From all accounts he makes a good officer and is likely to rise.

A DAY IN THE WOODS.
How to Prepare for a Pleasant Summer Outing

In preparing for a day in the woods it is necessary to make a very liberal allowance, for the appetites of the adult members of the family, as well as of the children, seem to grow to a prodigious size when far away from all places where it is possible to renew supplies. Therefore, see to it that there is a most generous supply of good, wholesome food. Ham, tongue and nut sandwiches galore, crackers, hard-boiled eggs, plain cake, such as cup, sponge and ginger cakes, and cookies. Veal loaf and jellied chicken are admirable for picnic fare. For the benefit of the young folks quietly slip into the baskets a pound or two of cut sugar. This is wholesome, nourishing and very inexpensive, and is eagerly enjoyed by all.

The older members of the family will be much gratified if an unexpected cup of good, strong coffee is placed before them at the noonday meal. For this purpose take with you a coffee pot and a liberal supply of finely-ground coffee, and the children will gladly supply you with sticks and stones with which to build a fire-place and fire.

You will find it very much less trouble to pack all supplies in boxes which may be left in the woods when empty than to be troubled with the constant care of a basket. Instead of taking heavy plates and tumblers, purchase a supply of wooden platters, such as are used in confectionery stores, and three or four tin cups. Instead of a table cloth take a dozen or more sheets of white paper, which may be left with the plates and boxes when the day is done.

The juice of lemons put into a tightly corked bottle will save carrying the lemons with their additional weight, and so, in many ways, a little forethought will lessen your burden by many pounds.

It is well to save one's self as much as possible, for a day in the woods, with the necessary preparations, is apt to tire one, especially the mother, upon whom falls the greater part of the labor of preparation and care.

INGERSOLL ON LITERATURE.
"There is now no poet of laughter and tears, of comedy and pathos, the equal of Hood. There is none with the subtle delicacy, the aerial footstep, the flame-like motion of Shelton; none with the amplitude, sweep, and passion, with the strength and beauty, the courage and royal recklessness of Byron. The novelists of our day are not the equals of Dickens. In my judgment Dickens wrote the greatest of all novels. 'The Tale of Two Cities' is the supreme work of fiction. Its philosophy is perfect. The characters stand out like living statues. In its pages you find the blood and flame, the ferocity and self-sacrifice of the French revolution. In the bosom of the Vengeance is the heart of the horror. In 105, North Tower, sits one whom sorrow drove beyond the verge, rescued from death by insanity, and we see the spirit of Dr. Manette tremblingly cross the great gulf that lies between the night of dreams and the blessed day, where things are as they seem, as a tress of golden hair, while on his hands and cheeks fall Lucie's blessed tears. The story is filled with lights and shadows, with the tragic and grotesque. While the woman knits, while the heads fall, Jerry Cruncher gnaws his rusty nails and his poor wife "flops" against his business, and prim Miss Pross, who in the desperation and terror of love held Mme. Defarge in her arms and who in the flash and crash found that her burden was dead, is drawn by the hand of a master. And what shall I say of Sydney Carton? Of his last walk? Of his last ride, holding the poor girl by the hand? Is there a more wonderful character in all the realm of fiction? Sydney Carton, the perfect lover, going to his death for the love of one who loves another. To me the three greatest novels are 'The Tale of Two Cities,' by Dickens; 'Les Miserables,' by Hugo, and 'Ariadne,' by Ouida.

Sick-poison is a poison which makes you sick. It comes from the stomach. The stomach makes it out of undigested food.
The blood gets it and taints the whole body with it. That's the way of it.
The way to be rid of it is to look after your digestion.
If your food is all properly digested, there will be none left in the stomach to make sick-poison out of.
If your stomach is too weak to see to this properly by itself, help it along with a few doses of Shaker Digestive Cordial. That's the cure of it.
Shaker Digestive Cordial is a delicious, healthful, tonic cordial, made of pure medicinal plants, herbs and wine.
It positively cures indigestion and prevents the formation of sick-poison.
At druggists. Trial bottles 10 cents.
