a Decree was passed by your Honor appointing the said Fenby a Master to sell said property for the purposes aforesaid as by the said Bill answers Decree and other proceedings now remaining in this Court will more certainly appear.

And your Oratrix further charges that nothing has been done by the said Fenby in execution of said Decree But having obtained possession of said negroes and other property shortly after the execution of the first of the aforesaid Conveyances and under some arrangement or understanding between himself and the said Joshua and William the particulars whereof are concealed from your Oratrix he has wrongfully protected said property from the execution of the creditors of said Joshua and William and especially of your Oratrix as aforesaid. And in the mean time the said Fenby by himself and by the said Joshua and William has used and employed said property ~~and thereby~~ a part thereof and thereby deriving great gains and profits and other parts of said property has sold for large sums of money and other parts again have wrongfully consumed or worn out in and about his own proper business and she is informed and charges that the moneys so as aforesaid received by the said Fenby and by the said Joshua and William with his consent and connivance as aforesaid with the value of the gains and profits realized of the property wrongfully consumed worn out or otherwise disposed of as aforesaid exceed in the aggregate the sum of money so as aforesaid pretended to be due on the aforesaid Bills of sale as securities as aforesaid. And your Oratrix is therefore advised that it should be considered that the said Fenby was a creditor of the said Joshua and William and entitled to the benefit of the aforesaid Bills of sale as securities for payment of the moneys due him from them, this Court would require him to account for the aforesaid property and his administration thereof and would compel him to apply to the liquidation of his claims as aforesaid ~~all~~ the value of all the profits gains and emoluments whatsoever derived from the employment sale or other conversion of said property by himself or by others with his consent and connivance or which he might have derived but for his negligence or default
