gave less than $3.800 it appeared that no money or real estate orders were ever in a single instance paid by the register, but the money always received from the late or present collector. In relation to the full amount of the $3.800 in all being actually received at the Jail, the Warden represented that seeing the evidences of the payment to him he could not but say unhesitatingly he had received it. Your Committee have learned with great surprise that since the examination of the Warden, Mr Conway has stated as his opinion that he had not received the $200 while in their presence he acknowledged to have received that amount, and could not but think it had been returned for the benefit of the Jail. The cancelled checks for the full amount as charged by the Register and all paid by third parties and not by the register, are conclusive evidence that the warden did receive or should have received the full amount they call for and the unimpeachable character of the Warden gives strong assurance that all the moneys so received were faithfully applied to the uses of the Jail, be this as it may however the warden has returned to the Register since his examination the $200 in dispute which amount now makes in the hands of the register $400 the amount demanded as balance by the draft of the visitors which that officer is now prepared to pay upon presentation of the draft, subsequently to the draft of twenty six ~~thousand~~ hundred dollars as hereinbefore recited, two drafts were drawn one for $1650 the other for $1350 both which were paid by check for which results matters and credits given by the present clerk in the books of the Jail for both amounts. Your Committee have thus laid all the facts before you as developed in their investigation, and although they regret that a matter so palpable and of so easy adjustment by the parties more immediately interested should have given rise to a labored investigation, they are happy to be able thus to present the adjustment of the controversy and respectfully offer the following resolution
