A DOCTOR'S RECOMMENDATION.

J. Horton Kelley, M. D., of Still Pond, Kent county, a practicing physician of highest reputation, writes:

Still Pond, Md., Nov. 22nd, 1904.

GENTLEMEN:

It gives me pleasure to recommend the new preparation for indigestion, "Pepsimint," which has but lately been put upon the market. Knowing the formula from which it is prepared, I pronounce it perfectly safe and harmless, but an efficient remedy for ills resulting from imperfect indigestion. As a preventative of that feeling of fullness after eating and the accumulation of gas and wind arising from improperly digested food, it is the remedy par excellence. Its method of preparation (in granular, effervescent form) makes it very pleasant to take. I have both prescribed the medicine and used it personally.

J. HORTON KELLEY, M. D.

A MINISTER'S EXPERIENCE.

Rev. D. L. Greenfield, D. D., pastor Christ M. P. Church, Chestertown, says:

I have heard many people speak of it in terms of the highest possible praise.

STORIES OF THE CAT.

Legends and Facts About the Still but Half Tamed Animal.

"There are few tales of cat fidelity and many of dog, yet one thinks no worse of the cat for this," says an observer. "His very independence compels respect. He walks 'by his wild lone, waving his will tail, through the wild woods,' as an inspired modern writer has set forth. All the generations have not served to tame him, and the most domestic of the race will revert sooner to a wild life at 'the call of the blood' than any other friend of man. It is thus scarcely surprising to find that the most famous cat lovers have been drawn from the ranks of politicians and poets, those whom reasons of state or a sensitive temperament have rendered averse from trusting their fellow creatures and who consequently bestow all their affections upon the 'fireside sphinx.' We are invited to believe that the most famous of all cats, he who brought fame and fortune to his master, Dick Whittington, was no four legged animal at all, but merely the French word 'achat'—to buy and sell at profit—and that the great merchant made a pet only of his merchandise from the very beginning. Thus in later years do the idols of our youth topple about our heads.

"But other legends—nay, facts—are left us. Cardinal Wolsey, for instance, when acting in his official capacity as lord chancellor is said to have had his favorite cat always seated beside him, and another prince of the church, Richelieu, found his only relaxation in keeping a number of kittens in his private cabinet and watching their gambols during his spare moments. We cannot really reckon Richelieu as a true lover of the race, however, for directly the kittens grew to three months he had them sent away and replaced by others. Lord Chesterfield left in his will life pensions to his favorite cats and their kittens. Victor Hugo's great cat Chanoine always sat on a large red ottoman in the center of his salon and received his guests in state, showing marked displeasure if any one failed to caress or praise her.

"Tasso wrote a sonnet to his favorite cat, and Petrarch had one he loved as dearly, we are told, as Laura. No doubt she was the confidant of many of his trials and consoled him for much of the fair lady's disdain, and when pussy died the poet had her embalmed in the Egyptian fashion and carried her mummy about with him everywhere. Baudelaire, the French poet, a very shy man, was always ill at ease in any new house he entered until the family cat was brought up and introduced to him, after which, with the cat on his knee, he was perfectly happy in his silent poet fashion.

"Traditions respecting cats are, of course, legion. From time immemorial they have been regarded as somewhat uncanny, omens of weal or woe, beings to be either conciliated or crushed. The cat worship of ancient Egypt and, later, the Roman creed that the cat was sacred to Diana speak of the one; the wild charges of witchcraft—or concern in it—rife during the dark ages of Europe will attest the latter. But there is another popular belief deserving also of mention, that which sets forth the old maid as the cat's only friend, a legend arising in the mediaeval nunneries overrun with mice, where one or more cats were always kept and were no doubt much petted by the good nuns."—Chicago News.

A Hard Burial.

Some few winters ago a gang of carriage washers was engaged washing carriages on one of our northern railways when one of them remarked to his mate, an old soldier who was famous as a long bowist, "It's awful cold this morning, David."

"Cold! This is nothing," said David. "I remember when I was in Canada in 186— one of our mates died, poor chap. And you will have some idea what sort of frost it was when I tell you it froze the body so stiff and the ground so hard that we had to get hammer and chisel, make a nick in the ground and then drive him in with a pile driver. That was the only way we could give the poor chap decent burial."—London Answers.

Using the Eyes.

A scientific writer quotes Helmholtz as saying that in his work he could only liken himself to the mountaineer, painfully and slowly climbing, often obliged to turn backward, lighting later on new traces leading forward, and finally reaching the goal, only to find to his confusion that a plain road led thither, if he had only had the eyes to see. Darwin said he thought he was superior to the common run of men in noticing things which easily escape attention and in observing them carefully.

Cheap Generosity.

A great smoker handed his cigar case to his right hand neighbor. "Thank you, but I don't smoke," said the man.

He therefore handed it to the man on the left, who made the same reply, whereupon his wife nudged him and said, "Why don't you hand it to the captain?"

"No, thank you; he smokes."—Nos Loisirs.

The Mean Thing!

"Who was that fool you bowed to?"

"My husband."

"Oh, I—er—I—humbly apologize. I"—

"Never mind, I'm not angry. But what a keen observer you are!"—Cleveland Leader.

State Board of Education.

The State Board of Education held its quarterly meeting at Annapolis last Wednesday, it being followed by a joint meeting of the board and the county school superintendents. Governor Warfield presided. The meetings were held somewhat in advance of the date originall set, as State Superintendent M. Bates Stephens and a number of the county superintendents attended the National Convention of State Superintendents of Public Schools, which met in Chicago on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week.

The postponement of the meeting of the teachers of High and Normal Schools of the Eastern Shore counties from Feb. 8th and 9th to March 2nd and 3rd was announced.

An important conference was held with Comptroller Gordon T. Atkinson and Chief Clerk Harry J. Hopkins in connection with the manner of deducting the sum of $150,000 from the state school fund to cover the amount paid for free text books. It had been the intention to withdraw this amount from the apportionment to the conty schools which will be paid in June next. This is very much opposed by the board, as the withdrawal of that amount from the county schools at that time will, in its opinion, necessitate the closing of the schools in many of the counties before the regular time. The Comptroller stated that he would be glad to meet the wishes of the School Board if the course was legal, and the matter will be referred to the Attorney General. It is the contention of the School Board that the amount due for free school books should be paid from the amount that accrues from the state school tax between the June apportionment and the first of August, when the fiscal year of the School Board ends.

The next quarterly meeting of the Board will be held at Jamestown, Va., from June 25th to 28th on the occasion of the Maryland State Teachers' Association which meets there this year.

Never Heard of an Edtior Being in Heaven.

He is a small boy's essay on newspapers. He ought to make a good editor when he grows up: "Newspapers are sheets of paper on which stuff to read is printed. The men look over it and see their names in it. I don't know how newspapers came into the world. I don't think God does. The Bible says nothing about editors, and I never heard of one being in heaven. The first editor I heard of was a fellow that wrote up the flood. He has been here ever since. Some editors belong to the church and some try to raise whiskers. All of them cause trouble in their neighborhood. Some times the paper dies and then the people feel glad, but someone starts it up again. Editors never went to school, because editors don't get licked. Our paper is a mighty poor one but we take it so ma can use it on her pantry shelves. Our editor don't amount to much, but pa says he had a poor chance when he was a boy. He goes without underclothes in winter, wears no socks and has a wife to support him. Pa has not paid his subscription in five years and he says he don't intend to."

Letter to Thos. D. France, Chestertown, Md.

Dear Sir: If you could get the exclusive sale of a coal that would give double heat and cost no more, you'd jump at it, wouldn't you?

You'd control the trade for a hundred miles!

Devoe is like that among paints; a short ton is as good as a long one of any kind of paint you can name; a gallon is worth two of many a popular paint.

Suppose you have painted your house about once in three years ever since it was new; you buy the same number of gallons Devoe, have a third of it left, and it wears six years. Count your costs.

$1.75 a gallon for paint; $3.50 a gallon for putting it on; you saved 5 gallons: $26.25 on this job. But you save the whole job of three years hence: about $75. Put 'em together: $100.

Can't reckon so accurately as that; but you see how it goes. Paint isn't alike any more than coal. How much more is coal worth than a slate?

Yours truly
