OVERTAXED.

Hundreds of Chestertown Readers Know What It Means.

The kidneys are overtaxed;

Have too much to do.

They tell about it in many aches and pains—

Backache, sideache, headache,

Early symptoms of kidney ills.

Urinary troubles, diabetes, Bright's disease follow.

S. O. Hipkins, living on Union Avenue, Have de Grace, Md., says:—"I made a statement for publication in 1903, commending Doan's Kidney Pills, and I am glad to confirm it at this time, April 24, 1907. I had been troubled with my kidneys for a year or more. I had severe pains in my back and sides, sometimes a dull ache and then again, sharp shooting pains. In the mornings I was so sore, weak and lame that I could hardly get out of bed and get my clothing on Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I got a box, used them steadily for a couple of weeks, when the complaint had entirely disappeared, and has never returned to this day."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 Cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

MR. BONAPARTE ON PRESS.

Attorney-General Charles J. Bonaparte addressed the Political Economy Club at its last meeting of the year last week in Baltimore. Among other very important truths he uttered, he said:

"There is no doubt of the fact that unpopular governments nearly always try to hamper and restrict the right of petition.

"A free press, however, is a perpetual petition. It is, or it should be, always telling the government what the people wish and hope for and think right; and, as a matter of history, no government in any country, out of sympathy with the people it ruled, has ever permanently tolerated a free press. Sooner or later it has been always forced either to muzzle the press or to change its own principles.

As to Newspaper "Organs."

"It must be noted, however, that the power of the press in this regard arises from the fact that it speaks, or is believed to speak, what everybody is saying at the time. As soon as a paper is recognized as somebody's 'organ,' as expressing the views and wishes and opinions of any particular man or set of men, its healthful influence as a newspaper is gone; it may, indeed, have another kind of influence, for those who control or conduct it may be powerful men, but its editorial utterances are simply their 'open letters.'

"In my judgment, this is a matter of very serious and urgent concern to the American people today. Certain of our newspapers, including some whose influence within my memory—indeed, within but a comparatively few years—was a power, and a power for good in the community, are now firmly and widely believed to be virtually, or even literally, owned by well-known 'interests'—in other words, by wealthy men engaged n far-reaching enterprises.

Editor as a Politician.

"It must be remembered in this connection that an editor is necessarily a politician, or, at all events, he ought to be one. Unless he has definite opinions on all questions of general public interest and is ready to express them, he has no business to be an editor, indeed, he is not an editor, but is only trying to pass himself off as one.

"In fact, an editor is a politician whether he wishes to be or not; if he will not speak on subjects connected with politics, his very silence is a way of dealing with them; he resembles a judge who should dismiss every suit brought before him because he was too indolent or too timid to decide it; the dismissal would be a decision; and, in like manner, a newspaper's refusal to act is itself action, and usually very discreditable action; to fail the friends of good government is to serve its enemies.

"And if the editor wishes or pretends to wish for what we may call 'purity' in politics, he is bound in consistency to show himself a pure politician; if his action or inaction, his speech or his silence be determined by the purpose to advance, not the public good, but his own private interest, then he is 'a part' (and a very disgusting and dangerous part) of the thing to be reformed.

"Reputable newspapers are careful lest what they publish as advertisements be confused with what they publish as news or comment; in some papers I have often seen the word 'Advertisement' prefixed to some item. But it is just as much a fraud on the public to write something yourself which you are, directly or indirectly, paid to write and publish, and then publish this as a spontaneous expression of your true sentiments, as it would be to publish in the like guise what somebody else has written.

Should Tell the Truth.

"It would involve an unreasonable demand on your patience to point out all that I think newspapers could do and ought to do to advance the public good; there is, however, one thing which they must do if they would be, in this field or in any other, an agency for good, and that is to think and tell the truth. An habitual liar is disqualified for any good work; unless a man sees things as they are and would have others thus see them likewise, he can never aid in making them better.

"The first duty of the press is to hold up before the people a faithful mirror; if it display distorted pictures it fatally betrays its trust. No worthy end was ever accomplished through deception, whether of ourselves or others. If we are threatened by overshadowing dangers, to escape them we must first see them, and see them as they are. Americans can say with confidence: 'We will know the truth and the truth shall make us free.'"

Kennedyville Items.

This is the time when our county comes out in her new spring costume. Her fields with their growing crops and her trees in full foliage, with buildings painted in many colors, the passer has a lovely picture before him. The farmer's home is a beautiful picture, with its large shade trees and nicely painted or whitewashed buildings and fences, and plenty of green grass. And yet sometimes you will see a farmer who has none of these, and we think he has lost some pride because he surely could do some whitewashing, and it makes a vast difference in appearance and cleanliness. But it is not always the farmer who does this, the same disease creeps into towns and villages. A little lime and a few hours of work would make a vast difference in the appearance of many places in our town and village. Let us see if we cannot improve along this line.

Our farmers are getting their ground ready for tomatoes. We are having it very seasonable at this time to set out the plants, but they are not large enough but some will soon be at it.

Rev. Mr. Baker, the Presbyterian minister, came to his church here last Sunday morning in a fine automobile. The machine behaved itself and kept quiet, but some of the horses misbehaved right out side of the church and on Sunday too. But they will soon learn better.

Rev. Mr. Fooks had large congregations both morning and night. The Sunday School is doing fine. What it wants is the presence and encouragement of the membership, and this is what he is working for.
