SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1908.

THERE'S a big rumpus in the wigwam of the Republican party. Somebody is attempting to throw a Stone, because the latter threw Mudd at Chicago. Somebody'll get hit yet.

THE Republican national ticket has met with a frost in the middle west. The people of that section do not like either the platform or the nomination of Sherman.

THE Chestertown Waterworks pass into the control of the town on Wednesday next. May it prove a source of great revenue to the town and ample protection to the people's property from fire.

"THE REAL BRYAN" is now published and a copy of it has reached our desk. It is a book in which you will be much interested as it contains the best things spoken or written by William Jennings Bryan on over 150 subjects, political and non-political. Every issue in the coming campaign is discussed, also Mr. Bryan's position on world politics. There is hardly a subject in the book that is not of vital interest to the American people.

Pursenetters at Work.

Henry Brauns, of the Maryland Game and Fish Protective Association, has made charges to Governor Crothers, of extensive violations of the State's fish laws. He says while he was a passenger on the steamer Susquehanna, coming down the bay at about noon on Monday, the 8th day of June, 1908 personally observed the crews of five pursenetting crafts, with accompanying rowboats, etc., busily pursuing their alleged illegal occupation, at about and above Poole's Island, in the open waters of the Chesapeake Bay, and further that it is reliably reported that at or about the same time similar alleged violations of this law were taking place on both the Chester and Patapsco Rivers. Governor Crothers has referred the matter to the Fish Commisioner for the Eastern Shore, with instructions to look into this matter and to stop it.

GETS OUT OF CONFERENCE

Dr. A. W. Lightbourne's Congregation Follows Him.

The outcome of a fight against Rev. Dr. A. W. Lightbourne, pastor of Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church, in Dover, one of the oldest and wealthiest in the Wilmington Conference, as announced on Wednesday is that the large congregation will take over the church property, valued at $30,000, and control it. Rev. Dr. Lightbourne withdrew from the conference in this letter, handed to presiding Elder Morgan:

"As I am informed that another attack upon me is being planned by means of what is known as a preliminary church trial, and believing it to be impossible for me to obtain justice under the conditions of such a church hearing, I hereby withdraw from the ministry and membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church. This to take effect at once."

The presiding elder refused to accept the witndrawal, but Dr. Lightbourne declares it is in effect.

As the congregation controls the church property, it will probably worship independently, with Dr. Lightbourne as pastor.

The charges are alleged irregular ministerial credentials. He was tried on this accusation at the session of the conference in Wilmington last March and acquitted.

In a statement issued on Wednesday, Dr. Lightbourne says his persecutors are "Incapable of telling the truth," and that their statements come from a "prolific lie factory."

CLEVELAND DEAD.

Passes Away Unexpectedly at Home in Princeton.

THE NATION IN MOURNING.

Many Messages of Sympathy and Sorrow.

REGARDED AS PUBLIC CALAMITY.

Mr. Cleveland died at 8.40 A. M. Wednesday morning after a night of suffering, and it was formally announced that heart failure, complicated with pulmonary thrombosis and edema, was the cause of death.

As soon as the news became public there was an instant answer of sorrow and sympathy from all over the country.

President Roosevelt canceled his arrangements to attend the Yale-Harvard boat race; issued a proclamation ordering all public honors to be paid Mr. Cleveland's memory and announced that he would attend the funeral yesterday afternoon.

Telegrams of sympathy were received at the Cleveland home from many prominet men, and official tributes were paid in many places.

In Baltimore the expressions of regret and of admiration for Mr. Cleveland's qualities were prompt and widespread.

Princeton, N. J., June 24.—Grover Cleveland, President of the United States for two terms, succumbed to heart failure Wednesday morning. He had had a long illness, but his condition seemed so favorable last evening that Mrs. Cleveland sent word to relatives that he was in no immediate danger, and made optimistic statements to inquiring friends. The relapse was sudden, and the physicians who were watching him knew that the end was near. The weather was stifling, and the distinguished patient tossed and mumbled a few words from time to time in his distress. After three or four hours of unconsciousness he died at 8.40 A. M.

With the death Wednesday of Hon. Grover Cleveland, twice president of the United States—1885-89 and 1893-97—a great figure has been removed from the American political stage. Mr. Cleveland's career as an active statesman, in close touch with the affairs of party and government, ended practically on March 4, 1897, on his retirement from the Presidency. An occasional letter and an address at rare intervals after that period were the measure of his public activities. In Princeton he found an environment which was congenial both socially and intellectually. He lectured in the university on political and constitutional topics. In the fall and winter he was an ardent sportsman. He lived out of doors in the hunting season and was equally at home in the fields and woods or in the marshes. He was also a fisherman of renown. He has contributed to literature a charming little essay on fishermen and fishing. Mr. Cleveland's out-door recreations were those of the man who to the sound mind joined the sound and vigorous body.

The election of Mr. Cleveland to the Presidency in 1884 marked an epoch in the political history of the United States. For 24 years the Federal government had been controlled by the Republican party. Republicans seemed to assume then that their party alone was capable of administering the government. They were loath to retire from power; and the small majority of the popular vote which Mr. Cleveland received in New York in 1884 might easily have been made the basis for a contest by the party which deprived Tilden, as many men believe, of the office to which he had been fairly elected. But the American people would not have tolerated in 1884 a compromise like that of 1876. The country demanded a change in men, measures and polices. The country desired the South to resume its proper place in the government after a long propaganda of sectional hostility directed at the "rebel brigadier." The nation was outgrowing the animosities of war, the bitter sectional passions and prejudices of civil strife. The time was ripe for the return to power of the party pledged to economy in expenditure, to opposition to the "spoils system" and to time-honored principles of constitutional construction.

In Mr. Cleveland the national Democracy seemed to have in 1884 not only a man whose success in New York politics inspired confidence in his strength with the people, but also a leader of the best type—a man who had been loyal to the traditions and principles of the fathers of Democracy.

Mr. Cleveland will have a place in history as one of the most determined, conscientious, incorruptible men who have served the people in the office of President.

It was during the Cleveland administration that the "new-navy" originated, under the sponsorship of Secretary Whitney, who laid the foundation of the armament which makes this country one of the great naval powers of the world.

The only Democratic President since Buchanan who measured up to the high standard and the lofty ideals of the Democratic Presidents before Buchanan. He was a representative of that sturdy Americanism upon which the greatness of this nation is founded. He never made a reputation for omniscience. He never settled all the problems of his time. But when he spoke he was weighty, forceful, sensible. He will have an honored place among the Chief Magistrates of this nation who have served the American people wisely, patriotically and faithfully.

Mr. Cleveland's uncompromising adherence to his convictions aroused antagonisms among certain elements of the Democracy and alienated from him the support and good will of some of the party leaders. But the same rigid loyalty to principle which offended and repelled some Democrats drew to the President other elements of the Democray, who came to be known, in time, as "Cleveland Democrats." We doubt whether any President has ever had a more loyal following or a following with greater confidence in their leader or more sincere admiration for him as a man and a statesman. Eleven years after his retirement from the Chief Magistracy the "Cleveland Democrat" survives as a type of the virile aggressive Democracy which twice elected Mr. Cleveland to the Presidency. Mr. Cleveland's tenancity of purpose and his unfaltering courage in asserting his convictions are reflected to-day in the devotion of the "Cleveland Democrats" to the political principles with which he was associated. And it may be that the time will come when the spirit of the "Cleveland Democracy" will be a necessary and even a regenerating force in the Democratic party.
