THE SECOND NATIONAL BANK,

Chestertown, Maryland.

NECESSITY FOR A BANKING LAW.

Editorial from the Baltimore Sun Saturday, Feb. 26, 1910.

At the present session of the General Assembly there have been many bills chartering banks and authorizing village savings institutions to engage in the general banking business. The present banking laws of the State are exceedingly lax and crude and do not afford any adequate protection to the people who deposit their money in State Banks. There is no adequate provision for examination, nor for maintaining a reserve, nor for protection of creditors in case of insolvency. All these things are provided by the law of the United States for national banks, and the result has been that these institutions have the public confidence in their solvency, which is the most important asset that a bank can have.

There is pending in the Legislature a bill regulating State banks, which was framed by a commission appointed by the Governor, and which has received the approval of the bankers' association and of the leading savings banks and trust companies. This bill imposes many obligations and restrictions upon the banks and subjects them to stringent regulation and minute inspection. But the bankers are well aware that any law which will establish their banks in the public confidence and will prevent wildcat banking is to their advantage.

The pending bill requires the Governor to appoint a bank commissioner, with provision for necessary help, whose duty it will do to make frequent examinations of all State banks just as the national banks are examined, and in case a bank is found to be insolvent the commissioner is required to take charge of it. The bill follows the National Banking Act in naming a minimum capital stock for banks established in towns of various population, not, however, affecting in this regard any existing bank. The commissioner in making his examinations is empowered to administer oaths, and the cost of the examinations is put upon the banks, varying in amount according to capital stock. Provision is made for the maintenance of a cash reserve for the protection of depositors, and in the case of savings banks of a guaranty fund. Possession of a bank by the commissioner is a bar to attachments; publication of statements is required, and as in the National Banking Act, the amount which can be loaned to a single borrower is limited.

A most salutary feature of the bill is the prohibition of the use of banking signs and stationery, except by those who may legally do so. Upon the whole, the bill seems to be designed for the public protection and for the benefit of the banks. It seems to be a good measure and has commended itself to the business men, who are best qualified to pass judgment on it.

THE SECOND NATIONAL BANK is the Only National Bank in Kent County.

Chestertown's First Newspaper.

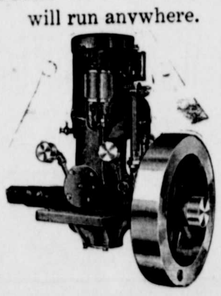

In looking over some of the old books and papers found in the residence on Front street being remodeled by Mr. Wilbur W. Hubbard, and at one time the home of the late Judge Chambers, there were found books of rare interest because of valuable information which they contain relative to the early history of Washington College. These books are in the possession of a friend of the TRANSCRIPT, who has very kindly consented, owing to his deep interest in the college, and his friendship for the paper, to write from time to time interesting extracts from the books, giving important facts concerning the history of the college, a list of the students of 1792, 3 and 4, the names of contributors, the list of books in the library at the time, etc., together with other valuable information.

Among these books there was also found a part of what is evidently Chestertown's first newspaper, which was called "The Chestertown Gazette." The part of the paper in our possession shows the paper to be Volume 1, No. 75, and bears this inscription: "Open to all parties, but influenced by none." The date of the issue is Tuesday, Dec. 3rd, 1793. If any one in the county has any copies of this paper, they can find ready sale for them by bringing them to the TRANSCRIPT office.

Next week we will publish a letter written by Mr. Geo. Dashiell, of Somerset county, Jan. 2, 1792, to Rev. Colin Ferguson, who was at that time president of the college. The text of the letter refers to collections made by one Col. Done for the benefit of the college. We hope the authorities, students and alumni of the college will find profit in reading these interesting articles.
