LEGISLATIVE DOINGS.

This has been an important week at Annapolis. The new Governor was inaugurated, two important laws have been passed and signed by the retiring Governor, and numerous employees in the Senate and House have been appointed, and everybody seems happy.

Governor Goldsborough was inaugurated on Wednesday, and delivered a strong address, outlining his policy of administration. His first appointments were Robert P. Graham, Roland Park, Secretary of State; A. Eugene De Reeves private secretary, and Carl Hardy chief clerk. Mr. Hardy has held this position under every Governor since the late Gov. Lowndes, by whom he was appointed.

The inaugural ceremonies were attended by a large and distinguished gathering, and were elaborate in every detail of its arrangements. The oath of office was administered to Governor Goldsborough by Chief Judge Boyd, of the Court of Appeals, and after the ceremonies, Gov. Goldsborough and family took possession of the Executive Mansion and began his career as the State's chief executive.

Before his retirement from office Governor Crothers signed the new election bill and also the new primary bill. The new election bill takes the place of the Wilson ballot law, and is similar to the Baltimore city law, except that party designations are omitted. The law prescribers the size of the ballot, and states that names of candidates must be arranged in alphabetical order. It applies to 11 counties of the State including Kent. The new primary law provides for:

Presidential primaries early in May. A new registration for Baltimore city and the counties, beginning April 23d.

Primary elections to be held not earlier than Sept. 8 nor later than Sept. 15, by agreement of chairmen of State Central Committees of both parties. No sample ballots to be printed or distributed among voters.

Official envelope system retained. Gives right to mark for first and second choice for State offices. Provides for appeal and recount of ballots.

Only the briber is punished for violating Corrupt Practices Act, one-half fine to go to informer. Penalty a term in penitentiary, and a fine of from $500 to $1000.

These two bills fulfil the pledges of the Democratic party so far as elections are concerned, and have the distinction of being the earliest bills to be introduced and passed in the Legislature.

APPOINTMENTS.

The Senate under the economy scheme fixed upon 63 employes. Senator Beck, as well as every other Senator except the Republicans, got two employes—Mr. Joseph Howard, of Betterton, engrossing clerk, and Mr. Thomas Maslin, of the Seventh District, as doorkeeper.

The committee on rules, of which Delegates James S. Harris was a member, agreed to the employment of 82 employes in the House. This decision of the committee will save the State about $18,000 of expense. Mr. Harris selected Mr. William Wheeler, of Betterton, as one of the cloak room keepers, and Delegates Charles L. Miller secured Mr. Jas. M. Durding, of Rock Hall, as one of the engrossing clerks.

Rev. J. E. Maloy, one of the oldest and most highly esteemed ministers of the Maryland Conference, M. P. Church, was made chaplain of the Senate for the first month.

PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

AN OYSTERMAN'S VIEW OT THE OYSTER QUESTION.

ROCK HALL, MD., Jan. 1st, 1912.

To the Editors: I noticed the amended oyster law as published in the TRANSCRIPT last week is a dead blow to the oyster interests. I have watched the oyster interests for the past nineteen years and have made it a close study. I have found that planting does not pay in these waters. Have seen them planted on some of the best ground. G. E. Leary & Son planted in Grey's Inn Creek, spent between one and two thousand dollars and did not get $500 from it. He offered the ground to me three years ago free of charge. Thos. Hyland had a planting ground in Hell Creek on which there was over $2,800 spent and never $700 reaped. Charlie Watkins had one in Church Creek on which a heap of money and labor was spent and never nothing reaped. This was under the five-acre system. The oysters were planted and died. You can go along the shore in August and September and see young oysters on every sprig of grass, stick, board, stone or anything in the water, or on the bottom. But nothing but the natural bar will produce them in the spring, so by this you can see that the men who are agitating the law as I see it in the TRANSCRIPT are not after the barren bottom, but after the natural bar, and when you take the seed oysters off of them you can not expect to have a market oyster when the season is open for them, for this has been a great pull back to the oyster business in Maryland. They have been sent to every State in the spring of the year, and then they have them in the fall plump with fresh water, and we do not have the demand that should be, and I am, therefore, opposed to any leasing law, for it does not make the oyster industry better, but worse. If you will notice, you will find that the men who had the five acres have not asked for ten and do not ask for thirty, but have dropped the five, and say we do not want any barren bottom. Now, this is not only in Kent, but if you will look at the taxes, it has come down instead of growing. Now we find the taking of these seeds to dredge them. We had it last spring when four boats of the Webster fleet loaded on the upper Swan Point and carried them to another county. The people of Kent have never seen nor ever will see any benefit from them. We had last spring between twenty-five and thirty thousand bushels of oysters carried out of Chester river for planting purposes. They went to Rhode Island, New York, Virginia and some on the Delaware, but all for this fall's market, for they all agreed with me that it did not pay to grow oysters, and these were laid in shallow water. And to dredge on their own grounds, there could not be protection enough at a $20 license on every tonger to protect the natural bars. Now, the man who agitated what I see in the TRANSCRIPT, was surely not for the benefit of the osterman but against them. Now, I am with the man who has been talking to the Baltimore Sun, for we do not want any improvements in the oyster law nor any change from the present law, for I always was taught to leave well enough alone. The merchants in this section of the city can tell you just as I do.

Yours truly,
H. H. DIERKER.
