ARE PEACHES HURT?

County Commissioner T. Benj. Crew Gives Opinion After Examination of His Large Orchards.

We have stated during the past two weeks the opinion of several of our largest fruit growers, among them Hon. James S. Harris, in regard to the condition of the fruit since the cold snap. County Commissioner T. Benjamin Crew, one of the most successful peach growers in the county, has made a careful examination of his buds since the freeze. He was in our office on Tuesday and gave the following information:

"It is safe to say that two-thirds of the yellow peaches are killed and that at least one-third of the white fruit is badly hurt. Such yellow varieties as Elbertos, Foster and Crawford's late, while badly hurt, are so full of buds that they can stand a two-thirds loss and still produce a good crop. Reeves' Favorite and other shy bearers are almost totally killed. The early varieties, such as Carmen, Early Rivers, etc., are not hurt to any appreciable degree. After a careful examination of my orchards, it is my opinion that if all the good buds now living come to maturity, I shall have a fair crop of peaches."

Mr. Benjamin F. Rash, another of our largest and most successful growers, believes that there are enough live buds on the trees to make a fine crop if they all mature. He expects to get 5,000 baskets from his orchard near Worton Station next summer.

Fruit growers in Queen Annes county assert that while in many sections of the Eastern Shore the impression seems to be prevalent that the recent cold weather has affected the fruit crop, in Queen Annes the result is just the reverse.
