hath been ~~[illegible]~~ excited, and an address is prepared which will have many subscribers, or will be in the underwood passed. This House will provide the Mania East of Potomac, whether it may be expired or certain. Against interposition of the public voice was overruled, this seems to be a case which calls for it: a disagreement between two of the Branches of the Government as to the powers conferred to each, in which case there appears to be no other Tribunal than the people. The calculation now is that there is a majority of 12 in the House of Representatives against appropriation. This on the supposition of their being too attending Members. At this time they are probably disposed to go any length in support of the opinion which they are engaged to maintain. Believing that their proceedings will not be countenanced by the people it large. It is expected that before the Session closes the necessary Laws for executing the Treaty will pass. It is certainly an Effort to the part of the Bank of Eng: to obtain a controlling power with the Law of Nations confided to them by the Constitution, which the Executive Government and the other branch of the Legislature will be bound to resist by every means that circumstances may present. The Situation is important but I trust that the event to be produced by the good sense of the people, will give stability to the Government and a deadly blow to the present opposition. The Question is now, if the Case of the British Treaty is seized as a favorable occasion for agitating a Claim for the first time ever thought of or heard of. The City Bill is undecided as, no Report from the Committee, the Report when made will be in
