Suffrage Meeting.

A woman's suffrage meeting was held on Monday night at the court house. Quite a large audience was present. Dr. Barrett opened the meeting in his usual happy way. He spoke of the energy and determination of women and how often they accomplished what man said could not be done. He said that many of them were property owners and that taxing their property was surely "Taxation without Representation."

Miss O'Riley, of New York, followed Dr. Barrett. She began by saying she belonged to the third generation of wage earners,—that her grandmother made shirts in Ireland and that her mother and she made them in New York. She told of the multitude of women and children working in the factories wearing away their vitality and health for scanty wages while the few profiting by their labor become multi-millionaries and enjoy ease and luxury at the expense of the wage earner.

She made an eloquent appeal for woman's suffrage so that they may make laws to ameliorate the condition of the woman and children workers.

The next speaker was Mrs. Melvin, of Denton, Md. Before beginning her address she awarded the prizes for the best essay on woman's suffrage. Mr. Lester Baldwin was the winner of the prize given to the students of Washington College. Miss Ruth Clendaniel received the first prize given to the high school and the second prize was given to Miss Blanche Scotten, of Kennedyville.

Mrs. Melvin urged all her hearers to do all in their power to bring about woman suffrage promising better legislation and more prosperous conditions.

After Mrs. Melvin's address Dr. Barrett closed the meeting with prayer.
