DRIVE HIM FROM STATE.

Prohibition Candidate for President of the United States Handles "Bill" Anderson Without Gloves. Calls Him a Notoriety Seeker.

Several hundred men and women, including a large number of preachers, heard Eugene W. Chafin, Prohibition candidate for President, denounce Supt. William H. Anderson and the Anti-saloon League in an address at Lehman's Hall, Baltimore, Saturday night. Mr. Chafin is regarded as one of the brilliant orators of the nation, and he aroused his audience to great enthusiasm a number of times.

That William H. Anderson was a notoriety seeker and in league with the managers of both the Democratic and Republican parties were some of the charges hurled by the temperance speaker against the Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League. Mr. Chafin was applauded when he declared that he "would shortly proceed to drive Anderson out of the State."

"The Anti-Saloon League of Maryland is merely an organization whose business it is to mulct money from church going people," said Mr. Chafin. "Similiar organizations have existed in other parts of the United States. They disbanded when I got after them, and I drove their superintendents to work. Instead of living off the fat of land, they had to leave the places in which they were operating and get a job somewhere else."

Mr. Chafin mentioned among others J. Frank Burke, of Oregon, and Dr. J. Chapman, of California.

"The Anti-Saloon League of Maryland is a big graft," continued the speaker. "Similiar branches prevail in but three or four states. I will give Bill Andersen $1,000 in cash if he will offer and attempt to disprove one of my assertions delivered here tonight or elsewhere. I hate to say much about Anderson and his work, for he is nearly dead now, and really I don't like to talk about the dead."

Mr. Chafin created considerable amusement when he said that if Bill Anderson were to challenge him to a debate, as he has to others, he would "take his hide and hang it up on the first barn he came to."

"It is the first duty of every decent citizen to kill off Anderson. He is engaged in challenging everybody to debate with him, except the members of the Prohibition party. He has proven the greatest friend of liquor the traffic has ever had. His business is in trying to make good Democrats and Republicans hypocrits and traitors by getting them to promise that they will vote for local option."

Continuing, Mr. Chafin asserted that "the principle of local option was wrong in theory and operation, vicious in principle, a failure as a remedy and a hinderance to the tenets of prohibition."

"Tell me," asked Mr. Chafin, his voice raised, "what has this fellow Anderson done since he has been here? For six years he has collected money and drawn salary. His theory is, 'Give me what I want, or part of it, and if I can't get that, give me anything.' I would rather court a girl I loved and lose her than court a girl I didn't love and have to live with her forever."

This sally by Mr. Chafin brought forth prolonged laughter and applause.

Mr. Chafin said that the doctrine of local option, as advance by the Anti-Saloon advocates, was the most infamous act ever conceived. He said that before the existence of the league Maryland had a number of dry counties.

"When Anderson wants money he shows you a white map, giving the names of counties that the Prohibitionists made dry," went on the speaker. "He has done nothing at all to stamp out this liquor traffic and should be squelched."

NEED NOT MARK FOR ELECTORS.

The following instruction has been sent out by the Supervisors of Election:

The judges are notified that a X in the box opposite the names of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates—Woodrow Wilson and Thomas R. Marshall—carries with it all of the electors, so that only one cross-mark is necessary to vote for President. In other words, according to this instruction you will have to make only three X on the ballot in order to vote the Democratic ticket.

Eggs and Parcels Post.

Newspapers throughout the country are printing tables showing the cost of shipping butter and eggs by mail and are calling attention to the fact that this is a common practice in countries which have a parcels post.

Here is a table which shows parcels post rates, in effect here and elsewhere, beginning January 1:

	First pound.	Each additional pound.	Eleven pounds.
Rural route & city delivery	$0.05	$0.01	$0.15
50-mile zone	.05	.03	.35
150-mile zone	.06	.04	.46
300-mile zone	.07	.05	.57
600-mile zone	.08	.06	.68
1000-mile zone	.09	.07	.79
1400-mile zone	.10	.09	1.00
1800-mile zone	.11	.10	1.11
Over 1800 miles	.12	.12	1.32

A dozen eggs weigh about a pound. Where there is rural delivery the farmer can ship directly to the city consumer in packages provided at small cost for this service. The postage on a dozen eggs will be five cents and one cent additional for each additional dozen up to eleven pounds, the total cost of which will be 15 cents. If the farmer is not on a rural delivery route, he may still ship to the city by sending them to the nearest postoffice. The rate within the fifty-mile zone will be five cents for the first pound and three cents for each additional pound up to the limit. There is a slight increase in cost with the increase in distance.

PRESIDEN... BILITIES.

In the Event of the Failure of Any One Candidate to Secure a Majority

HOUSE WOULD ELECT.

It it Failed to do so the Vice-President Would Become the President.

There has been much discussion among politicians and the public generally in the entire United State as to what should happen if any one of the three presidential candidates should fail to receive a majority of votes in the Electoral College. In this year's presidential election there will be 532 electoral votes and 266 will be necessary for a choice. Should one of the three leading candidates fail to get 266 electoral votes the House of Representatives will select the President by ballot, the representation from each State having one electoral vote.

It can be seen from this that the selection by the House of Representatives would then depend upon the political complexion of the representation from each individual State.

In the States where the Democrats have a majority representation the vote for President would be Democratic and vice versa. The election by the House, for this reason, would not depend upon the party having the total majority in the House, but upon the greatest number of States each of which are of the same political complexion. A quorum in the House to elect a President must consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the States and a majority of all the States is necessary to a choice.

Should the House of Representatives ever deem it advisable to have a Vice-President to become President in the event of failure on the part of any one of the presidential candidates to secure a majority, they could do so, according to the provision, which is that if they fail to choose a President in such a case before the 4th day of March next following, then the Vice-President shall act as President. By failing to make a selection they can aliow the presidential robes to fall upon the shoulders of the Vice-President.

In case one of the candidates for Vice-President fails to secure a majority the Vice-President is chosen by the Senate. A quorum for this purpose consists of two-thirds of the whole number of Senators (there being an equal number of Senators from each State) and a majority of the whole number is necessary to a choice.

Article 12 of the Constitution of the United States adopted in 1804 reads as follows:

"The electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by ballot for President and Vice-President, one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as President, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as Vice-President, and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as President and of all persons voted for as Vice-Presient, and of the number of votes for each, which lists they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the seat of the government of the United States, directed to the president of the Senate; —The president of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates and the votes shall then be counted:—The person having the greatest number of votes for President shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have such a majority, then from the persons having the highest numbers not exceeding three on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President. But in choosing the President, the votes shall be taken by States, the representation from each State having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the States and a majority of all the States shall be necessary to a choice. And if the House of Representatives shall not choose a President whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them, before the fourth day of March, next following, then the Vice-President shall act as President, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the President. The person having the greatest number of votes as Vice-President shall be the Vice-President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed, and if no person have a majority then from the two highest numbers on the list, the Senate shall choose the Vice-President; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of Senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice. But no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of President shall be eligible to that of Vice-President of the United States."
