Jim crow widespread

The Maryland Commission on Interracial Problems and Relations in its annual report has recommended passage of public accommodations laws for Baltimore City and the State.

Both the City Council and the General Assembly have such measures pending.

A study of the Commission's annual report points up the need for legislation outlawing discrimination in places of public accommodation.

* * *

WHILE SLIGHT progress was noted in accommodations provided colored persons in hotels, restaurants and theatres, the Commission found that discriminatory practices were still widespread.

The Commission feels, and we agree, that to permit these discriminatory practices based on race or creed seriously handicaps the offended group as well as the citizenry in general.

In a reference to the announced policy of partial integration by the Hotel Association of Baltimore City last summer, the Commission has this to say:

"The effects of this policy change are not yet uniform and present an even greater dilemma when queries for information regarding the policies of Baltimore's hotels are received."

* * *

ONLY A few local restaurants and theatres have opened their doors to all well-behaved citizens, the Commission reports. A few other eating places in the area near Washington have initiated a policy of serving customers on a non-discriminatory basis.

The Commission reports that some business operators were willing to drop the color bar if backed by law.

It appears that if discrimination in public places in Maryland is to be eliminated a good way to go about it would be by enacting public accommodation statutes making the practice illegal once and for all.

Citizens of Baltimore and throughout the State who are interested in progress along these lines should push the anti-discrimination measures pending in the City Council and the General Assembly.

Temporary reprieve

Governor McKeldin has granted a stay of execution to a death-row inmate scheduled to be Maryland's No. 2 gas chamber victim, pending the outcome of investigations and medical studies ordered by the chief executive.

The reprieve came three days before the 48-year-old inmate was slated to die for a 1956 shotgun slaying.

The Governor did not indicate whether he would commute the death sentence, although the inmate's attorney has made representations for executive clemency.

* * *

ONLY FOUR persons have been executed during the McKeldin administration. The Governor has intervened in 13 scheduled executions.

Such action is in line with the growing trend away from capital punishment.

Six states have abolished this barbaric practice which has not proved its worth as a crime deterrent. These states are Maine, Michigan Minnesota, North Dakota, Rhode Island and Wisconsin.

The Maryland Assembly has had before it four anti-capital punishment measures. On each occasion the proposals have failed to get out of committee.

* * *

IN GRANTING executive clemency to Alvin (Butch) Braxton, 18-year-old youth convicted of slaying a policeman, Governor McKeldin suggested the creation of a committee of qualified citizens to study capital punishment cases and make recommendations as to the final disposition.

Although this is a forward step, Maryland could make greater strides by joining the six states which have banned capital punishment.

For the inmate who was slated to be Maryland's No. 2 victim, the Governor's action this week was only a temporary reprieve.

Fleetway hearing

The Public Service Commission, Wednesday, reserved its decision after hearing arguments, pro and con, on the dissolution of the Fleetway Cab Company.

Co-owners of the firm have petitioned the Commission to allow them to dissolve and divide the 114 cabs now in the company.

Some colored Fleetway drivers have voiced opposition to the dissolution because they fear the loss of their jobs.

On this point the Public Service Commission ruled that the hiring policies of cab firms are outside its jurisdiction.

* * *

OPPOSITION ALSO came from Local 426 of the Taxicab Drivers and Garage Employees union.

It was Local 426 that requested a public hearing on the Fleetway matter in a petition to intervene in opposition to the company breakup.

The Commission held that it had no jurisdiction over labor questions raised by the union.

* * *

THE TWO Fleetway partners who plan to transfer their taxi interests to other companies have stated they would make every attempt to retain as many of their employees as possible.

However, some taxi firms here have a policy against employing colored drivers.

If the Fleetway dissolution petition is granted, and if some of the drivers are not retained because of color, the matter should be referred to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

THE AFRO'S CREDO

A newspaper succeeds because its management believes in itself, in God and in the present generation. It must always ask itself—

Whether it has kept the faith with the common people.

Whether it has served that which seems good, except to see that their liberties are preserved and their future assured.

Whether it is fighting to get rid of slums, to provide jobs for everybody.

Whether it stays out of politics except to expose corruption and condemn injustice, race prejudice or vulgarity.

Notes on recession

Dear AFRO:

A press service dispatch indicated this week that some segments of the business world will be certain to oppose the proposal of the President to enlarge the system of unemployment benefits to the jobless.

It is interesting to note that the head of the National Association of Manufacturers referred to the proposal last week as a dole and expressed his opposition to it. There is nothing of course unusual about statements of these kinds coming from such quarters.

Nor is the fact that nothing better was' offered any more novel. Granted, however, that something could be said for poverty, suffering, disease and death, is it in the public interest to have five million people unemployed and without relief of any kind in the richest country on earth?

Does it help the western orbit to plead the obsession that poverty and suffering are good for some people. Assuming that it is bad for the Russian peasant, could not the same be true of the American laborer?

It appears to me that if we stoop to personal gain and lust our overall position in the family of nations will be weakened and our fight to establish the western way of life will become useless because with faith and hope in the system gone there will be little left to fight for.

As I see it the President believes that our economy is sound and that the current recession will lift before we face the drama of another depression.

It is a fact that more people have been employed in the last few years than ever before in this history of our industrial society. And, I can see no good reason why the system should become spotty with poverty in the midst of plenty.

Of course, one could be looking at the situation through rose colored spectacles. And if he is he is certainly entitled to an explanation.

Pathetic situation

Dear AFRO:

We are a colored family living in a white neighborhood. During the snow blizzard, a white merchant of our community brought to our attention a pathetic situation concerning an elderly colored lady and a 17-year-old mentally retarded girl.

They were found on an isolated farm, without means of food or fuel. The people of the community joined together and provided her with fuel and other supplies. Yet there seems to be some mystery as to why she is there.

No one seems to know just who brought her there, who she really is, or why she is in this isolated spot.

No one knew that this huge house was being occupied until an anonymous letter came to the post mistress here. Being the colored family here, we visited this place.

You probably have never seen any human being quite as pathetic. Even though colored people offered help and assistance, she insisted that she had full and plenty and needed no help, leading us to believe that she may need medical care.

She insisted that her supervisor, who is a white woman living in Washington, D.C., is taking care of her. Yet we found conditions deplorable there. We think that there may be more here than meets the eye, which is more than enough.

She claims that she receives a disability pension, but none has arrived at the post office here where she says she is supposed to get it. Since we have contributed financial help and other, we wonder what is happening to her disability pension that she says she never receives. We like, the other people here, feel that perhaps someone might investigate the matter.

Mrs. GEORGE O. BOWINS

Taxi situation

Dear AFRO:

The Fleetway Cab Company which employs over a hundred colored drivers is going out of business. A large number of their taxis are being taken over by the Diamond Cab Company. Diamond has no colored drivers.

The white chauffeurs who drive for Fleetway will be welcomed at Diamond and will be in business as usual. But what will happen to the colored drivers?

Well, I'll tell you. They will be down on Hopkins Pl. in that long and ever-growing line of the unemployed.

The sad part about it is that colored people of Baltimore put them in that line. We put them in that line by riding in any cab that came along, instead of waiting and giving our business to a company that will employ us.

That does not mean waiting for a colored driver to come by but it does mean giving business to those firms that will give us a chance to make a living.

Acid and sugar

Dear AFRO:

As Public Relations Director for the Company that manufactures the famous line of Jeep vehicles I wish to take this opportunity to tell you how very much I enjoyed reading B. M. Phillips' column about her Jeep.

I thought the article had just the right flavor, the right amount of acid and sugar. The transposition from disgust at first, to sheer delight when she found the Jeep could get her places in February that other vehicles could not, was very well handled indeed.

Copies of the column are being well distributed here.

A kind reader, and there are such things, sent in a letter this week which contained a few golden nuggets of wisdom.

Actually the words are shaped in the form of a psalm, so with assurances that no disrespect is intended, here goes.

II, ardly enough, is entitled, the 1957 Psalm;

Ike is my shepherd; I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down on park Benches

He leadeth me beside still factories.

He restoreth my doubts in the Republican Party.

He guideth me in the path of unemployment

For his Party's sake.

Yeah, though I walk through the valley of the

Soup Kitchen, I am hungry

I do fear evil for thou art against me.

Thou anointest my income with taxes

And my expenses overrunneth my salary.

Surely poverty and hard living shall follow me

All the days of the Republican Administration

And I shall live in a rented house forever.

SEVERAL columns back I said some very unkind things about the Navy and its energetic but very unsuccessful attempts to get a satellite up off the ground.

Well now the Navy has gone and done it and I humbly take back my few words and extend apologies.

I should have known that the Navy would never give up the ship (that should be satellite, but somehow it doesn't sound quite right) and admit defeat.

OF COURSE it wasn't a very big satellite, but it's the principle of the thing so let's not be petty.

After so many flops even getting the thing five feet in the air was a major triumph—now if they just don't lose it.

The fact is that with all the satellites floating around in space, it soon will be a little crowded up there.

When it gets too crowded there's a certain traffic expert whom a number of persons would recommend as the person to get the equation ironed out.

Actually, some have already suggested that he take a trip to the moon.

SOME DAYS it don't pay at all and Wednesday was one of those days, or nights, to be more exact.

On my way home during the snow storm I was trying to get up a hill on Gwynns Falls Parkway and in trying to pass him, naturally I got stuck.

Therefore, I had to get out and walk, and it seems like every snow storm I end up walking.

There I was slipping and sliding with all the wet snow dripping down my neck, my feet wet, my hands frozen, and who passes me but the man who caused me to get stuck in the first place.

There I was slipping and sliding with all the wet snow dripping down my neck, my feet wet, my hands frozen, and who passes me but the man who caused me to get stuck in the first place.

Think you have troubles?—Mrs. Lester Duvall, city teacher, has been out of school for the past two weeks.

Her mother, Mrs. Beatrice Pyles, has been very ill, but is coming along nicely now.

Before her mother became ill, her dad, John Pyles, was abed.

And, for the past two years, her husband, Joseph Duvall, has been in and out of the hospital and confined to bed with a spinal injury.

Remember he's the government employee who was seriously injured in that Pennsy train wreck?

So, if you think you have troubles, read about Lester and drop her and her family a note of cheer at 2341 W. Lexington St.

Henry C. Johnson, head of the department of trades at Carver High, was in Hopkins Hospital for a week with pneumonia. He was released last Friday and is doing nicely now.

Your cards will reach him at his home, 1918 W. North Ave., where he will be confined for a while longer.

Patient at Hopkins Hospital for the past two weeks was Mrs. Yolanda Clermont of Port-au-Prince, Haiti.

She was discharged on Saturday.

After a brief stay at the Lord Baltimore, she moved on to N.Y.'s Hotel Victoria and left for home on Wednesday.

With her was her husband, Maurice Clermont, French-Lat. and Greek teacher at the Simon Boulevard School in Port-au-Prince.

Out of Hopkins after a three-week stay: Walter Eaton, the insurance agent, now confined to his home, 1430 N. Fulton Ave.

And, John H. Murphy Jr., is convalescing at his home, 1725 N. Carey St.

But still in Hopkins (Brady Room 426) is Mrs. Carl Murphy, (Vashti), wife of the AFRO president, who has been there a month with an infected foot.

Word from East Elmhurst, N.Y., tells of the illness of another Vashti — Vashti Maxwell Grayson.

Mrs. Elise Hunt, wife of Dr. Raymond Hunt, is home from Provident recuperating from a heart attack. Send her hellos at 2303 Roslyn Ave.

About this and that...

Mrs. William Burghardt (Vivian), wife of the Morgan College health and physical education department head, is visiting relatives in Baton Rouge, La.

Visitor in our midst: Mrs. Morsell (Thelma) Hodges of Culver, Ind., came East for Morgan Women's Week activities to be with her daughter, Thelma, who is student there.

She was among guests at the DuBois Circle meeting with her sister - in - law, Mrs. Ethel Hodges.

* * *

Among out - of - town-relatives here for the Wednesday morning funeral of Mrs. Pauline Wharton, beloved teacher and musician were: Miss Maria Wharton, a cousin of Boston; and Mrs. Frank Eggleston Jr., Atlantic City, wife of another cousin.

Mr. Eggleston Jr., a retired policeman, is confined with a heart attack, and was unable to come. Remember when his father, the Rev. Frank Eggleston Sr., was pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church here?

And, from Accomac County, Va., Mrs. Wharton's brother-in-law, Howard Wharton and his son, Edgar; and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Susie Wharton Thomas.

* * *

Other out of towners here for the rites: Mr. and Mrs. Joe (Louise) Hill (he's Lincoln University, Pa. dean of men) and David Peale, the Philly pharmacist.

Mr. Hill and Mr. Peale long-time family friends, are among the pallbearers.

Loveliest moments at the funeral: When Ralph Reckling Sr., husband of Mrs. Wharton's only sister, reached over and patted her comfortingly when her shoulders sagged during singing of a favorite hymn.

And the singing of "The Lord's Prayer" by Clarence Henderson, now a teacher, once a pupil of Mrs. Wharton.

His baritone voice resounded through the small church and mourners nodded their heads in approval when he finished.

Had Mrs. Wharton been there, she too would have nodded her head. It was truly beautiful!

* * *

The death on Sunday of Mrs. Wharton — many people lovingly called her 'Miss Pauline' —was a shock because it was unexpected. It was thought she was suffering only a bad cold. When she became weaker it was found it was pneumonia.

But, guests at the Urban League dinner last Sunday recalled that she looked well and at the Tuesday evening Philippa Schuyler concert, she was in good spirits.

She was well enough to attend church on Wednesday, just four days before her death.

In line with her expressed wishes, Mrs. Wharton's body was on view at the Pressman St. home of her daughter, Mrs. Houston R. Jackson.

* * *

And, she was what might be described as a beautiful corpse. Her lovely grey hair was perfectly coiffured. She wore a pink shroud with appropriate jewelry.

Needless to say — there were dozens of beautiful floral pieces.

A music teacher in the Baltimore schools for 29 years—25 of them at Dunbar High—Mrs. Wharton will be remembered by hundreds of pupils as the pretty, kind teacher who inspired them.

Perhaps the secret of her success and popularity as a teacher, can best be summed up in her own philosophy as expressed in an AFRO interview in 1944. At that time, she said:

"I have never disliked a child. I have always seen in each pupil some worthwhile characteristic and tried to assure him or her that I was his friend and loved him . . . and I did."

* * *

Note in the mail reminds me to mention the sudden death last month in Petersburg, Va., of James A. Jackson, well-known funeral director there, who was planning to seek a seat in the City Council.

He suffered a heart attack. His wife, the former Florence Harmon, a sister, Mrs. Wilfred Walker of Greenville, S.C., and a brother, Lawrence H. Jackson of Washington, survive.

And word comes from Chicago that Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Young (Rebecca Murphy) are grandparents again.

Their daughter, Gracie and hubby James Charles Bruce welcomed a boy on March 17. He has been named James Charles Bruce 2nd.

Father is a former instructor at S.C. State College, and is working on his doctorate at the University of Chicago.

Another recent grandma: Mafa Redden Young, the Douglass teacher. She and her hubby, J. Clarence Young (he's the Alexandria and Washington lawyer) are proud that their daughter, Letitia, gave birth to Gregory Brooks Woodson last October 22.

The lucky father is William B. Woodson, the West Point grad, now doing graduate work at Boston University.

Somewhere in Baltimore there walks a blood racing fan who has learned late in life that discrimination can work both ways.

A tan cab driver drove that point home to the sportsman recently after he hailed a cab at Preston and Greenmount.

When the cabbie insisted on taking a brown-skinned female passenger to her destination on Eden and Central instead, the rail bird screamed with pain.

He yelled so loud that a policeman heard the commotion and ended up filing charges against the cabbie.

* * *

FOR THROWING discrimination into reverse the hackie was fined $20 and costs Tuesday in Central Police Court.

He was fined ten dollars for failing to pick up the passenger, and ten more because he failed to identify himself.

His defense was: "I didn't see the man get into the back seat."

In an effort to beat the rap the hackie also commented:

"I was so excited about what happened I had to calm myself with three cups of coffee and forgot to put the trip on my manifest."

He claimed the aggravated customer threatened to "hit me in the mouth."

FOR NINE hours and 50 minutes recently the police brass listened to the beef of a Northeastern District patrolman who insists that a superior officer has it in for him.

When the whole thing was over State Senator Harry A. Cole and Assistant Attorney General Clayton Dietrich were in agreement on this one point:

"There was much ado about nothing."

I doubt if the court martial of Billy Mitchell lasted as long when he got into that hassle with the Army over air power.

The folks who sat in on the hearing in the Commissioner's office never once thought about taking time out for lunch.

The Fire Department's arson squad thought that something was brewing this week after a house on E. Preston St., was damaged by a fire of undetermined origin.

They thought a disgruntled husband had something to do with the monkey business.

Along the way

By STEVE DUNCAN

Although the successful launching into orbit of the Navy's Vanguard I—described as a small test device — overshadows this tidbit of military intelligence, it appears that the Army — Explorer I, notwithstanding — is having trouble with egg headism.

Down in Fort Belvoir, Va., 60 intellectual GIs staged a protest against menial military routines (cleaning latrines, policing the area, pulling KP, etc).

These 60 GIEGs (for government issue egg heads) successfully boycotted the mess hall until their money ran out to spotlight their contempt for the rank misuse of their collective talents.

* * *

ATTACHED TO the Engineer Research Laboratory at Fort Belvoir, these GIEGs are all ivy tower boys. The group is made up of mathematicians, chemists, physicists, and statisticians.

Being a former GI myself (minus the EG, of course), I can well appreciate their loud protests against some of the things soldier boys are required to do. (Prior to my tour of duty I was under the mistaken impression that a soldier's job was to annihilate the enemy.)

I learned early in basic training that an Army travels on its stomach, picking up cigarette butts and everything else not nailed to the ground. This routine is known as policing.

* * *

I PITY those 60 GIEGs, however. Their protest was a brave but foolhardy gesture.

The brass still has the upper hand in the Army. And the sentiment of the brass toward the 60 GIEGs was summed up by a regimental commander who said:

"Some of these men think it's beneath their (blankity blank) intellectual status to peel potatoes."

My advice to the 60 GIEGs would go something like this:

Serve your time, earn the good conduct ribbon and get out with as few scars as possible.

Reporters' Report

Prayers of the week...

For those who are worried about money: Heavenly father, give Thy comfort to all those who are in need and who are concerned for providing the means of life, that they may have such a trust in the care of Thy providence that they may serve Thee with an undoubted mind. Amen.

* * *

For those who have no work: O God, I pray for all who have no regular work. Give them grace to hope again, and put into the hearts of employers the will and the ability to provide honest and decent work, that the bitterness of idleness may be taken away forever.—Amen.

* * *

Before facing an unpleasant situation: O Lord, I beg Thee to take away my dread of what I have to do; give me, I pray Thee, grace to think and act in perfect charity, without regard to my own painful feelings, but only considering what is Thy will. — Amen.
