Mother acquitted in gun slaying

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (NNPA)—A 26-year-old mother of three children, who last November shot and killed her philandering husband, was acquitted in Circuit Court Tuesday of a charge of second-degree murder. Judge Harry A. Hall presided.

The defendant, Mrs. Janice Louise Gray (the name she had used for the past 13 years) was freed by a jury of eight men and four women, which deliberated more than three hours.

Mrs. Gray was accused of killing Willie Benjamin Gray, 27, operator of a garage.

Earlier, the soft-spoken, attractively dressed defendant had told the jury that she went through what she believed to be a marriage ceremony (against her parents' wishes) with the slain man when she was a 13-year-old

REMOVE WASTE NOT GOOD FOOD
FEEN-A-MINT is different because you chew it. It's different, too, because it removes mostly waste—not good food!
FEEN-A-MINT does not work in the stomach, where food is being digested. That's why it does not make away a lot of the good food you need for energy.
Doctors know that FEEN-A-MINT works chiefly in the lower bowel...removes mostly waste, not good food! And it's pure-tasting, too.
Try to feel like a million—chew delicious FEEN-A-MINT. 16 tablets, 35c, also small and economy sizes.

ivy. The child was wounded but later recovered. The victim had moved to New Jersey following estrangement from her husband.

Hunt was doomed to the electric chair and remained on death row for more than a year before the State Supreme Court granted him a new trial last Jan. 29.

The high court granted the retrial after ruling that the lower court erred on several points during the 14-day murder trial.

After shooting his Maryland - born wife, Hunt went back to Baltimore and later fled to Chattanooga, Tenn., the home of his parents. A month later he was arrested by while working in an automobile assembly plant under an assumed name.

The new Mrs. Hunt, a former Virginia Union University student, admitted at the 1957 trial that Hunt was the father of her two children.

Walters unveils plans for a new building

Preliminary plans and elevations for a new building to enlarge the Walters Art Gallery's existing facilities have been released by the gallery's trustees.

If authorized, the Gallery will occupy the square bounded by Mount Vernon Place on the north, Centre St. on the south, Charles St. on the east and Cathedral St. on the west.

The original gallery building and the city - owned Jencks house will be retained.

The new structure would be a line-stone building which would triple the size of the present gallery.

Following the release of the plans, Mayor D'Alesandro said he was in favor of putting the nine million dollars loan fund request for the new gallery on the November ballot.

THE NEW building will include nearly 70,000 square feet of exhibition space to allow display of the collection's finest objects; a ground - level auditorium, seating 500 persons; four class rooms where student activities can proceed simultaneously.

Also a special exhibition area for shows directly connected with school work; a reading room and stacks for 60,000 reference books to be used by both scholars and the public; adequate offices for the staff; space for mobile television units to present live telecasts from the Gallery and shipping room for the loading and unloading of exhibition material.

Dr. Theodore Low, the gallery's director of education, pointed out that under present conditions, the gallery's staff gives specific instruction to approximately 12,000 to 14,000 school children annually.

In addition, nearly the same number of school children are accommodated on gallery visits which do not include formal correlation with their studies.

With the new facilities, these figures would approach an ultimate goal of between 125,000 and 150,000 school children instructed annually.

The class rooms, Dr. Low said, will permit the standard and valuable museum practice of presenting background material through films and slides before showing the children the original objects in the collection.

Youthful dad must pay for the next 17½ years

The well-dressed youth had just heard his sentence on a bastardy charge brought by a former girlfriend.

Now married with a family of his own, youthful - looking Mr. Dangerfield said he was mentally figuring how much he would have to pay over the next 17½ years.

After he pleaded guilty, Judge James K. Cullen suspended a two-year jail term on condition that he pay $7.50 a week for the support of his six-month child until the child is 18.

"I'm releasing you on condition that you pay promptly and regularly. Will you do that?" Judge Cullen asked him.

He answered in the affirmative. Present in court was a lady holding a very pretty baby. The accused did not look at the infant.

Later, when the baby was out of sight, and the child's resemblance to him was noted by an observer, he shook his head and did the figuring on the bill he now faces.

ANOTHER FATHER who pleaded guilty to a bastardy charge held a small child in his arms when Judge Cullen suspended his jail term on condition that he pay $10 a week.

The father, Robert Starr, answered "all right, sir" when Judge Cullen advised him, "pay that regularly and promptly or otherwise you'll have to serve your term."

WALTER P. MALLORY who pleaded not guilty to being the father of three small children, fared better than the other two men.

Through his attorney, he produced results of a blood test and contended that because of the test and an operation in a veterans hospital he could not be the father.

Judge Cullen found him not guilty. The mother told the court that "Regardless of the blood tests all my kids are his."

THE CASE OF JAMES (J. T.) Boulware blew up in his attorney's face when the youthful - looking defendant admitted in the court he was the father of the child and had asked the 19-year-old mother to marry him.

Earlier, however, his attorney, Alvin E. Friedman entered a not guilty plea for him. Here is a portion of the testimony:—

Q — They said you were around there saying you wanted to see your baby.

A — I was around there. I told her if I have a kid, I want to see it so I could do what was right.

Q — Do you think this is your child?

A — Yes sir.

Q — Why did you ask her to marry you?

A — She said she was having a baby by me. I didn't know any other alternative but to get married and start a home.

Judge to lawyer — You don't seem to have a very good witness for the defense.

At another point, when the youthful Boulware described how he had wanted to do the right thing," Judge Cullen said to Attorney Friedman and an associate, "I'm sure you submit the case."

The attorney laughingly threw up his hands and said, "we submit."

It was then that Judge Cullen found the youth guilty but suspended a jail term on condition that he pay $5.40 a week for the child's support.

After sentencing, the youth asked the court whether he could have the child after he and the mother were married. At present, the child is in custody of the Department of Public Welfare.

THE CASE OF NON-SUPPORT against Roland N. Delaware was settled after he entered into a voluntary agreement to pay his former wife $15 a week for support of their two minor children now living with her.

Testimony was that the Delawares had ten children before they divorced in Oct. 1956, and that she has since remarried.

Mr. Delaware went into a detailed description of how he pays $10 a week regularly to support the children and gives them allowances and buys their clothes.

He exhibited a bag of what he called receipts to prove it.

Judge Cullen told him, "I think you're a pretty good fellow . . . very conscientious . . . Discuss it with the probation department. It was then that the $15 a week agreement was made.

Matt Henson, not Peary, discovered North Pole

Matthew Henson not Admiral Peary was the real discoverer of the North Pole back on April 6, 1909.

The native Marylander and colored American, a member of the Peary expedition, reached the Pole first on instructions of Peary himself who was too ill to go another step.

H. M. Frisby, who has made 14 trips in the past 14 years to every area of the Arctic except that portion controlled by Russia, gave this bit of true American history on Saturday.

He was guest speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the Philomathian Club hosted by Miss Sarah Sampson.

MR. FRISBY, who was war correspondent for the AFRO in the Far North, is head of the science department at Douglass High School.

He told the club how 50 years ago a high school teacher first whetted his appetite about studying the Arctic and from that day forth he vowed he would be the second colored American to visit the Pole.

Mr. Frisby described his three-year efforts to have a memorial plaque honoring Matt Henson dropped over the Pole in 1956, and of the joint efforts he and the AFRO have made to give proper recognition to Matt Henson.

During the meeting, he played recordings of voices of Eskimos he visited last summer and exhibited clothes, musical instruments and other items made by Eskimos from whales.

He said the greatest satisfaction he has received from his trips to the Far North is that he is able to help those who teach the Eskimo unit in elementary schools to teach fact rather than fiction.

Asked how it felt to have a police guard at his home, Dr. Clifton Jones said:

"It's uncomfortable. You don't know what's going to happen. It is certainly not the most comfortable feeling in the world."

J. J. KELLY, agent - in - charge of the Baltimore FBI office, told the AFRO on Thursday that the investigation of threats to Dr. Bradley Jones were being handled by an agent.

He could not say what steps have been taken to find the letterwriter.

Asked whether the FBI considered the letter the work of a crank, Mr. Kelley said: "We never do. We have to run them out. We always investigate thoroughly."

Singer Chuck Willis dies after operation

ATLANTA, Ga.—Chuck Willis, one of the nation's outstanding rhythm and blues singers, songwriters and recording stars, died in Hugh Spalding Hospital here Thursday morning from complications arising from an ulcer operation he had a week ago.

Willis, a former Atlanta house painter, had been suffering from the ulcer for about two years. Four months ago, while in Philadelphia for an appearance on the Dick Clark TV show, he became ill and had to return home.

After treatment by his personal physician, Dr. Charley Hagney, Willis returned to New York where he appeared on the first coast to coast network show of Dick Clark's "American Bandstand" on ABC-TV.

LATELY, THE 30-year-old Willis had been doing one-nighters and working around his city.

Some barbecue he ate two weeks ago, reportedly aggravated the ulcer and he was ordered to the hospital. Murray Sporn, one of his personal managers, said 70 percent of Willis' stomach was taken out.

"He was feeling good and seemed to be getting along okay until an obstruction appeared in the intestional tract," said Sporn.

FUNERAL SERVICES had not been arranged at press time as the singer's family was waiting to hear from his father in Detroit and a brother in Los Angeles.

Willis is survived by his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Anderson Willis, and a son and a daughter.

ONLY LAST February, Willis was honored by BMI at the second annual rhythm and blues awards luncheon, held at the Hotel Pierre in New York for his "C.C. Rider" for which he wrote both the music and lyrics and recorded on Atlantic label.

Another song he wrote may win him BMI honors for this year, a song ironically called "I'm Going To Hang Up My Rock 'N' Roll Shoes."

Willis also wrote such hit songs as "What A Dream," recorded by Ruth Brown and Patti Page; "From The Bottom Of My Heart," recorded by Don Cornell and the Clovers, and "Close Your Eyes," recorded by the Five Keys.

Brothers share profit of lucky pix winner

"I'm going to divide it up among my brothers."

This week's Lucky Picture winner, 12-yearold Ernest Stewart, a broad smile on his face, was explaining Monday what he planned to do with the five bucks presented him after his picture appeared in the AFRO's winning circle.

Ernest, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Stewart Sr., 1810 N. Smallwood St., was photographed at the Druid Hill Ave. YMCA Father and Son banquet.

Also present at the affair and appearing in the picture were his father and four brothers, Clinton Jr., 15; Odell, 5; Gregory, 7; and Donald, 11.

AT THE BANQUET Mr. Clinton was awarded a door prize as the father with the most sons in attendance.

What was his reaction?

"I was surprised. I was excited. That was the first time my picture has ever been in the paper."

A Lucky Picture appears in each edition of the AFRO.

And it's worth $5 to you if your picture is encircled. So, watch for the Lucky Pictures in each edition. You might be the winner.

Suspect re-captured; pal waited for his return

Two youths, one of whom allegedly escaped from the Northeastern District police station last Saturday morning only to be re-captured in Washington three days later, were ordered held on $1,000 total bail for action of the grand jury Wednesday.

At a hearing before Magistrate Simon Schonfield the two youths, Carl Lee (One Eye) Matthews, 22, of he 800 block N. Wolfe St., and Eddie Ward, 19, of the 100 block N. Aisquith St., entered pleas of not guilty.

Ward and Matthews were charged with breaking into a and striking Patrolman Warren Brown, and of assaulting and robbing Howard Kelso of the 1700 block E. Fayette St.

POLICE STARED that Matthews broke and ran from the station house around 1 a.m. while he was in the process of being searched by Officer Brown, a turnkey.

Both men police said had been arrested inside of a Biddle St. store by Patrolmen Robert Lloyd, it was stated.

IN DIVORCE COURT:

The Bernard Smiths end their marriage

Reticent Mrs. Carolyn Smith of 28 Abington Ave., testified that she was compelled to leave Bernard Smith because he beat her and ordered her from their home.

But her witness, Mrs. Imogene McWhirter of 833 Maxilea Court, had more voluable testimony to give a Master of Circuit Court.

"He never honored her as a wife," said Mrs. McWhirter. "He came in late and when she asked why he would tell her if she didn't like what was going on she could get out."

But chiefly, according to Mrs. McWhirter, it was mother-in-law trouble that ruptured the marriage.

SHE SAID:

Moreover, added Mrs. McWhirter, Mr. Smith had admitted to her that he had driven Mrs. Smith from their home.

The couple, married May 11, 1947, separated May 15, 1953, according to the testimony.

They are parents of a daughter and two sons. The daughter is to remain with the mother and Mr. Smith is to provide $10 per week through the Probation Department for her support. He will have custody of the boys.

CHARLES NOEL of 1715 McKean Ave. won a divorce from Mrs. Ethel Noel and custody of their four children, Saturday.

Mrs. Noel would not stay at home, the husband said, so they agreed to separate.

They were married in 1948 and separated in 1952. He has had the children since the baby was four months old, he said.

The wedding was short lived, from June 22, 1946 to Sept. 16, the same year.

"We weren't getting along. We couldn't hit it off. So I told her that I was going to separate because there was no love there," said Mr. Bell. The separation, he added, was agreeable to Mrs. Bell.

SEGREGATION IN OUR CHURCHES

How have our churches become the primary instrument for the preservation of segregated life in America? The current issue of Esquire Magazine reports that Christian churches—North and South—have altered their constitutions, changed their methods of receiving new members and openly declared themselves to be anti-Negro. That's done, "Segregation in the Churches," in

'Harmony ticket'

The four members of the so-called Democratic Unity and Victory ticket selected Tuesday to start a tour which will take them through all of Maryland's 23 counties.

The ticket is composed of J. Millard Tawes for governor, Thomas D'Alesandro for U.S. Senator, C. Ferdinand Sybert for attorney general and Louis L. Goldstein for comptroller.

This past week the AFRO conducted its sixth recheck survey to discover whether any corrective action has been taken in areas where violations of the city's bathtub laws had previously been uncovered.

Once again reporters returned with the same story — the violations continue to exist.

The sixth re-survey was conducted in the South Baltimore area and it showed that out of 22 homes without tubs on Jan. 25, a grand total of 22 are still without tubs.

In the regulations of the Health Department, which have the effect of a law, notice is served that all dwelling units in the city must have a bathtub and/or a shower and hot water.

That regulation has been in effect for two years and it was the consistent report that the regulation was being ignored that sent the AFRO out on its first series of surveys.

AFTER CHECKING every area of the city, north, south, east and west, there was enough information on hand to show that the law was indeed being violated.

The Health Department said that it did not have the manpower to make the investigations to learn where there were tubless homes.

After the AFRO reported where a number of the homes were located, several months passed, and then the reporters started covering the same ground again, to see what had been done.

IT WAS a case of almost nothing having been done.

An early survey showed that even though boasts have been made that Baltimore has gotten rid of all its outdoor privies, that actually the ancient contraptions continue to exist within the city limits in Fairfield, and the city officials frankly admit that they have no idea of when the primitive facilities will disappear.

THE SIXTH recheck survey in South Baltimore covered the 400 and 500 blocks Cross St., 1100 block Russell St., 900 and 1100 blocks Denver St., and the 500 and 600 blocks Hoiser St.

A family at 1150 Russell St. said that this year marked their 29th year in the house burning coal and wood for heating, bathing and cooking purposes.

An old fashion tin tub had been used for that time.

Among the many homes still missing tubs and hot water were those located at 426, 424, 428, 432 and 521 Cross St.

Families located at 537, 648, 643, 634, 631, 621, 612, 610, 533, 542, 540 and 529 Hoiser St. were without tubs and hot water.

Miss Perkins will names beneficiaries

A will, drawn more than 14 years ago by Miss Elizina Perkins, lists 26 beneficiaries for her estate, estimated by the administrator to approximate $2000.

The document was probated in Orphans Court by Amos I. Meyers, attorney, named by the late retired school teacher to administer her estate.

Miss Perkins, 84, at the time of her death on March 24, cut off three cousins with $1 each and gave the estate to friends and St. John AME Church.

Actually, the estate is to go to 25 persons, Miss Perkins having added a codicil a year later that retracted the gift to Mrs. Julia Phillips when she said she no longer considered a friend.

She had originally willed Mrs. Phillips a refrigerator and $50 in cash.

The cousins were Levi Perkins, Samuel Perkins and Miss Mary Perkins.

LARGEST OF the gifts was $200 to St. John AME Church.

Bequests of $100 each went to Mesdames Bertha K. Hurst, Zenobia Hollis, Alice Gross, Gladys Britt, Mamie Johnson, Lucille Moore; and Louis and James Moore.

She willed $50 each to:

Mesdames Dora Ashton, Amelia White, Lydia Chase, Eula Price, Melba Rawlings, Mamie Gassaway, Annie Maddox and Mabel Franklin; Misses Irma Rawlings and Merrial Rawlings; and Leroy Moore.

SHE GAVE a piano and stool to Mrs. Rebecca Phillips, a gas range to Mrs. Lula Price, book cases to Mrs. Melba Rawlings and divided her books among Mrs. Eva Barnum, Zenobia Hollis and Melba Rawlings.

Her washing machine was bequeathed to Mrs. Lydia Chase and the remainder of her furniture to Mesdames Alice Gross and Lula Price and Herbert Phillips.

Residue of the estate is to be equally divided among Mesdames Alice Gross, Mamie Gassaway, Lula Price, Zenobia Hollis, Lucille Moore and Eula Birche; and Herbert Phillips.

'Missing' son was in jail

"He's not a person to stay away from home. If he isn't dead or unconscious, he would have contacted me."

A worried Mrs. Addie Chase, mother of 46-year-old Cecil Hale, of the 700 block W. Franklin St., told the AFRO that on Tuesday, in reporting her son had been "missing" four days.

Later that afternoon she learned that he had been in city jail.

She said she had checked at Northwestern and Southern "but forgot all about Southwestern."

He had been fined $10 and
