—Earl Koger

Franklin Koger. His father was a grocer and meat dealer in Reidsville. There were seven boys and seven girls in the Koger family.

The eight living children, including Earl, are known for having made their mark in the world both in Reidsville and Baltimore.

The oldest son, Eugene, is a grocer in the North Carolina hometown while Linwood Sr., is magistrate of the largest police area in the United States, Baltimore's Northwestern District.

A. Briscoe, known about town as A.B., is an attorney here while John is in the life insurance business.

Two sisters are local elementary school teachers. They are Mrs. Wynona Collins and Mrs. Katherine Jackson.

Another sister, Mrs. Ailein Lang, is a local high school teacher.

EARL IS next in the youngest and a proud family man.

"I married a mighty fine wife. She is the former Miss Margaret Graves. We met when I was in college at West Virginia State.

"And I have a nice family too," he said.

The five Koger children include Mrs. Thelma Parker, the wife of William Parker, who is employed by the Department of Education.

Earl Jr., is an insurance broker, a Morgan State College graduate, a member of the Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity, while Gordon is a member of his father's insurance firm.

Dorothy, whom Mr. Koger calls "Dotty," is 12 and a student at Pimlico Junior High School. Margaret, lovingly called "Maggie," is 10, and a student at School No. 60.

RELUCTANT to talk about himself except as a last resort, Mr. Koger revealed he is a member of the Joseph H. H. Smith Masonic Lodge No. 54; a Shriner of the Jerusalem Temple, and president of the New Ashburton Improvement Association.

He is also vice-president of the United Civic and Improvement Association of Baltimore City.

In addition, he is the only member of his race in the Association of Underwriters of Baltimore and Maryland.

In 1954, Mr. Koger was elected to the AFRO Honor Roll and cited for contributions made toward the betterment of the community.

AT THE conclusion of the interview Mr. Koger was still reluctant to reveal the year of his birth but he looked back and recalled a happy life "full of hard work."

He said: "I've dug coal in the mines of West Virginia and I was a stevedore in a sugar refinery. I bell-hopped all over Massachusetts trying to make it through college.

"I rode a bicycle on my first debit. My work has carried me into every house in Baltimore.

"My brother Linwood was the same as a father to us. After my father died when I was four.

"I've had it good. Friday the 13th is nothing but good luck for me."

REMOVE WASTE NOT GOOD FOOD

Here's a secret millions have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the wonderfully different chewing-gum laxative.

FEEN-A-MINT is different because you chew it. It's different, too, because it removes mostly waste—not good food! FEEN-A-MINT does not work in the stomach, where food is being digested. That's why it does not take away a lot of the good food you need for energy.

Doctors know that FEEN-A-MINT works chiefly in the lower bowel, removes mostly waste, not good food! And it's non-irritating, too.

So to feel like a million, chew delicious FEEN-A-MINT. 16 tablets, 25¢—also small and economy sizes.

Democrats back integrated schools

By MAX JOHNSON

"We deplore the lip service of those who seek to reap political profit from racial problems.

"The Democratic Party pointed with pride to a record of action and not of words in this field."

These statements in the civil rights plank of the platform, adopted by Maryland's Democratic Party State Convention Tuesday afternoon, contain the theme of the party's entire pronouncements on this subject.

Democrat delegates were in a one-day session at a downtown hotel to officially nominate their party candidates for the November 4 election.

THESE candidates include: J. Millard Tawes, governor; Thomas D'Alesandro Jr., mayor of Baltimore, for U.S. Senator; C. Ferdinand Sybert, attorney general, and Louis L. Goldstein, state comptroller.

The civil rights plank, under the heading of "Human Rights," was unanimously approved along with the entire platform, without debate, from the convention floor.

The plank took a lone stand on desegregation of schools.

It contained no commitments toward improved racial relations in other areas.

This was in comparison to the civil rights plank unanimously adopted three days previously, on Saturday, by Maryland's Republican State Convention.

THE LATTER plank committed Republicans to work for:

1. Complete integration of schools.

2. Use of publicly owned buildings and facilities on an equal basis by all citizens.

3. The opening of all places of public accommodation and services, operated by private business people to citizens on an equal basis, without regard to color.

4. Equal employment opportunities for all citizens.

THE DEMOCRATS' civil rights plank had this to say on its stand on desegregation of schools:

"With the problem of desegregation in our schools, the Supreme Court has spoken. Its decree is the law of the land—and it is supreme.

"We believe in a just, legal and reasonable solution to this problem.

"We believe in calm and orderly action, and we recommend that the school boards throughout the State act within the true spirit as well as the letter of the decree of the Supreme Court on the issue of schools."

Several of the colored Democrat observers at the convention expressed dissatisfaction with the civil rights plank.

They termed it "weak and general," in contrast to the one adopted by the Republicans, and questioned whether it might lose the party votes.

Philip B. Perlman, former U.S. Attorney General and head of the platform committee, said, however, that the plank was drawn to "please everybody, as near as possible."

MR. TAWES, in his acceptance speech, made this brief reference to the entire platform:

"Our platform gives vivid expression to the basic philosophy of the Democratic Party in Maryland.

"I congratulate the committee for a job well done."

The other candidates did not refer to the platform.

Paul M. Butler, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, delivered the keynote address, which followed the theme of this one of his statements:

"First of all, the people have had enough of Republican reassurance. Now they are ready for Democratic deeds."

Mr. Butler termed the convention, "one of the greatest love feasts I ever attended.

J. Alvin Jones, Fourth District candidate for the Maryland General Assembly senate seat, and Walter T. Dixon, Fourth District city councilman, were in the group escorting the candidates to the speakers' platform.

The convention gave all indications that harmony had finally come to the Maryland Democratic Party.

W. Preston Lane Jr., George P. Mahoney, Herbert R. O'Conor Jr., speaking for his father, the former governor and U.S. Senator, and Clarence Long, all made speeches urging support of the party candidates.

Mr. Lane, former governor, represented the "old guard" faction in the party that had wanted James Bruce to get the senatorial nomination.

Mr. Mahoney and Dr. Long, also unsuccessful Senatorial candidates in the primary, had campaigned as independents.

Mr. Mahoney, particularly, with a long-time faction of his own.

Among the convention delegates were:

Mrs. Ida M. Smith, Mrs. Pearl D. Pennington and Melvin Callaman, from the Fourth District.

Among the observers were: Truly Hatchett, Fourth District member of the House of Delegates; Lloyal Randolph, Samuel R. Stewart, U. Theodore Hayes and Calvin Douglass, assistant city solicitor.

Also, Traffic Court Magistrate Robert B. Watts, Josiah F. Henry Jr., Joseph Neale, Creston (Doc) Wormgust and Brief reference to the entire platform:

DELEGATES TO THE DEMOCRATIC state convention held here Tuesday at a downtown hotel are shown above. Left to right are Melvin Callaman, Mrs. Ida M. Smith and Mrs. Pearlie Pennington, all of the Fourth District.

Holdridge arrested the father at 3:35 a.m. on June 10.

THE GIRL said in court that when she was reluctant to do as her father desired he would beat her on her unclothed body.

According to the charge placed against the father he last forced the girl to be intimate with him on June 7.

"I thought he was helping me with her," the mother commented of the frequent visits the girl made to her father's home at his request.

When asked how he wished to plead to the charge the man told Magistrate Fanseen: "Well, she's my daughter; she's my daughter."

The girl wore a red plaid skirt and pink blouse to court.

SGT. WHYTE, who received the 14-year-old girl's complaint against her father, is also investigating another complaint by a Northwest Baltimore mother who alleges her eight-year-old daughter was mistreated by an uncle.

At the time of this alleged assault the child was visiting in the home of her grandmother where the uncle also lives.

Another complaint received by the veteran policewoman involves a 13-year-old girl who accuses a 22-year-old man of criminal assault.

SGT. WHYTE told the AFRO that there has been an increase in sex crimes of this nature since warm weather.

She recalled that just last week in Criminal Court a 55-year-old man had been convicted of criminal assault on a group of girls ranging in age from 8 to 13 years.

She noted that the girls had been abused in the shrubbery on the Douglass High School grounds.

"We need more girls who will become rebellious of this mistreatment and who understand they can safely come to the police and report it without fear of reprisals," Sgt. Whyte said.

She estimated that police only get half of such sex offenses because people are reluctant to report them, ashamed that the children or their families will be embarrassed.

The result, Sgt. Whyte said, is that boys and adult men who prey on young girls and are a menace to the community are still on the streets.

People should remember, she advised, that neither the police nor the press use names of girls who are raped or sexually abused.

STATE OF MARYLAND DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

Adopted in State Convention, June 10, 1958

—HUMAN RIGHTS PLANK—

On the problem of desegregation in our schools the Supreme Court has spoken. Its decree is the law of the land—and it is supreme.

We deplore the lip service of those who seek to reap political profit from racial problems. The Democratic Party points with pride to a record of action and not of words in this field. The present Democratic Congress enacted the first Civil Rights statute in the period of the last eighty years.

The supreme Court said "with all deliberate speed" when it ordered desegregation in the schools.

IN BALTIMORE City the School Board, which was appointed by a Democratic administration, promptly translated the decree of the Supreme Court into action and as a result we have had prompt and prompt desegregation in the the schools of Baltimore City.

The Democratic Administration of Baltimore City also enacted the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission Ordinance which will have a far reaching benefit in this field.

When those trouble makers who would stir up strife made their appearence in Baltimore City, the same Democratic administration acted promptly and effectively to suppress them. As a result we have had quiet and effective desegregation in the school system of Maryland's largest city.

WE BELIEVE in a just, legal and reasonable solution to this problem. We believe in calm and orderly action and we recommend that the school boards throughout the State act within the true spirit as well as the letter of the decree of the Supreme Court on the issue of integration in our public schools.

The Republican State Administration, despite its public pronouncements to the contrary, has failed miserably to take any action where it has exclusive jurisdiction over this subject.

Taking first an offense report Sgt. Szepanski read:

"Around 8:50 p.m. on March 27 we were called to the 1700 block of Division St.

"Upon our arrival we found two officers and Ambulance No. 4 crew who took a body from the vestibule identified as Joseph Fowler Sr., who had been shot in the forehead.

"In our investigation we spoke to Joseph Jr., who gave certain statements in which he said he got Tankard to wheel him to his house to have his father shot because he had chased his friends out of his house."

When asked to read a part of Fowler's statement the sergeant continued:

The statement read: "Last night while visiting my girl friend I stopped in to see if her feelings had been hurt by what my father had said.

"Some friends came in and we drank wine with them. Another fellow came in and said his gun was for hire."

TURNING HIS attention to one of two statements allegedly signed by Tankard, Sgt. Szepanski stated:

"When we asked Tankard if everything in his original statement was true he said, "it is true."

"Tankard was arrested on March 28 and when we questioned him he told us that after the shooting he grabbed a cab to E. Baltimore.

In his statement he said:

"On March 27th I went to Arlington Ave., and Joe Fowler was there. We drank wine together and he asked me to do him a favor. He said to shoot his father and he would set me straight.

"He asked me if I had my heater on me.

"We went to the house and Joe got sick on the walk. Joe's father came to the door and asked what I wanted and I told him Joe was sick and then shot him."

POLICE RECORDS show that Mr. Fowler was shot around 8 p.m. after answering a knock at the door of his home.

He died 11 days later without regaining consciousness.

Originally, Fowler and Tankard were charged with assault and with conspiracy to shoot the elder Fowler. Their bail at the time was set at $15,000 each.

Young Fowler is paralyzed from the waist down as the result of an accident suffered while in service.

FOR THE hearing the tall young man with mixed gray hair wore a white shirt and brown trousers.

Fowler was wheeled to and from the courtroom by Tankard who was dressed in gray trousers and a blue ivy league jacket.

As he was being taken back to the cell block at Central Police headquarters, Fowler turned toward his mother, Mrs. Rena Fowler and gave a wink and a smile before the heavy iron door slammed shut.

Friendship, high fashion in Judge Cullen's Court

A gay array of the latest ship prevailed as accused huswife in fashion was seen in bands and erstwhile male judge James K. Cullen's Domestic Relations Court on Monday.

In addition, an air of friendship was concerned.

Dressed in a beige and toast sack dress with a low bow on the back, beige slippers, and wearing green earrings, an attractive young woman sat with a male friend on the front bench during court recess.

Also during recess, a blond wife smartly dressed in a pink cotton chemise walking suit chatted with her husband who was nearly $1,000 in arrears with support money. He wore a matching pink cotton shirt.

A FASHION plate in powder blue was another wife who wore a chemise frock with matching slippers, hose, purse and gloves. She appeared well to see her husband who was also back in support money.

The husbands themselves were also in high fashion, and leaned toward the friendly side.

One wore an antique gold cloth sport shirt open at the neck while another was nattily togged in a red sport shirt, red hose and dark glasses.

His hair was of a matching red blue shade a silver metal belt set off nifty dark summer weight trousers.

However wearing the customary black judicial robes and maintaining the same view of justice for those who desert families, Judge Cullen continued to state: "Support your family or go to jail."

In agreement with the jurist was a blond father of three children, one son and twin daughters.

Summoned to court for non-support was, Basil Palleschi 2200 block E. Baltimore St. who told the court he was glad it happened.

He said: "It should have happened 10 years ago. I was picked up ten days ago.

"I'm glad it happened. I wouldn't know anything about what was going on.

"The children's grandmother had cared for them since their mother had remarried she testified.

However Mr. Palleschi testified he did not know where they were.

He is employed as a cook in out-of-town summer resorts, he stated.

"When I did discover where the children were and as soon as my mother-in-law saw me coming, the kids were picked up and taken into the house and the police told me not to go in there."

A TWO-YEAR suspended sentence in the House of Correction was given Leonard Boston, a cab driver, who was $264 in arrears on support of a child born out of wedlock.

Probation Department authorities testified that Mr. Boston was also $90 in arrears on a hospital bill.

He was granted probation to pay a weekly sum of $7, which is $5 support money and $1 on the delinquent hospital bill plus $1 on the arrears.

Said Judge Cullen: "Do you think you'll pay?"

He added: "You'll serve two years in the House of Correction if you don't. You know that, don't you?"

JOYNNY SAUNDERS was charged with non-support of his legitimate family as well as a child born out of wedlock.

While in court Mr. Saunders paid $50 on the arrears in each case making a total of $100 in cash.

A sentence of two years in the House of Correction was suspended on terms that he pay $16 weekly for the support of his family and $5 weekly for the child born out of wedlock.

JUDGE CULLEN revoked probation for Charles C. Stevenson who stated that pressure for support money from an ex-wife and his present wife is too great.

The jurist exclaimed: "The pressure is not too great when you're not paying either one."

CHARGED with non-support of three children, Leon Henderson, 3103 Clifton Ave., was placed on probation to pay weekly sum of $25.

For delinquency in payments, Mr. Henderson testified he had two reasons.

He said: "I work on the waterfront and the work has been slack. Then, too, my wife said unless I paid her $30 a week, I didn't need to pay for anything.

CHARLES STEVENSON, 700 block E. Preston St., was charged with non-support of his wife, Mrs. Gladys Stevenson, 600 block N. Carrollton Ave.

Mrs. Stevenson testified that she has been ill and unable to work.

When Probation Department officials testified Mr. Stevenson is more than $2,000 in arrears, Judge Cullen stated that the young husband had neglected his obligation.

He said: "I'm sorry. You'll have to get some money. I find you guilty."

She has a special boyfriend—he is a third-year student at City College. Her mother permits dates at home on weekends and of course for movies, etc.

Betty says she has no plans for anything serious, like marriage.

She is looking forward to college and to a career as a newspaper woman or a teacher.

"Teaching is my second choice," she explained, "but I've always liked newspaper work."
