ONE MAN

Potato Planter

With or without Fertilizer Attachment. Our Fertilizer Attachment, which has given such excellent satisfaction for the past ten years, is used on planter No. 3. The mechanism consists of a rotary force feed, operated by a chain and sprocket wheels; the hopper is provided with an agitator which prevents bridging or clogging. By means of a pedal the flow of fertilizer can be shut off at will. The fertilizer is deposited in the bottom of the furrow, mixed with the soil and covered with fresh earth, upon which the seed is dropped, thus protecting it from injury by contact with the fertilizer. This feature belongs exclusively to the Aspinwall Planter, and is protected by patents. Only requires one man to operate. The iron hand plants your potatoes—the hand that never gets tired—the hand that never feels the cold—the hand that is more accurate than the average human hand—the hand that handles the seed without respect to size or shape—the hand that has given unprecendented satisfaction. The planter that is light draft and durable.

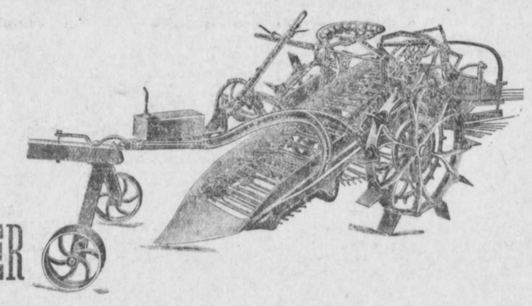

The Beetle Potato Duster

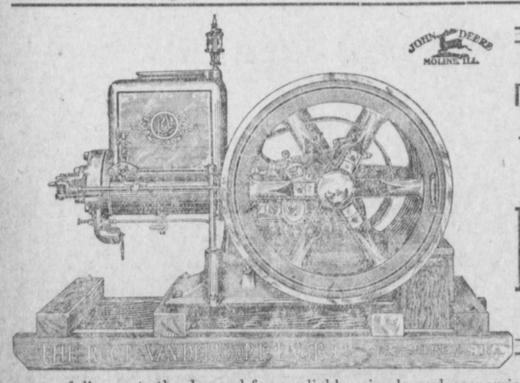

This is an ideal Potato Bug Destroyer and blight preventive. 50 gallons of water are usually used for three acres of potatoes by the dry method 3 to 5 pounds is all that is required, thus a man can start out with 30 or 40 pounds of dry poison for a whole day's work and save the carrying of about 10 barrels of water, the only use of which is to convey the poison. Price $65.00.

THE

HOOVER POTATO DIGGER

Son of Smith Sympathizers Hits out Hard.

The following letter taken from the Baltimore Sun is from the son of Mr. J. W. T Webb, of Dorchester county, a University of Virginia graduate and an ardent supporter of Senator John Walter Smith. The writer is a relative of the Webb boys who were former Washington College students, one of whom is at present the able editor of the Cambridge Record the only triweekly newspaper published on the Eastern Shore. It is a most forceful letter. Read it:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SUN—Sir: Democrats of Maryland should rejoice at the opportunity afforded them to place in the United States Senate a man who will bring credit and glory to our State and real service to the nation.

William L. Marbury typifies the new era in our political life in Maryland. He represents in this State the same forces which went to make the candidacy of Woodrow Wilson a possibility, and later his election to the Presidency of this great republic a reality—the forces which put ability and statesmanship above politics and selfishness, and whose watchword is "public welfare."

Our national life is just now undergoing a revolutionary change, and if ever we needed good men and strong to cope with the problems which confront us now is that time. Representative government's life is being threatened by socialistic doctrines. International breaches, growing out of legislation regulating the Panama Canal, are impending our peace and happiness. Questions involving the hearth of every Americon citizen are being daily passed upon by the Congress while reforming the tariff. Do these matters not call for the ability of versatile great men? Is it not our duty, should it not be our pleasure, to accept these great men when their services are offered to us? Mr. Marbury possesses deep interest in and sympathetic understanding of these questions. His ability to deal with and master them is a well-known fact. The conclusion is easily drawn.

The advent of men of the Marbury type into political life has an even greater significance from a moral standpoint. For many years politics has been sinking deeper and deeper into the mire, until it has finally reached a point where its offerings are unrepresentative, and the majority of its results directly undemocratic. This is a pitiable state of affairs. What service should be held in higher esteem than the service bestowed by the confidence and respect of one's friends, neighbors and fellowcitizens? Yet it has become a dishonor and the officeholder is looked upon in shady disrepute.

Our country cannot prosper under these conditions. History proves that corruption and immorality have undermined and been the ultimate downfall of other great nations of the past. Unless we choose to fall, we must put away the unscrupulous and bring in its stead high-mindedness, integrity and civic-righteousness. The affairs of the State and the nation must be carried on with as great efficiency as is the work of the most methodical of private offices.

Through Mr. Marbury there lies a road that leads to better things. We must accept him.
