Taxes are due

The Department of Employment Security announced this week that Maryland Unemployment insurance taxes for the third calendar quarter are due Oct. 31.

The announcement supersedes an absolute notice recently sent employers which stated that the due date is Oct. 20. That notice was incorrect.

The department also offered an explanation of the tax rise which went into effect July 1 as a result of substantial increases in unemployment in the last year or so.

IRONING IS ONE chore Mrs. Spriggs completes quickly and efficiently. When she finishes, she will relax in front of her television. She explains, "So many people question when I say 'watch' television. They tell me, "Here, feel this," instead of telling me to 'look' at it. The only difference with me is that I look with my hands."

Second Army marks birthday with open house on Sunday

Born during the bitter trench warfar of World War I, the Second United States Army with headquarters at Fort Meade will celebrate its 40th anniversary on Oct. 10.

A cordial welcome is extended to the public to witness a special anniversary parade to be held here beginning at 11 a.m. on Friday.

Second Army is one of six continental Army commands within the United States and includes all posts and installations within a seven-state area: Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky and the District of Columbia.

* * *

SECOND ARMY is over 90,000 men strong in terms of active-duty personnel alone.

Also under its jurisdiction are the thousands of members of the Army Reserve, including the ROTC, who reside in the seven-state Army area. In addition, Second Army helps to support National Guard activities.

During World War II, Second Army trained and put into the field nine corps headquarters, 5 divisions, and some 2,000 units of various arms and services composed of almost one million men.

This vital training mission was again delegated to Second Army during the Korean conflict.

Lt. Gen. George W. Read, Jr., Commanding General of Second Army said in a special message to personnel that "it is with pleasure and pride that I congratulate all members of the Second United States Army on its 40th anniversary.

A congratulatory message from Army Chief of Staff, gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, reads in part as follows:

"It is a pleasure to join with other American soldiers all over the world in expressing pride and confidence in the Second United States Army upon its successful completion of another year of effective and fruitful service to our Nation."

Must help blind see that 'there is life'

"My aim in life is to help blind people understand that there is life—something they can do to be beneficial to society," said Mrs. Muriel Wilson Spriggs, 474 Alhambra Ave., this week.

"I'd also like to help the sighted to understand that a blind person doesn't need to be treated like a piece of rare china — something to be protected," the 23-year-old housewife continued.

"I believe that blind people can do almost anything they want to do.

"Just let them do it their way or let them find for themselves which way is the most effective way for them," she added.

* * *

THESE WERE THE comments of Mrs. Spriggs as she took time out from her busy schedule to explain the philosophy that has helped her overcome a handicap.

She has been blind since she was 10 years old.

However, the attractive housewife can find no legitimate reasons why she shouldn't be as bright, cheerful and active as anyone else.

At home with her husband, Otha Spriggs Jr., Mrs. Spriggs does her household chores dutifully and effectively.

Her duties include washing dishes, ironing, making beds, vacuuming, etcetera.

"Of course, I've made mistakes while I was learning to do these things," says Mrs. Spriggs, "but I appreciate learning to do them for myself.

Her leisure hours are brimful with seeing friends — at home or visiting, going to the movies, listening to the radio or just chatting.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Spriggs are recent graduates of Morgan State College. Her husband will enter the army in February as a second lieutenant.

* * *

"RIGHT NOW, I can't decide what I'll do when he goes into the service.

"I intend to go to graduate school eventually—I might do that when he leaves," she said.

"If I don't go to school, then I might go with him. I might be able to go to school where he is stationed," she said with her mind on the future.

How does she feel about life?

"It's beautiful!" she says.

Send a Note of Cheer

This is Mrs. Henrietta Martin, new director of Balto. YWCA

By LULA JONES GARRETT

Meet the new Metropolitan Executive Director of the Baltimore Young Women's Christian Association.

She's a petit, blue - eyed vivacious grandmother. She's such a fast - talker that a reporter finds it almost impossible to keep notes on her conversation. But she's a fast-talker who says something with every word she utters.

She must be a fast worker, too. For the YWCA public relations secretary says that within the few days the Executive has been on the scene desks have been cleared that had not shown tops for months.

She knows the YWCA backwards and forwards and speaks with authority of the Association's history, achievements, aims and prospects.

She's Mrs. Henrietta B. Martin, mother of three daughters, six times a grandmother, and a widow since her youngest daughter was a tiny tot.

MRS. MARTIN has been a school teacher, her special field being adult education; a YWCA secretary, and for the past three years a member of the Community Division, National YWCA Board Staff, Working out of Chicago she monitored 37 branches scattered throughout Minnesota, the Dakotas and Wisconsin, before coming to Baltimore.

She admits that she has "had her eye" on Baltimore, that she admires greatly the Association here which has "achieved a fine Democratic status without any frightening experience," and which offers her "a chance to work across all sections and enjoy its international and interracial flavor."

Mrs. Martin, who says that she has not as yet formulated plans for her work here, says that nevertheless she has discovered a need to "take a look at present plans," with a view towards meeting needs that have developed since the five-year plan was inaugurated, and towards meeting these needs. This self-study, which she wants directed by a research expert, is to include staff members, voluntary workers and population changes.

* * *

THE DIRECTOR sums up her deep respect for the YWCA in a few points. She says that it has justly won its acclaim as the most democratic organization in America through its strength achieved by being "born right, growing right and living right."

Of her philosophy of work in the YWCA, she says:

"You ask about my philosophy of work in the YWCA. As I think back, trying to formulate some kind of thinking as to how I arrived at my philosophy, it is a little difficult.

"First of all, part of my philosophy comes from my living with three children — from my family which taught me patience and understanding. Second, some of it came from the public school systems to which I was related for some years as a teacher, giving me the pedogogical principles and their application, a good plan of organization and a chance to work with others who had a firm belief in education for all people.

"The last thing is the Young Women's Christian Association to which I am related now. It has no creed and believes that all individuals are children of God, but has outlined a working faith as written by one of our National staff members with these seven points as a basis for our belief.

"First of all, we believe in a Supreme power which is greater than man. Second, we believe in the power of great lives and as Christians, Jesus Christ is the one to whom we give our allegience and faith. Third, we believe in man and his potentials, his value, and his dignity, no matter what his race, color or creed.

"Fourth, we believe in the good earth and the benefits therefrom, recognizing that from that basis comes our economic system and our help to those of our world citizens who are less fortunate than we are in possesssing them. Next, we believe in the power of the good over the evil.

"We recognize the evil, but we as an organization strive thus to develop a program which provides for the good of all people. Last, we believe in a moral universe, a kind of right and wrong upon which we may not always agree as individuals, but which lets us agree upon the principles.

* * *

"I AM VERY happy to be here in Baltimore and I was interested in the city because it has a cross - section of individuals and cultures.

With our International Center, with our Madison Avenue Branch, with our people from across the country, with our native Baltimoreans, we have a cross - section of many kinds of cultures and backgrounds and I am very proud to be a part of this Association which has moved quietly and planned thoughtfully in its desire to give to Baltimore the kind of service which a YWCA should give as a member of the world's largest women's Christian organization.

MISS ANNA ENGLISH

MISS DORIS REED

MISS LORRAINE THOMAS DRAW, PONDER — These three pretty Misses don't need to draw a gun to get attention. With their fancy get-up, they have been attracting attention for the sake of their product, "Golden Spur", a new wine. Miss English, at the top, is "Miss Golden Spur." She is a native New Yorker and has appeared as the "other woman" in Langston Hughes' "Simply Heavenly," a Broadway production. Miss Reed, center, and Miss Thomas, in the lower picture, are both Baltimoreans, serving as her bodyguards.
