Ross while putting him out of the tavern.

The former Brooklyn and Los Angeles Dodger hurler told the board he ejected Mr. Ross after the patron became abusive.

Norman Newcombe, however, told the board he hit Mr. Ross after the man tore his shirt.

Harold Newcombe denied threatening Mr. Ross with a gun.

Last May Chief Magistrate Nicholas Castellano fined Harold $200 on a charge of assaulting an officer called to the scene of the December fracas.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has not ruled on the Newcombe case.

from 1941 to '42 and was a Massachusetts delegate to the Democratic National Convention in 1948.

HE WAS also a member of the Pigskin Club of Washington, D.C., an organization of former and active athletes and officials for the advancement of sports and aiding of youths with athletic ability.

Dr. Taylor, who was 71, was a graduate of Lincoln University (Pa.) and the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy.

He was a native of Danville, Va., but had resided for most of his life in Boston.

He is survived by two brothers, Dr. Balcom Taylor of Boston and David Taylor of Danville; two sisters, Mrs. Taylor Page of Danville and Mrs. Natalie T. Jacobs of Bridgeport, Conn.

Dr. Taylor was honored for "40 years of outstanding service to community, state and nation" at a testimonial banquet staged by residents of the New England area at the New York Sheraton-Plaza Hotel on Dec. 28, 1956.

—Crippled son guilty shot wound of the forehead.

Tankard, who lived in the 1800 block of N. Payson St., was allegedly hired by Fowler Jr., to shoot his father following a drinking spree at an Arlington Ave. home.

Testimony was given that young Fowler wanted the "job done" because his father had chased a group of friends from their home.

IN A STATEMENT read to the court, Tankard stated that after Fowler inquired about his gun being for hire, he pushed him home in his wheel chair and shot the 58-year-old father when he answered the door.

Fowler Jr., allegedly sat outside watching the episode.

Following the arrest of both men, a .32 caliber revolver was recovered by the gastaide hence of Tankard's aunt, police said.

WHEN HE TOOK the stand on Monday, Fowler testified that he draws $500 a month in compensation for a spinal injury he received while in the Army.

He said he also suffered a broken neck at the time when the recoil from a .50 caliber machine gun knocked him off a 30-foot ramp.

The handsome six-foot ex-career soldier told the court of how his father accepted his money in clips of $100, and used it to drink and gamble.

His mother, Mrs. Rena Fowler testified that before the shooting, Fowler Sr., locked his son outdoors in the rain.

She said that later, while in a fit of anger Mr. Fowler told his son:

"You s-o-b, you should have been dead when you first got hurt. If I was to see your dead body lying in the street I wouldn't pick you up."

Mrs. Fowler added that her son accepted the tirade with humility and told his father: "Daddy, you don't know you hated me that much."

• • •

CHARACTER WITNESSES described the deceased man as a hard drinking, poker playing philanderer who spent his son's money like a drunken sailor on leave.

Under questioning by Mr. Rosenthal, James Whitter of the 2300 block Division St., had this to say about Fowler Sr.

Q — What kind of man was Mr. Fowler?

A — All I can say is he treated me swell. His (Fowler Jr.) father was a midnight man. He stayed out with me night after night.

Q — (Judge Manley)—You are a mid-night man?

A — Yes. We played poker together.

ANOTHER CHARACTER witness gave the following account of the trials and tribulations of the Fowler family.

Q — What kind of man was Fowler's father?

A — His father was a devil.

Q — How did he treat the boy?

A — Just as bad as he could.

Q— How did the boy act?

A — He was nice but his father treated him like a stepchild.

Q — Did the father stay at home?

A — Sometimes. He had two girl friends and he gambled.

Q — Did he drink?

A — All he could hold. He treated Mrs. Rena (his wife) like a dog and run Little JMoe out of the house. He would call him anything but a child of God.

Q — (Mr. Murphy) — Then there's happiness in the home since he departed this vale of tears?

A — That's right.

TESTIMONY ON behalf of the defendant was also given by his older sister, Mrs. Marion Pope of the 1700 block Brunt St., Miss Pattie Henry and Miss Thelma Henry and Mrs. Annie Syles, 1700 Block McCulloh St.

Also, Elmer Smith of the first block Winters Ave., Catonsville; Mrs. Lena Hawkins, 1700 block Brunt St.; Bryant L. Carpenter, 400 block Pennsylvania Ave.; the Rev. William W. Payne; and Mrs. Selma Thomas of the 1400 block Poplar Grove St.

THE LAST WITNESS, Mrs. Margaret Lee, a slim, well dressed, attractive woman who also identified herself as Fowler's sister, testified that her father "didn't show too much interest toward the children including myself."

Mrs. Lee said that her two children were in the home alone with Mr. Fowler the night of the shooting.

While the elder Fowler emerged from the testimony in an unsympathetic light, the witnesses were united in their opinion of the son whom they pictured as a mistreated cripple who despite all this, still loved his father.

A high point of the trial was reached when Fowler took the stand in his own defense and told the court that he had loved his father and his only desire was to help him, not to be a burden to him.

IN SEEKING an acquittal for both clients Mr. Rosenthal asked the jury to be merciful. He said:

"You have heard of no design to kill. Neither boy has said anything about killing Mr. Fowler deliberately.

"To justify a first degree conviction the jury must find the intent. The fact that they were intoxicated is to be considered, for in order to commit first degree murder, a person must be conscious and in possession of his faculties.

"Maybe Mr. Murphy wants to make himself a hero, maybe he will get a medal for getting a first degree conviction, but I don't think Mr. Grady (State's Attorney J. Harold Grady) will go along with that.

"Are you ladies and gentleman going to take a helpless cripple who was drunk and who had a father who was cruel and had no other purpose but to gamble and run around?

"THIS BOY is broken in spirit. He asked a sympathetic friend to shoot to scare his father so he could go into his home to rest.

"What person planning a murder would ask a man to roll him up to the scene?

"He (Fowler) hasn't got long to be here. His condition is painful. I don't know why Mr. Murphy wants to go by the book in this case.

"As for Tankard, he was just a poor sympathetic friend in his cups.

"Try to have compassion for what has happened and not just for the letter of the law as Mr. Murphy would have you believe."

Near the end of his 48-minute talk before the jury, Mr. Rosenthal quoted excerpts from Proverbs and stated:

"In case of doubt, it is best to lean to the side of mercy. Only man helps man."

MR. MURPHY opened his 26-minute rebuttal as Mr. Rosenthal was walking to a nearby water cooler. He said:

"All that Mr. Rosenthal has told you, as he goes to get his usual drink of water, is a lot of double talk.

"It's apparent in this case that Fowler must be protected at all costs. They are willing to throw Tankard to the wolves.

"Fowler's mind was working s.k. Tankard says that Fowler asked him to shoot his father. Later he says he only wanted him to frighten his father and shoot him in the leg.

"That shows they deliberated and this was premeditated. They went there for one purpose, to do harm to the father.

"After the shooting Tankard went to Fowler's girl friend in order to get some money.

"This all might seem fantastic but the facts are indisputable," Mr. Murphy declared.

THE EMOTIONAL performance by the two attorneys was displayed before a crowded court room.

On opening day, late arriving spectators were turned away at the door.

Fowler, who often grimaced as if in pain when ever he shifted around in his wheel chair, appeared in court dressed in the same attire he wore on Monday.

Both defendants wore brown suits and bright sports shoes.

Throughout the long hearing, both kept a fixed gaze on the brown tile floor.

Father held for beating daughter, 5

WASHINGTON

Lee Ward, 37, charged with cruelty to his daughter, was arraigned in Municipal Court Tuesday and bond was set at $1,000. The case was continued until Nov. 13.

Ward was charged with beating his daughter, 5, after she was found nude and beaten on the steps outside their home at 12 I St., NE, police said.

THE CHILD was bleeding from the mouth and had four or five two-inch welts on her body, according to Pvt. Sam Selby. Police were called by neighbors who said they heard the child screaming.

According to the officer, the child had been ill during the day. She was being undressed for a change of clothing when the beating occurred, police said.

The child was admitted to Children's Hospital in good condition.

separate maintenance and dismissed Dr. Roberts' cross-complaint for a limited divorce on the ground of cruelty.

THE JUDGE found that the wife had justifiably left home, that she had sought a reconciliation with her husband, and was still ready and anxious to make up.

He also found that Dr. Roberts had rejected a reconciliation, had stated from the witness stand that he did not love his wife and would not go back to her, that he had changed the locks on the house where they had lived, refused to give her a key to the new lock, and that she had been compelled to live elsewhere.

Dr. Roberts later twice brought suits for divorce on the ground of five years of voluntary separation. Judge Richmond B. Keech dismissed his first suit. In the second suit he was granted a divorce but the Court of Appeals set aside the decree.

Off The Beaten Path

By ELIZABEH M. OLIVER

(Featuring Election Day Notes from "Poll Cat's" diary).

Election Day, Nov. 4, 1958, was a 4-ring circus with so much going on it was impossible to witness it all.

However, an old timer who knew where to be and what to look for claims he "saw it all." He is what is known as a "Poll Cat," a character who has had many years experience hanging around the polls.

With Poll Cat reporting, it was discovered Election Day saw some fighting, scrapping, fussin' and cussin', pranks, tricks, tears.

Further, Poll Cat states there was plenty foolishness, nonsense and funny business going on as voters lost their perspective and things went awry.

TAKE A LOOK at these notes from Poll Cat's notebook:

It was reported that several early morning voters went to a 4th District polling place, found it locked, were told it had been moved "somewhere about four blocks from here."

Mystery still surrounds the event. Was the original polling place moved or were voters steered to a fictitious polling place?

All day voters kept arriving at the locked "polling place," stood around wondering where it went to, then left without voting.

AND THEN Poll Cat says there was an ardent Democrat who marched at the head of a group of his club members, led them to the polls and they all voted.

Actually, it was reported, none of the "club members" resided in the area although they had some sort of cards which gave addresses in that Precinct.

AS POLL CAT stood on Pennsylvania Ave. near Biddle St., he says he saw voters visiting a specified and secluded location to guzzle drinks before they went inside the polls.

Here's what Poll Cat overheard the dispenser of the drinks saying: "Just a little something to refresh your memory on the candidate you're voting for."

In the area, Poll Cat reports that voters also visited another secluded location where they were filled with phony talk about "jobs next week" if they voted right.

OUR POLL CAT'S Election Day diary shows that he witnessed a worker asking a voter: "Who are you voting for?"

The voter whipped out a gun and said: "Here's my ballot."

NEARBY, POLL CAT vows, he heard an elderly woman voter answer the same question this way: "I voted for Jesus 30 years ago and I'm not changing over to coalition this year."

INSIDE THE polls somewhere in the 4th District, Poll Cat states there was a judge who delighted in elderly or illiterate voters who needed help to cast their ballots.

Poll Cat heard the judge say: "Come on in and practice on the machine and then when you see how it's done, you can vote."

Our reporter says that the judge then proceeded to push down the pointers over the names of HER OWN chosen candidates.

Poll Cat asks: "How many times do you suppose that one judge voted?"

POLL CAT ARRIVED at Senator Harry A. Cole's North Ave. headquarters about 10:30 p.m. just as a worker rushed in and said: "You all done lost this thing. Give me my money."

Poll Cat reports that the worker got his money plus a lot of boos from bystanders.

A voter and Cole supporter summed up the sentiment of the hour this way:

Said Earl D. Spruille, 932 Harlem Ave.: "Yes, you can quote me.

"Simply say this — my heart bleeds."

AN UNIDENTIFIED voter sat in a corner, Poll Cat says. His face wore a puzzled look.

Exclaimed the perplexed voter: "What do you suppose happened to the votes intended for Senator Cole?"

In another corner, another confused voter pondered the Cole defeat and said: "If it had rained today, that could have been a good excuse. But, it didn't rain."

"SMARTEST FOLKS in town" according to Poll Cat were the Morgan State College students who were getting practical, political experience on the spot as he himself has done for years.

Under the guidance of Dr. G. James Fleming, professor of Political Science at the college, the pupils were located in widely scattered areas as far away as Dundalk community.

Dr. Flemming termed the event a "field trip" for political science students.

Reporting astonishing incidents and titillating happenings to class the following day were:

Christine McKeever, Barbara Frederick, June Hudson, Shirley Skecter, James Williams, Arthur Sparrow, William White and Julius Gamble.

Baptist Congress stages meeting

The executive board of the Maryland General Baptist Sunday School and BTU Congress held its first formal meeting last Monday at the Canaan Baptist Church.

Superintendents and directors of various Sunday Schools in the organization were present.

The activities included a talent program, an informal message on "Religious Training," by the Rev. J. O. Brown, field agent of the Congress. The Rev. W. D. Leighton was master of ceremonies.

The congress netted one hundred dollars by its first gathering. Refreshments were served.

The Pastors' Wives of the Baptist Congress also contributed $36 after a meeting at Lit tle Foundation Baptist Church, 817 Pennsylvania Ave.

OFFICERS of the Pastors' Wives are:

Mesdames Bessie Whidbee, president; Ada Green, vice secretary; Rida Billups recording secretary and Viola Rivers, treasurer.
