around him that we are not going to look for anything but the high-class article he is capable of putting up. His work Saturday was the stuff; he played the hot corner right to the limit, and nothing resembling an error marred his work. Meekins and Lewis will balance that infield nicely. Meek will not feel this year like he had to show the others how; he will not feel as if an error from him looks as big as the grand stand full of people, and consequently he will not make as many. The fans are looking for Gib to close his base-ball career at Washington with the best work he has ever done, and if the game Saturday was any criterion, his college base-ball sun will set in a blaze of glory.

Left field is now held down or up, whichever way you choose, by Blondy Frampton. He's another new-comer, and he looks fast. He made a noble effort at a long foul Saturday, ploughed up the ground for a mile or so, after hooking his shoe cleat in the track curbing, and lost the ball in the graceful slide he made down the decent in the left garden. But he went after it like he meant to eat it up, and if he did get a mouthful of grass instead of a chunk of horse hide cover, he'll satisfy his appetite more frequently with flies than he will with worms, if he shows that dash all the time. He handled all the other chances well enough, showed some hitting ability, and it looks as if he has a cinch on that side of the outfield.

And here's our old friend Tim in centre; another balancer; 'taint no use to say anything about him; you couldn't pry him out of his job if you had the Milky Way for a lever and Mars for a fulcrum. He's there to stay, and he's right on the job all the time. His reputation's made, and if it wasn't, he dosen't expect to marry around here anyhow, and he doesn't care a dang-ty-dang-dang whether school keeps or not.

But Timothy's right at home out there, and if a batter has any respect for his run-getting record, he'd better keep'em close to mother earth when they go in Garrett's territory—and Garrett better look out for himself when these daisy-cutters come along; because he can run one down as well as the next one. If the old reliable has a weakness, it is on those pesky grounders—but still the field is awfully rough out there, you know, and the balls take bad bounds, you know, and there are other things one might say, you know—but, after all, the explanation is that Garrett's feet are not joined together at the heels, and that's where they get by.

An'begorra, my owld chump, Healey's out in the ri-ight gyarden, ghood luck to him. An'I want yez to be afther knowin' he's the bye with the bingle; but, me darlint, don't let the bhoys up in the shtands git yer goat, by bawlin' fer a hit, every time ye shteps to the plate. Just fergit they're there, and land on the owld pill like ye want to. The galoots on the benches must yell, ye know, and when yer turn cooms to bat, jist lambaste that ball like yez had a grudge agin' it. Yer all right, my lad, and they do say whin the backstop gits laid out, ye can turn the trick back of the plate as well as the next one. Ye are a broth of a bye, and ye'll make'em all wiggle to oust ye from the right section.

Well, there are others. Strong and Larmore shot into the game for a second or so, Saturday. Strong took care of the high ones, and planted a nice single where it did the most good; Larmore, didn't do much, but that boy has an eye for the ball, and it is well to give'em all a show when it is pretty sure the game is won. Bowen sort of pitched the last inning; guess he wasn't feeling very well; wonder if he woke up the other day when the dynamite shook the earth and it trembled. I'd like to stick a pin in him sometime just to see him jump; believe it would do him good. But Bowen will fool somebody yet with his twisters, and whether he moves or doesn't move, there's some steam behind the sphere when he hurls it, and ten strikeouts against Hopkins are not to be sneezed at.

Where's our first love, Long? That boy can catch, and don't you forget it. Pearson is all right, but let Long have his turn. He's throwing well, too, this year, and you can bet he'll mow some of those base stealers down. Bring him out and play him.

Lots of material this year—and in mentioning don't fail to say something about young Spedden—he's a comer at short; Woodland and Howard prospective slabmen; Wilkinson at first; Graves at third; Corddry at second; Harris behind the bat; Russell at second; Ford in the outfield, & c., & c.,—all good men.

There wasn't much to that P. & S. crowd; the pitcher Dunn, his work well (don't shoot!) but the rest were on the bum. They treated the crowd to some very clever "vode-veel" stunts however,—such as, some mat performance in front of the grand stand, foot-races around the cinder track, the most approved style of smoking a "cigaroot" while playing the left field, sending refined (?) messages to the boys in the stand by the tip of the nose, the thumb point, and the wiggle of their fingers—all of which might be good indications of future successful practitioners of medicine, but don't count for much in base ball and in other things we might mention.

Altogether the game on Saturday, while rather slow and listless, on account of the deliberateners of the doctors' pitcher, was rather an auspicious opening of the season on the home grounds, and it looks as if Coach Porter were going to turn out one of strongest teams that ever represented the college. Here's hoping he does.

Our hats off to Doc Jarman, of the Ohio State League force, as an umpire; what he didn't do wrong, he did mighty well. Now when Jarman is on the mound serving up twisters to the batsmen, its safe to say he knows when a ball, traveling in the glare of his own searchlights, crosses the plate; but when he's looking over the shoulder of another slab artist, he says he is not so sure he can see them so well. I heard someone else make such remark as that in the grand stand. But he dosen't pose as an umpire, and I reckon he can stand a little kiddin'—no harm done. Let everybody come out to the next game.

BETTER than SPANKING

Spanking will not cure children of wetting the bed, because it is not a habit but a dangerous disease. The C. H. Rowan Drug Co., Dept. 2523, Chicago, Ill., have discovered a strictly harmless remedy for this distressing disease and to make known its merits they will send a 50c package securely wrapped and prepaid Absolutely Free to any reader of the Transcript. This remedy also cures frequent desire to urinate and inability to control urine during the night or day in old or young. The C. H. Rowan Drug Co. is an Old Reliable House—write to them to-day for the free medicine. Cure the afflicted members of your family, then tell your neighbors and friends about this remedy.
