BASE BALL NOTES.

In a hotly contested game on the local diamond on Saturday afternoon, the Washington College nine went down to defeat before the Western Maryland College team, 4 to 3. The winning of the contest was directly due to Ward's timely hit and Bowen's error, but Washington's ambitions were cut short at the very last stage of the game when, after some hesitation, the umpire called Bowen out at the plate. The visitors put up a game which fell far below the Chestertonians expectations, but the locals experienced another off day, making the relative strength of the teams more even. The twirler'safor both aggregations lacked effectiveness and few players were retired by the strike out method. The fielding of the teams was loose and frequent errors were made by both sides. Western Maryland started the scoring in the first when Triesler trotted across the pan after Usilton's wild heave to third. Washington came back in a manner most encouraging when with a total of three hits to their credit during this period the first three men romped home. Although almost every man during seven innings was able to connect with the sphere they failed to make enough of them go for bingles to succeed in scoring. However, in the eighth period, following Myers reaching first on an error, Beall drove out a single, advancing him to second. Ward followed the example of his teammates by striking a hot one to the right garden. Bowen made a bad attempt at stopping the sphere and it rolled out to the fence. Ward followed with the fourth run, coming in on Numbers' bunt. Both teams then tightened up with the result that not a man reached first until the last half of the ninth, when Bowen was safe on an error and pilfered second. With two down Meekins drove out a hit over short. Bowen began to scurry home, reaching there after a long slide at about the same time as the ball. For a moment the future for the home team looked rosy, but Umpire James, put an end to the cheering by a jerk of his thumb over his shoulder, calling the runner out.
