PROFESSORS REFUSE TO TEACH:

Holmes, Civic Groups Hit Summer Program

ored teachers in this State."

To make himself clear, however, Dr. Holmes informed Dr. Kabat this week:

"My approval meant the approval of the intent of the University of Maryland to offer graduate work, and not my approval to the setting up of a segregated institution under the University of Maryland."

Takes Forthright Stand

Continuing he said:

"As I assume that you know, no colored person with the best interest of his race and his country at heart would approve of segregation in any form whatsoever.

"It is unnecessary for me to detail why we oppose this undemocratic and unchristian social system, except to say that everything, everywhere that I know anything about which is segregated, in the case of the colored people, is inferior to what is provided for the majority of the population.

"We are well aware that we cannot catch up through the use of inferior facilities."

Course are Not Equal

Referring again to the proposed summer school program, Dr. Holmes said, "in spite of all declarations to the contrary, there is and must be a difference between similar courses offered at College Park."

He said he could see no possibility of the same library facilities, in image and quality, being available to the students at Douglass High School that are available to the students at College Park.

Civic Groups Oppose Plan

Also registering strong objections to the segregated summer teachers' training setup, the NAACP and the Urban League issued statements calling it a "backward step."

Pointing to 13 years of successful experience in integrated education at the University of Maryland, the league termed the new courses "a backward step in the promotion of sound race relations and in direct conflict with the report of the President's Committee on Higher Education."

Would Condone Segregation

The NAACP said:

"Although it is quite obvious that such a program would be convenient for a number of persons desiring additional training in education, enrollment in a segregated program would be condoning unequal educational facilities which has been declared illegal by the U.S. Supreme Court.

"The curricula offered is by no means as extensive as that which the University of Maryland proper offers to white graduate students, and physical facilities and instructors, as near as can be determined, are by no means comparable to the regular university program.

"The NAACP, therefore, sincerely hopes that colored citizens will not be beguiled into compromising our equal educational facilities fight' by taking a limited opportunity merely because it is convenient."

Gov. and Mayor to Honor Dr. Holmes

so that the book can be completed. Another presentation which Dr. Holmes will accept on behalf of the college will be a painting of him by Mrs. James Carey.

This portrait, a gift of the board of trustees to the college, will be hung in Holmes Hall, the new $500,000 classroom building for which ground will be broke at Commencement Day, June 7.

Senator to Be Guest

Other city and State officials who will honor the educator at the affair which is to begin at 8 p.m. include:

U.S. Sen. Herbert R. O'Conor, former Governor of Maryland; Joseph R. Byrnes, president of the Maryland Senate; Judge Morris A. Soper of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and chairman of the Morgan College Board of Trustees.

Judge Levin C. Bailey of the First Judicial Circuit of Maryland and Josiah P. Henry Jr., also trustees; and Bishop Alexander P. Shaw, resident prelate, Methodist Church.

Program Announced

The program will open with an organ prelude by Mrs. Frances B. Hill of the Morgan music staff. Bishop Shaw will then give the invocation, followed by a selection from the college choir, directed by J. O. Mosely, entitled "In the Christ Came Walking," by Cain.

Dr. Allan will present Judge Soper, who will act as master of ceremonies. Greetings will then be extended by Senator O'Conor, Governor Lane, Mayor D'Alesandro and State Senator Byrnes.

A spiritual will follow by the choir, featuring an arrangement of "Balm in Gilead," by Dawson.

Judge Bailey will speak on behalf of the trustees; Dean George C. Grant, on behalf of the faculty; Mrs. Harris, president of the Student Council, on behalf of the student body; and Dr. George H. Middleton, on behalf of the alumni.

The choir will then sing Bach's "Sanctus" from "B Minor Mass."

Presentation to Be Made

Mrs. Bertha W. Proctor will speak as president of the Ladies Auxiliary; Elmer T. Hawkins, as president of the Maryland Educational Association; and William L. Fitzgerald, as a citizen.

Presentations will then be made to Dr. Holmes by Mr. Murphy and Mr. Henry. Dr. Holmes will make his response after the rendition of "The Gettysburg Address," a rhythmic choral setting, to Lincoln's immortal words, by Pease-Moseley.

Singing of the college's Alma Mater, and the benediction by the Rev. A. J. Payne, pastor of Ebenezer Baptist Church, will close the program.

Segregation Fight to Slow Draft Bill

during debate on the bill in committee, but after Defense Secretary Forrestal and Army Secretary Royall appeared against it, it was defeated by a 7 to 4 vote.

Both Forrestal and Royall were reported to have assured the committee that they had no intention of abandoning the policy of segregation in the Armed Forces.

Royall, a North Carolinian, was said to have gone so far as to promise that in the event he was ordered to end segregation in the Army he would resign before doing so.

Separation Too Costly

The defense administrators told the Senators that to set up an entirely separate universal military training program for the nation's youth, would present too many administrative difficulties.

Furthermore, the running of separate camps, with separate instructors, which the amendment would make mandatory, would mean too heavy a burden of cost and manpower at a time when the Armed Services are to be expanded by the stopgap draft, they pointed out.

Sen. Joseph H. Ball (Rep., Minn.), and other Republicans say they have the votes to defeat such an amendment; but they agree it may take a lot of time.

4 Harlemiters Arrested

NEW YORK (ANP)—Four persons were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct last Saturday night in a narrow way avertal a riot in Harlem when a mob launched an attack on a 116th St. store after reports had been circulated that police had beaten to death a woman patron.

At the height of the confusion, the window of the merchant's store was smashed and all reserve police were called into action but no one suffered any serious personal injury.

Got $500 Monthly, Redhead Insists

May 10 the wife and two other women had attacked her in a filling station and that the former kicked her and scratched her about the face with her finger-nails.

She said that the woman had approached her and began to abuse her for calling her husband on the phone, telling her that "now that my husband has reached a position where he can give me what I want, you want him."

Mrs. McKinson said she then told her that "your husband has given me a few things too," and was assaulted.

During her testimony, the wife stated that Mrs. McKinson had repeatedly called her home and asked for her husband and that she had only changed to meet Mrs. McKinson on May 10 when the alleged assault occurred.

Confer With Judge

At this point the redhaired Mrs. McKinson shrieked, "Oh what a liar you are!" Judge Morris Ploscowe then asked Mrs. McKinson's counsel whether she would be content with an award of damages in the case.

When he made ready to say yes, Mrs. McKinson demurred. The Judge then asked counsel for the two women to meet with him in his private quarters.

While they were in the Judge's chamber, Mrs. McKinson told reporters that the Court was seeking to protect the detective by preventing her from testifying of her relations with the police department.

A Handsome Six-Footer

She then disclosed that she came to the courtroom armed with letters and material to show relations between her and a handsome six-foot policeman.

Displaying two Valentines, which bore the captions, "To My Wife" and "To my Husband" she had been given to her by the policeman" and that over a period of years he had given her on an average of $500 a month.

She also told reporters that she and the policeman shared an apartment studio on 125th St., and that he had given her a fur coat and a radio.

When counsel for the two women came back out, Mrs. McKinson's attorney pleaded with her for a half hour to accept the damages offered and drop further action.

She finally yielded and was awarded $50, but outside the court she told reporters that she will file separate action against the policeman and made it plain that she was not concerned whether or not his position on the police force would be placed in jeopardy.

Shows Wound on Thigh

The attractive redhead then raised her dress and showed reporters a bullet wound on her thigh which she said she received in December, 1946, when she said a policeman shot her.

She produced the bullet which she stated was fired from his gun and also produced a newspaper clipping dated Dec. 28, which carried a news item of how she had been wounded by a bullet fired by an unknown person.

She said she is now prepared to prove who shot her. She said she had said at the time she was shot that she did not know who had fired the shot because she had wanted to protect the officer, but now she feels differently about the matter.

Mrs. McKinson dropped broad hints about the alleged corruption on the New York police force.

She said she thought a judge should be interested in knowing how any member of the force could give her $500 a month for a period of two years, support his wife and give both of them fur coats.

The policeman accompanied his wife at the hearing but did not make a statement.

Mrs. McKinson appeared at the trial with her small daughter. While waiting for her case to be called, she sat in the court room about five rows behind the man she accuses. At intervals the little girl would run up to where he was seated, look at him and run back to her mother. She repeated this action several times.

The courtroom was well covered by the daily press who expected that Mrs. McKinson would air her charges against him.

She appeared at the trial driving a red 1948 Packard Clipper with New Jersey tags and told reporters that she lives in Westfield, N.J., in a home which she said she bought with money received from her former lover.

Victim of Abuse Points Out Man in Ball Park

other persons who had been victimized similarly within the past two months.

One of these persons is a Social Security Board clerk, who was seized and brutally ravished last Friday, when only two doors from her home, while returning from work.

Hold Hospital Lineup

The matron, a resident of the McCobb Homes, was savagely mauled about the face by the attacker's fists and internally injured by the umbrella he snatched from her hand, that she was still confined to Provident Hospital.

Because of this fact, Wednesday, Lt. Harry Ernest, directing the inquiry, took four men, one at a time, from the hospital.

There in a lineup, the men were questioned and put through the routine of natural actions, while the hospitalized victim observed in an effort to identify her attacker. The matron pointed out Burroughs, detectives say.

Faces Trial In 4 Cases

Satisfied that they have at least four cases against Burroughs officers settled for a further hearing, Wednesday, pending the recovery of the victim in the hospital.

According to police, the tactics in each of the reported attacks were similar.

The intended victim, always a young woman, was generally seized from the rear, and under threat of harm by a sharp instrument, once said to be a broken bottle neck, forced to accompany the attacker to a dark alley.

There the victims were forced to strip nude and submit to the abuses, both orthodox and unnatural. It was said that the victims suffered bruises and one a beating when the attacker was not satisfied.

Robbed Abused Women

Before leaving his victims, police recounted, the suspect would snatch their jewelry, including wedding and engagement rings, earrings and wrist watches, several pieces of which have been recovered.

Chronologically, the four charges are listed below:

(1)—On April 24, shortly after 9 p.m., Victim "A" was in the vicinity of Biddle and Little Gaston Sts., when accosted. Her attacker forced her to accompany him to a nearby alley where in the dark he forced her to commit his maniacal desires.

A search of the records, the man forced the woman to go with him to a house in the 1000 block of Myrtle Ave. where he left her and, when there was no response, walked the two nearby Perkins Square.

Repeated Violation

They proceeded a block or two until another alley was reached where the attacker, with the complicity, police reported, before the victim, she managed to run away.

The young woman, it was said, was attempting a dash to her home to make a date for a future engagement with the attacker, with the true motive of setting a police trap for him.

Forced from Front Steps

(2)—Victim "B" was standing on the front steps of her home in the 500 block Orchard St., around 9:30 p.m., on May 6, when a strange man approached and asked if she was one by the name of "Joe."

The woman reported she had just denied knowing anyone by that name when the other flashed a knife and forced her to accompany him to an alley nearby.

There she was attacked and robbed of cash and jewelry valued at $70. It was bite of her jewelry that was recovered, police said on Thursday.

Selected Church for Act

(3)—Victim "C" was walking through the 400 block of Biddle St., shortly after 10 p.m. on May 14 when a stranger slipped up behind, pressed a knife against her throat and ordered, "Keep quiet and come with me."

He led her to the fire ruins of St. Mary PE Church on Orchard St. near Madison Ave., where the abuse was committed, reports reveal.

"Before leaving," the woman said, "he warned me against making any outcry for at least 15 minutes, then he jumped through an open window frame and disappeared."

Disperted Self 2 Hours

(4)—Victim "D" was the Social Security Board clerk who was seized last Friday night. The matron, 26, was forced to accompany her attacker to a vacant lot parked in the 500 block of Oxford St.

There she was compelled to strip and submit to his wishes over a two-hour period. In addition to being beaten, the matron was injured when a bottle was broken over her head.

Her jewelry, too, was taken by the fiend, before he escaped in the darkness. Police said that they were leaving no stone unturned in the investigation but it was actually a victim who outsleuthed the police.
