'War' Painting Series on Exhibit

Fourteen paintings comprising Jacob Lawrence's recent "War" series will go on exhibit at the Baltimore Museum of Art beginning today (Friday) and continuing until July 11.

The noted contemporary artist has painted the story of the colored American in pictorially eloquent sermons. Other topics which have concerned the 30-year old painter have been "Migration," "Harlem" and "John Brown." The new series bears a poignant and well-expressed message of universal interest.

The paintings are owned by the New York collector, Roy Neuberger, and is on special loan to the Baltimore Museum.

GATEWAY to GAYWAY

By GEORGE D. TYLER

"Little Miss Cornshucks," the sensational comic lassie, arrived in town a week ago to sort of adjust herself for tonite's (Friday) opening at the ASTORIA. The little miss, although new here, will be remembered by those who often trekked to D.C. for a nite's revelry. The Midtowners and Marylyn, a combo due to win acclaim in the very near future, are being held over. . . .

The gang at JONES'S continues to turn in admirable performances. The music by the Keynotes is on the beam and Harriet Jefferson, a comedy canary, has a sweet and easy-to-listen-to voice, plus the whamming of "Pennsylvania Avenue Blues" by Piney Brown.

Razz Johnson and Tom Marshall are doing bar chores at the FROLIC, where you can enjoy your meals in about the quietest atmosphere on the stroll, meanwhile enjoying television . . . The popularity of Mayme, barmaid at BERNIE'S, is due to her personality and the manner in which she crooses as she serves. . . . Not only are the drinks at the 1017 tops but the food is delectable, so go down here and latch on to one of those tender juicy steaks . . . A six-bit chicken is the rough part of the inducement being offered at the HIDEAWAY which is getting a new outer dress.

Comedy Revue Intact

The public demands that the current revusical at the COMEDY be continued, so there will be no immediate change. The standard revue, now in its third week, offers Rose Mitchell as emcee and vocalist, Georgianna Lee, plus Irene Johnson, Willie Jones and Johnny Osborne's ork.

Taps and Sweets, a nifty dance team, joined the La-Keets presentation at GAMBYS and so strengthened it that Terry Sanders plans to keep the unit intact.

Helen Cotton Clubb Brown quietly celebrated her natal . . . Too bad, Mr. So-and-So missed by the Cole gal is pledged to a pugilist, who slugs hard. Mister Royalnitre romp at the Elks Home Friday (tonite) to tighten the squeeze on 7-B.

Week Ends Only

For music and entertainment on week ends only the KNOTTY PINE presents the Four Aces, the JOLLY SPOT gives with the Three Flats and Bertha Jones and a whooping hot matinee every Monday . . . The ZANZIBAR still holds that hot combo, the RAVEDARS and songstational Nicky Robertson, Thurlow (Mgr.) Jackson, who heads the Jernt's softball team, says there are a few more open dates but some of the clubs are shying from this hard-hitting aggregation.

With the summer changeover we find the upset at the ORLEANS upon the shoulders of Orgie Kirkball and Bettye Logan, a duo of red-hots. Outgoing manager Jim Green and his trio back into the SPOT after a week-end absence . . . Wee Bea Booze holding her own at La AVENUE. Peaches Webb in the Geneva Howard role as combo bar maid and canary.

Quieter side recommendations, sure-fire comfort and service include the VILMA, the off-stroll OLDE MILL, the famous ALHAMBRA and ED'S.

For a few thrills and some real pianology one has only to visit the PRESTON, where Zerita is the feature. Cathy's summer attire had the wolves on the howl.

Trick Draft Clause Fails

By WOODY L. TAYLOR

WASHINGTON

The Republican majority in the Senate teamed with several Democrats favoring passage of draft legislation, to defeat the controversial Russell amendment that would give Congressional sanction to segregation in the Armed Forces by an overwhelming voice vote, at 12:30 p.m., on Wednesday.

Motion to table the Russell amendment was made by Senator Chan Gurney (Dem., S.D.) chairman, Senate Armed Services Committee, and was passed in five minutes after Senate Chairman Arthur Vandenburg (Rep., Mich.) ordered a roll call because there was not a quorum on the floor at the time.

Senator Vandenburg announced that the motion before the house was "to adopt or not to adopt" the Russell amendment, rather than a motion to table.

Booming "No" Heard

After a few weak "yeas" hardly more than those of Russell of Georgia, Eastland of Mississippi, who carried the ball on the arguments, and a few more, there was a booming "no" from the nearly full Republican side, mobilized for the vote, strengthened by the voices of Senators on the Democratic side.

The Russell amendment went the way of six introduced by Sen. William Langer (Rep., N.D.), that would have given just the opposite provisions and have eliminated segregation and discrimination in the Armed Services, which were voted down just the night before.

Poll Tax Ban Passed

Senator Langer was able to push through the seventh amendment which will make it unlawful to require a receipt of the Armed Services to pay any poll or other tax or make any other payment to any State in order to vote.

Liberal senators were saved the trouble of killing the Russell issue, as Southern Democrats who split with the amendments authors did the job successfully for them.

Sen. Pepper Leads Fight

Sen. Claude Pepper (Dem., Fla.) carried on a heated debate against Senators Russell and Eastland and evidently came out victorious.

Senator Pepper said that while he believes in the right of the State to pass segregation laws in schools and public conveyances, he doesn't see how a man can uphold his oath as a U.S. Senator and vote for legislation that will segregate or discriminate against any group because of race, creed or color.

Tydings Against Georgian

Sen. Millard E. Tydings (Dem., Md.) backing Senator Pepper, said the supporters of the Russell amendment were not in agreement on the bill's interpretation themselves.

He could not see how anybody who is supposed to believe in the principle of segregation as Senators Russell and Eastland are supposed to do, could conscientiously support or have the nerve to enforce such an amendment in an Armed Services Bill, he declared.

Senator Russell, asserted Senator Tydings, said the measure "does not actually segregate," and Eastland says, "it does."

Attacks Measure's Looseness

The law as written, said Senator Tydings, would permit a soldier to make any one of three requests:

He can write that he wants to serve in a colored or white group; he can write that he does not desire to serve in a unit composed of members of his race;

Or a white boy can write that he chooses to serve in a group with colored soldiers—and a colored youth could make the same stipulations regarding white units, etc.

Provisions Set Forth

The Russell amendment states: "Any person who registers as required by the terms of this act, and any person who hereafter voluntarily enlists in the Armed Forces of the U.S., shall be afforded an opportunity to state in writing over his signature whether he has a preference to serve only in a unit all of the enlisted personnel of which are of his own race.

"Such opportunity shall be afforded at the time of registration in the case of those registering under the requirements of this act, or upon enlistment in the case of those who hereafter enlist in the Armed Forces of the U.S.

"Any such person who expresses such preference shall thereafter be assigned only to units of a type consistent with preference."

All who voted against the bill did so for the same reason as they killed Senator Langer's amendment holding that such controversial issues have no place in a draft bill.
