UN to Hear Plea of West Africans

LAKE SUCCESS— The United Nations Trusteeship Council agreed last week to hear a spokesman for the 20,000 Bakweris of the British Cameroons, who appealed last March 12, by petition, for the return of 318 square miles of plantations.

The land, first taken from the natives by the Germans 50 years ago, was seized by the British as German property during World War II. The tribesmen, in their written petition, complained that the tribe's women found increasing difficulty in farming rocky mountain slopes and asserted malnutrition was rennifest.

The British Government, which opposed the written petition, notified the Council it had no objection to the Trusteeship Council hearing an oral presentation" on the tribesmen's claim for return of the plains farmlands, and the UN cabled the tribe that its delegate could be heard next month.

It is unlikely, however, that the tribesmen will be heard before the November session.

Army to Select Draftees Without Regard to Color

Will Freeze Enlistments If They Exceed 10%; Process Used During World War II Abolished

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — The Army will abandon the practice it followed under the Selective Service and Training Act of 1940 and under the new draft law, will not requisition them on the basis of color, Army Secretary Kenneth E. Royall disclosed at a press conference last Monday morning.

The discriminating practice of requisitioning men for induction began when Selective Service first became effective in 1940. At that time, the drafting of colored men was deferred because the Army had facilities for white men only.

When facilities became available, Selective Service issued its calls for inductees also on the basis of color. This strict pattern of segregation followed right up to the Battle of the Bulge when colored rifle companies were attached to white platoons and men, regardless of color, fought shoulder to shoulder.

No Ruling Ever Given

The U.S. Supreme Court was asked to rule on the issue in the case of Winifred Lynn, who had charged discrimination. However, because Lynn had submitted to induction on advice of counsel, the court held the question moot.

The Army, which plans to attach colored units to large white ones, does not anticipate that its new policy will result in colored men being inducted in a larger ratio thrn the colored population is to the general population of the United States. It will freeze colored enlistments if they exceed 10 per cent, it was learned.

The Army needs about 6,000 doctors and dentists. As a last resort, Mr. Royall said, the Army will call some of those to whom it gave medical education at the expense of the Army. Their services have never been utilized by the Army, in most case.
