EDITORS IN WILMINGTON.

The Chamber of Commerce Entertains the Pen Pushers in Royal Style, and We Get a New Vision of Wilmington.

Those Peninsula editors who heretofore have thought that 'Wilmington is a "suburb of Newark," Del., or that it is a "by product" of Kent and Sussex counties, have seen a new vision since their splendid entertainment by the Chamber of Commerce on Monday and Tuesday. They now look upon Wilmington as a progressive city of 95,000 hustling people, with a Chamber of Commerce that is full of hustle, and energy, and with a hotel whose grandeur and complete arrangements and fine management compare most favorably with the finest hotels in the country. They know also that Wilmington is a city of much wealth and great possibilities, situated as it is at the head of the Delmarvia peninsula, the greatest country in the United States, if not in the world. Some thirty or forty of the Peninsula editors accepted an invitation to be the guests of the Chamber of Commerce of the city, whose president is that broad-minded, whole-souled and thoroughly progresaive man, Josiah Marvel. Every detail of a most enjoyable occasion was minutely cared for, and even the wife of one of the editors, the only lady in the stag party, was accorded a most cordial reception and was the recipient of the most courteous attention and favors during her stay in the city. The banquet at night in the magnificent dining hall of Hotel Du Pont was simply charming. The menu was typical of the Peninsula good things and was served in beautiful style. It was here that the object of the gathering was disclosed in speeches by selected orators. Judge George Gray, the "Grand Old Man" of Delaware, was toastmaster. Beside him sat Judge Marvel, Gov. Miller, Delaware's new and promising Governor; Congre sman Brockson and Mayor Howell; and just above them was a red, white and blue shield upon which was inscribed the words "THE CHESTERTOWN TRANSCRIPT" and a tinge of pride came over us, when we were reminded that the TRANSCRIPT, whose shield was one of some thirty or forty other shields upon which were the names of the peninsula papers, had been given the place of honor. The speeches breathed a new era for Wilmington. They urged the broadening of the possibilities of a city whose facilities for doing business and getting the peninsula trade are so great, and for a more intimate business relation between the city and the great rural section just to the South. It was also the beginning of a new relation between the city and country editors that must mean the development of a community that has a great claim to be designated as the Garden of Eden. The city of Wilmington has been asleep. Trade which should have been directed to Wilmington has gone to Philadelphia, and we believe that the great business interests of the city representing as they do millions of wealth, together with a splendid corps of city papers, has at last awakened to the possibilities that lie before them and the present Chamber of Commerce means to go after and develop this business in such a way as that Wilmington will become one of the great marts of the country. The social features of the visit were as full of enjoyment as the banquet, and it was really in this way that the editors learned to know more about Wilmington and its possibilities than ever before. Each guest was entertained at the fine Hotel Du Pont, and given delightful accommodations. On Tuesday morning we were invited to a delightful automobile trip through the city and surrounding country. This trip revealed to us the fact that Wilmington is a city of well paved streets, fine homes, beautiful churches, and immense business interests, but the sad part of it all is that the people of the great country South of the city know scarcely anything about its advantages, because the business people wont tell. We saw the magnificent estates of the Du Ponts, the Bancrofts, the Bayards, the beautiful homes of Governor Miller, Judge Marvel, Col. Bell and other big men, and nestled among the trees were the powder mills, the factories of various descriptions, and before us stretched a magnificent water front that is a gold mine for Wilmington if properly developed. A visit to a number of the leading stores of the city convinced us of the city's ability to handle big business, but nobody down this way, and hundreds go from Kent to Wilmington every month, knows what the stores have got to sell, because their owners either wont or don't want to tell. Altogether Wilmington is a splendid city, full of opportunities, big with possibilities, all of which will mean much if properly developed. Under the reorganized Chamber of Commerce we look for big things. The TRANSCRIPT sends its greeting to the city of Wilmington, and all of its splendid citizens, who gave us such royal pleasure, and we believe that much good will result to the city from its contact with the Delmarvia editors, who organized an effective Press Association on Tuesday morning to work in harmony with the Chamber of Commerce. Those who attended from the Eastern Shore were Mr. Frank H. Ruth, whose pretty poem entitled "Delmarvia," occupied the outside page of the unique menu card; Mr. Clarence Vincent, of the Snow Hill Messenger; S. E. Shannahan, Easton Star Democrat; Evans Ewing, of Rising Sun; Frank E. Williams, Cecil Whig; C. O. Melvin, Pocomoke Enterprise; Mr. Walls, Centreville Observer; Fred. G. Usilton, Kent News, and Thomas D. Bowers, Chestertown TRANSCRIPT. The banquet menu was as follows:

Canape of Delaware City Caviar
Somerset Cantaloupe Frappe
Cream of Sussex Peas au Croutons
Appoquinimink Radishes
Delaware Bay Trout Saute Meuniere
Snow Hill Cucumber Salade
Mispillion Potatoes Point Neif
Brandywine Hundred Sweetbreads Braisee
Au Champignons Sorbet Yvette
Roast Belmont Farm Squab Chicken
Pocomoke Fried Hominy
Accomac Potatoes, Chateau
New Queen Anne Asparagus Vinaigrette
Fancy Ice cream a la Harrington, Petite Fours
Cafe Noir Clysmic Water Wilmington Cigars

Kent's Colored Poet.—William H. Jenkins, colored, son of Harrison Jenkins, one of the town's most respected and well educated colored people, has published a neat pamphlet of poems, which he is selling at 25 cents a copy. The TRANSCRIPT has heretofore mentioned the fact that Kent county has a second Paul Lawrence Dunbar, and these poems, entirely original, attest the fact that Jenkins not only possesses the art of poesy to a remarkable degree but that he has made excellent use of his fund of knowledge. Such traits are to be highly commended, whether they be found among the white or colored, and if the entire colored race were as well educated, respectable and thoroughly cognizant of their station in life as is Jenkins, the race as a whole would be more highly respected, more prosperous and more independent. We are glad to recognize the worth of this pamphlet of poems, and Jenkins will please accept our thanks for a complimentary copy. The work is dedicated to his mother.

Subscription to the Transcript $1.00 per annum.
