BISON BOXER WINS OLYMPIC TEAM BERTH

Lee Named Alternate on American Mitt Squad

Scores Upset Victory Over Coley Wallace, Then Bows in Finals at Boston Tryouts

WASHINGTON

Norvel Lee, husky Howard University freshman, gained an alternate berth on the United States Olympic boxing team after battling his way into the finals before dropping a disputed split decision to Jay Lambert, Utah State premedical student, Tuesday, in Boston.

The 22-year-old engineering student, the lone Washington survivor in the finals, thus became the first amateur boxer from the District to represent a United States Olympic team.

Two other District boxers, Bobby Goldstein and Henry LaMar, the latter a heavyweight, both white, Olympic tryouts but failed to advance.

Lee Upsets Wallace

To reach the finals, Lee pulled a major upset by outpointing a top favorite, Coley Wallace, national amateur heavyweight champion in a sharp punching encounter.

Lee served notice of his determination to make the Olympic squad by blasting out Charles Black of Houston, Tex., in two rounds in the quarter-finals.

Loses to Bascom

Another Howard University boxer, Harry Cochrane, representing the District, had little luck. Cochrane, replacing the ailing Shirney Pemberton, top-ranking Philadelphia boxer, scored a second-round knockout over Julius Guinyard of Orangeburg, S.C., in his first outing but was starched in one round by Westbury Bascom, 175-pounder, in his second match.

Lee's triumph in the Olympic tryouts is indicative of rapid improvement which saw him bounce back to avenge a defeat in the Golden Gloves tourney by Eddie Grant and a setback in the CIAA tourney at the hands of Louis (Bruiser) Duncan of Virginia Union. He trounced both in the Olympic regional tryouts.

Lee, Veteran Boxer

A veteran of three years of Army duty, several months of which were spent in the South Pacific with the 860th Engineers, Lee became interested in boxing while in the service.

He participated in three or four bouts and lost one while in the service, and was runner-up on the Army-Olympic team in a service tourney held in Hawaii in 1946.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lee of Eagle Rock, Va., Norvel attended Academy Hill High School, Fincastle, Va., where he played baseball and ran the half-mile and mile on the track team.

He was a student at Virginia State one semester, and later attended Tuskegee as an air cadet, but was washed out and sent to an engineer camp in Florida.

Lost 1 College Bout

He entered Howard University in September, 1947, and fought his first collegiate bout when he whipped Bill Gwaltney of Delaware State in a dual meet with Howard.

The winning streak was extended with wins over James Burton, Virginia State; Big Boy Brooks of Morgan, and a repeat performance of Gwaltney at the CIAA tourney before suffering his first and only collegiate defeat at the hands of Bruiser Duncan of Virginia Union.

Asked if he would turn professional after the Olympic tryouts before he left, Lee said: "It all depends now I do in the trials. —LEIGH.
